ROCK CREEK.

A Visitor Gives His Impressions of That Prosperous Village.

Five miles south from Pine City and two miles from the Chisago Co. line, is the romantically situated village of Rock Creek, which appears to the railway passenger as a beautiful hamlet supported by the industry of the woodmen, as piles of cordwood and stacks of railway ties are along both sides of the track, and circle round stoves and cottages. But back of Rock Creek village are cultivated farms, with dairy herds, and besides white adobe the modest gardens.

Rock Creek is a busy scene when the milk train goes and comes, with the silver-like cream jingling. But the shipping of cream and milk is likely soon to cease, as a creamery will be started. Within seven miles of Rock Creek are 900 cows chewing the cud of content, and the question now is as to co-operation, offering inducements to creamery men to come and abide. The latter proposition should be replied to by men who have experience and some capital.

Rock Creek vicinity raises Burbank potatoes, all the way from 200 to 500 bushels to the acre, and about all in the vegetable kingdom grows grandly. Two tons of tame hay to the acre is nothing unusual, and blue joint and clover grow without asking.

As to timber there is tamarack, oak, maple, basswood, elm and some pine; and as to water there are springs, creeks, and Rock Lake, two miles in length and a mile wide, rich with pike, pickerel, bass and other members of the finny tribe.

In December last Rock Creek shipped 240 car-loads of wood, besides lots of ties, and in summer fish go by express to soothe the epicurean palate, and there is game and game.

There are three sawmills tributary to Rock Creek, and it has two well-stocked stores, Presbyterian and Methodist churches, a good school, with an average attendance of sixty pupils, a veteran physician, Dr. John King, and one of the best railway agents along the line. Reference is made to J. P. Holmberg.

The postoffice receives and forwards two mails by rail daily, and the money order business exceeds $200 a month.

Rock Creek needs a blacksmith and wagon maker, and the railway company should put in a cattle chute right away. There should be no need of driving live stock in all kinds of weather to Pine City or Rush City. Within two and one half miles are several dairy farms, those of John Erickson, John Glader, J. N. Serrin, J. Z. Peterson, C. J. Hendrickson and J. Westman having snug homes and the making of splendid farms for stock, vegetables and cereals of every description.

With the foregoing advantages it is worthy of note that the big Edgerton estate, adjoining the village is being opened up to settlers after many years of seclusion, and the entire tract will be liberally cultivated.

Rock Creek receives about 100,000 pounds of merchandise a month, but spring will double that, as every industry is being increased, and numerous families are coming in.

The mercantile business of this section is as yet in its infancy, but yet the best of materials are bought, sold and appreciated by the stalwart boys and bonnie lassies.

J. P. Holmberg is a citizen who has lived here for seven years, and he has given the telegraphic wires of joys and sorrows for 2,406 days. However a fine farm.

Dr. John King came here to recuperate, knowing this is a grand country for health. The Doctor has practiced for over thirty years, and is a graduate of the Missouri Medical college. He is a grand old man and young in heart.

Young men in this region have old heads on young shoulders, and the firm of Gilman & Matson prove it. They have not only all manner of merchandise, but buy all the county raises. John Gilman was born in Sweden and came to Bush Point twenty years ago, and he has been a fisher ever since. He is postmaster, and his partner, A. M. Matson, a native son of this region, is another good business man, and the beauty of the firm is P. M. and A. M. all the time.

About eight years ago the Erickson Brothers, Andrew P. and Ole, came to Rock Creek from Chisago county. Thirty years ago they as youngsters, located in Chisago county and farmed, and logged and timbered until Rock Creek became their abiding place. They have a store well stocked, and the woods are echoing their industry, while the Erickson farm is a beauty.

Rock Creek is also reeking tables, and long may she be a Gibraltar to Protection. J. C.

MEADOW BANK.

TOWN OF ROCK CREEK, Feb. 24, '98.

Ed Bonn, Fritz Brandt, R. Bonn and M. S. Watt were at Pine City Tuesday, on business.

We have not heard who the new school clerk is to be, to fill the vacancy caused by the departure of P. W. Parson for the southern part of the state.

J. Foster and wife, and daughter Lillie, and Mrs. Watt and son Willie, were visiting Mr. Guy's family, down on the bluffs of the St. Croix river, the beginning of this week.

Rev. J. Parish, of Rush City, still continues the revival meetings at Rock Creek. Rev. Taylor, of Pine City, assisted several evenings. Fourteen were added to the church roll last Sunday.

The smiling face of Miss Emma Peterson was seen last week at the Bank. She had just returned from Princeton, where she had been on a visit with her sister. We are all glad to welcome her back, especially the young men.

HISTORICAL FOREGAMA.

Messrs. Bacon and Wicklund have purchased the camp buildings in the pine bunch, and are hauling them home.

Minnie Olson has been sick this week with severe toothache and other ailments, preventing her attending school.

The young people hereabouts are brewing up a surprise party on some talented musician in Brook Park, for next Saturday evening.

Our people are making good use of the improved condition of the sleighing, by doing all the work possible in the hauling line at their homes and to town. Mr. Thomas Glad is right to the front in hauling cordwood to town and lay to his home. And Herman Schultz in the same line is a stayer, be the weather fair or foul, he gets there just the same, and as for size of loads he sees all competitors, and goes them one better. While he makes no pretension on flush, all in the deal with him know he'll show straight, yet he always starts with a pair and draws to them for all they are worth and being a regular winner otherwise he fattens the pot. He never bluffs nor throws up his hand, but anyone wishing to see him can easily call him as he'll hold his pair in plain sight and show up straight, drop the pack, rake in the stakes, and it does beat all what hands he holds for every time he gets home he's got a full house.

Last Saturday Mr. Heglund Sr., of Brook Park, visited J. E. Norstrom, notwithstanding the driving snowstorm that raged. These venerables, as everybody knows, are veteran talkers, and the astuteness in which political economy of state and nation was discussed by them in its multitudinous shades and colors and its kaleidoscopic outlook for, and uncalled for, shifts and changes produced on the wonderful machines now in use all over the country. Had some of our know-it-all statesmen heard the old dads they would have turned more than green with envy. Farming, stockraising and building in the fullest sense, and most approved style was given due grave consideration. Last but not least, Theology was taken up and viewed from various standpoints and positions illustrative of the manner theologians make the same subject as widely different as the varied colors of the rainbow. All went as merrily as marriage bells, ending with mutual promises to call again, and to exchange books, papers etc. Mr. Heglund is canvassing for a school stationery supply firm, and had this line in view in calling on the director of district 22.

SOUTH AMERICAN gold mining companies last year took out $53,747,000 worth of gold, of which 90 per cent was obtained in the Witwatersrand district. The greater part of this amount was produced by a few companies which paid enormous dividends, ranging from 50 per cent, and in two instances 100 per cent of the capital.

A YELLOW light has been obtained with incandescence gas burners by a German inventor at Krefeld. He claims that the burners so that the gas is supplied at a pressure of three and a half atmospheres. A single jet of ordinary size then emits a light of 1,000 candle power, by which five feet may be read at a distance of 150 feet from the light.

M. BERLIER, the well known engineer, has laid before the government of Spain and France a project for the construction of a tunnel under the straits of Gibraltar. The execution of this plan would have immense economic consequences, so that its fate will be followed with interest. M. Berlier is the inventor of a new method of submarine mining.

A NEW civil code will go into effect in the German empire in 1900. Its provisions are so ample that the provisions are that any man who through addiction to drink, is unable to provide for himself or his family, and who imperils the safety of others, shall be excluded from the ordinary rights and privileges of citizenship.

PERHAPS the greatest waste of human life ever recorded was caused by the cutting of a canal in China. The work was begun in 1825, and though the canal was 23 miles long, 30 feet wide and 12 feet deep, and passed through forests and marshes, it was finished in six weeks from its beginning. No fewer than 20,000 men worked at it day and night and 7,000 died of fatigue.

TWELVE THOUSAND persons in St. Petersburg are to be thrown out of employment by the introduction of the state monopoly of the sale of spirituous liquors, and mindful of the helpless condition in which they live, many of them the government has been known that such as are by the change deprived of their means of livelihood, shall be sent back to their native places free of cost.

ALVIN ADAMS started a parcel express between Boston and New York on May 4, 1840. He carried a few packages entrusted to his care in a carpet bag and open for three days. His present traveling expenses. To-day his association has a capital of $19,000,000, employs 20,000 men, 3,000 horses, 2,000 wagons and carries more than 25,000 miles of railroad, while its system covers every state and almost every territory.

RUSSIA is hastening the building of the railroad between Mery and the military post of Kunkh, on the Afghan frontier, which will then be in direct communication with Tashan and European Russia. The line between the Murguzh Branch. It is 190 miles long, will cost 4,700,000 roubles, and will be ready within three years. The Samarkand-Andjan line, with branches to Tashkent and Marghalian, will be opened this year.

LAST year a man died at Birmingham, England, who had through life the satisfaction of knowing that his birthplace was of a unique character, inasmuch as he was born on the battlefield of Waterloo. His father was the descendant of a family of soldiers and his father, who was with the Ninety-seventh Cameron Highlanders, was killed in the memorable engagement of that important. The soldier's wife had followed her husband out, and thus it happened that the infant stranger made his appearance amid the din and roar of battle.

Mrs. AYER, the wealthy American who died in Paris recently, gave a famous dinner at the Savoy, London, about three years ago. At the principal table sat the hostess, with the Duc d'Orleans on one hand and the American minister, Mr. Bryant, on the other. There was a musical table, at which sat Miss Christian Nilsson, Miss Malin, Miss Alford, Sir Arthur Sullivan and other notable musicians, while other tables were devoted to the drama, literature, unmarried girls, etc. Each table was decorated with special flowers.

Some years ago Frank Chase, a mechanical engineer of Watertown, Massachusetts invented a machine which was a perfect imitator of a woman. A New England shoe manufacturing company purchased the invention, paying him $10,000 and agreed to give him $1,000 every year of his life provided he would do nothing but invent. He accepted the proposition. The object of the shoe manufacturer in buying Chase's time was to prevent him from inventing anything else which might be better than the one bought by them and which he might sell to a competing firm.

The young men of Atlanta are determined to reduce the reputation of the city on the outside world, and for that purpose have organized a committee to issue a list of $10 for every one in public. Another committee prohibits members from attending parties with any particular girl, and it is established that any man who has serious intentions in his mind must do so. The title of the chief officer, however, "muscle boxer," "measur" and "house." Another arrangement awards some who desire the opportunity to the last man who asserts the state of Israel.

THE NATIONAL COURT OF INQUIRY.

Searching Investigation of Cause of the Disaster to the War Ship Maine to Be Made.

STATEMENT FROM PRESIDENT M'KINLEY.

Secretary Long Denies Sensational Reports—Capt. Sigbee Inspects the Wreck—The Loss of Life—Havana Finds the Magazine Keys—Latest News From the Scene.

Washington, Feb. 18.—Shortly after midnight President McKinley decided to make the following statement regarding the Maine, which was given by the press. "Based upon information now in his possession, the president believes that the Maine was blown up as the result of an accident, and expects the court of inquiry will develop that fact. It is found that the disaster was not an accident, prompt and decisive steps will be taken in the premises. The finding of the naval court will develop the cause, and until that is found nothing will be done."

Next Searching Investigation. Admiral Sicard's board has ample authority to make the most searching investigation into the cause of the disaster. The Fern and Mangrove reports arrived at Havana Wednesday evening, are provided with diving apparatus, and as every warship's company includes at least several expert divers there will be no lack of men to make the necessary search. These men will be depended upon to report the exact facts.

Stories Are Denied.

Washington, Feb. 19.—Owing to the large number of rumors of a warlike tendency which, poured in upon the government. This class almost openly rejoices at the catastrophe.

Magnate Inset.
Key West, Fla., Feb. 21.—It is learned from what may be considered a semi-official source that the divers sent out on behalf of the United States to examine the wreck of the battle ship Maine have made a preliminary report of the result of their work. Incredibly as it may seem, it is stated that after a partial examination of the magazines of the Maine the divers report that the one in which the explosion is supposed to have occurred is intact. According to this information, the contents of the magazine are unharmed.

Latest About the Maine.
Chicago, Feb. 21.—From Sunday night's dispatches the following condemnation regarding the Maine disaster is made:

Spain has been officially notified that the United States will conduct the inquiry independently.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new torpedo boat.

Commander Barnett, of the navy, says after a scrutiny of the Maine wreck that he believes the ship was blown up from the outside.

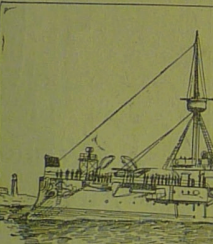

Lieut. Catlin throws light on the catastrophe. He says there were two distinct explosions.

Spanish. Americans in Havana are convinced that the Maine was blown up purposely by means of a submarine mine.

INVESTIGATION BEGUN.

Board of Inquiry Into the Maine Disaster Taking Testimony.

Havana, Feb. 22.—The board of inquiry was busy yesterday taking evidence of the Maine disaster. The evidence was kept secret and will be held so until it is all in, as the rules of the board require. Capt. Sigbee was the first witness. His testimony was confined to his own experience. In the afternoon members of the court made a personal investigation of an armorer of the Maine as shown above the water. Spain has no official part in the investigation, but its representatives were present by invitation. The divers were at work all day, but they are not permitted to tell outside the court what they have learned, nor to communicate with one another. They are under the immediate charge of Charles Morgan, commander of the cruiser New York.

MUST STOP THE WAR.

It Is Said President McKinley Will Notify Spain to This Effect.
Chicago, Feb. 22.—The Times Herald, special from Washington city, President McKinley will within 60 days present to Spain a demand that the war in Cuba be stopped. It will be couched in friendly but firm language, and may lead to a crisis, but probably not to hostilities. It will indicate that the peace of the United States is about exhausted, and will notify the Spaniards that this country is willing to aid in gaining peace.

Food For Flames.
Three Pittsburgh Business Houses Suffer From Fire—Loss, $200,000.
Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 19.—Three important business houses were visited by fire Friday, involving a loss of $200,000. The fire started on the ninth floor of the National Wall Paper building, No. 815 Penn avenue, and within 20 minutes after the alarm was blown control. In a very short time the flames were communicated to the H. Childs & Co.'s nine-story building at No. 810 Penn, and from there to the building of M. Oppenheimer & Co., at No. 811.

The Visions in Port.

New York, Feb. 21.—The Spanish cruiser Vizcaya, in command of Capt. Eulate, came through the Narrows yesterday afternoon and anchored off Rye Beach, N. J., where she is closely guarded by navy yard and patrol boats. Her ensign is at half mast in regret for the Maine disaster.

Wants to Be Governor.

Cartersville, Ga., Feb. 21.—Barv Sam Jones arrived at his home here Saturday from his western lecture tour and immediately announced himself an independent candidate for governor of Georgia at the election of his year, which he promises to announce soon.

The Incident Closed.

New Trial Refused.

Chicago, Feb. 21.—Adolph L. Lintner's application for a new trial was denied by Judge Gary and sentence of imprisonment for life for the murder of his wife was pronounced.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

A Daily Summary of the Work Being Done by Our Law-Makers in Washington.

RECORD OF EACH DAY BRIEFLY TOLD.

In the Senate Bills and Resolutions Are Discussed and Passed—The House Important Measures Are Under Consideration—Days Busy at the Capitol.

Washington, Feb. 16.—In the senate yesterday a bill was reported favorably providing for the arbitration of railroad strikes by a board of arbitration to be chosen by the strikers and the interstate commerce commission.

Washington, Feb. 17.—A discussion upon coast defenses was the interesting feature of the senate yesterday, many senators taking the ground that the present estimate for the war department instead of $40,000,000 should be $50,000,000. The entire time of the executive session was taken up by a speech opposing the ratification of the Hawaiian annexation treaty.

Washington, Feb. 18.—A resolution was introduced in the senate yesterday for immediate and thorough investigation into the cause of the disaster to the battle ship Maine in the harbor of Havana.

Washington, Feb. 19.—The Maine disaster and the Cuban question occupied the entire day in the senate yesterday. The resolution appropriating $200,000 for raising the battle ship Maine and saving what property could be saved was passed. Senator Mason (Ill.) bitterly attacked the policy of the administration in Cuban affairs and demanded that the committee on the subject be made permanent.

Washington, Feb. 22.—In the senate yesterday the joint resolution appropriating $200,000 for the recovery of the bodies of officers and men and property from the wrecked battle ship Maine was passed and the bill providing for the territory of Alaska was reported. Adjoined to Washington.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The time was devoted in the house yesterday to the consideration of bills and resolutions and 16 or more of less public importance were passed, among the bills being one making it lawful to transact through the mails prepaid postal cards with a one-cent stamp affixed.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The debate on the bankruptcy bill opened in the house yesterday, but it occupied little attention, the interest of the members being entirely absorbed by the disaster to the battle ship Maine, at the time in the navy committee, president John L. Forney, presented a memorial, which was unanimously adopted, expressing regret for the disaster to the battle ship Maine, and the names of those who lost their lives and sympathy with the injured.

Washington, Feb. 18.—In the house a joint resolution was introduced appropriating $150,000 to aid the families of those lost in the Maine disaster. The bankruptcy bill was discussed.

The Novelty Addressed the Surety in His Own Behalf.

Paris, Feb. 22.—M. Zola, during the trial Monday, addressed the jury. He said:

DEATH OF MISS WILLARD.

President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union Passes Away in New York.

SHE HAD BEEN ILL FOR A LONG TIME.

For Years Frances E. Willard Was the Recognized Leader in Temperance Work—Friends Surround Her Bedside at the Late-Recorded Sketch of Her Noble Career.

New York, Feb. 18.—Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, died shortly after midnight this morning at the Hotel Empire, this city. At the bedside of Miss Willard at the time of her death were her niece, Mrs. W. W. Baldwin; Mrs. L. M. Stevens, vice president of the W. C. T. U.; Miss Anna M. Gordon, Miss Willard's secretary, and Dr. Alfred R. Hill. Miss Willard had been ill for about three weeks. Dr. Hill made the following statement:

"I was called to attend to Miss Willard about a week ago, at the time she was suffering from a severe cold and bronchitis. She was 70 years of age and had a very feeble constitution. She was a very active woman and was devoted to her work. She was a very kind and generous woman, and she was a very noble and self-sacrificing woman. She was a very noble and self-sacrificing woman."

which attacked the stomach, liver, intestines, and later the kidneys. The disease progressed favorably, and in many respects she had greatly improved when the fatal issue came and overwhelmed her. There was no cancerous degeneration of any organ, as has been stated.

Brief Biographical Sketch.

"Frances Elizabeth Willard was born in Churchville, N. Y., September 25, 1825. She was graduated at Northwestern University in 1853, and was in 1855, became a member of the National Association of Christian Workers, and was principal of Geneva Wesleyan seminary in New York. She remained there two years, and then spent a year in France, where she was principal of the Geneva seminary, and was professor of domestic science at the university and dean of the Woman's college, where she developed her system of domestic science, which has been adopted by other educators. Miss Willard had her profession in 1874, in Kentucky, where she was the president of the National Association of the National Association of Women and also vice president of the same organization. An secretary she organized the home protection movement and sent an appeal from nearly 20,000 persons to the National Association of Women for the temperance cause for women."

"She was a very noble and self-sacrificing woman, and she was a very noble and self-sacrificing woman. She was a very noble and self-sacrificing woman, and she was a very noble and self-sacrificing woman. She was a very noble and self-sacrificing woman, and she was a very noble and self-sacrificing woman."

"I am not defending my liberty, gentlemen, I am defending my duty. I am not defending my life, gentlemen, I am defending my honor. I am not defending my reputation, gentlemen, I am defending my country. I am not defending my family, gentlemen, I am defending my country. I am not defending my friends, gentlemen, I am defending my country. I am not defending my country, gentlemen, I am defending my country."

Not since the days of '58, '59 and '60 has the American government found itself in the position we now occupy. The attitude of this government toward the Cuban outrages of the Spanish government has been drawing us on toward the present crisis, while the De Lome incident and the misfortune which befell the battleship Maine in the harbor of Havana coupled with other unpleasant diplomatic occurrences have placed the two nations in such a position toward each other that nothing but the most consummate diplomatic skill can avert bloodshed.

There can no longer be a doubt that war is seriously contemplated as among the possibilities by the authorities at Washington. The practical suspension of the friendly relations with Spain—that term being used in its diplomatic sense, for all actually friendly relations have been long since suspended—the busy preparations for the mobilization of troops and war vessels, the activity in and around the departments of war, state and navy—all these point to a possibly early opening of actual hostilities. War may be averted, and every one who knows what war is will fervently hope that some peaceful solution may be found. But in the light of recent developments the chances would seem to be in favor of a settlement by force, rather than by arbitration.

If either of two charges should be established there would appear to be no alternative except a hostile declaration. If Spain, or conspiring Spaniards, blew up an American vessel in a Spanish harbor there must be indemnity or war. If the accredited representative of Spain in this country conspired to secret information concerning a "rebellion and cost defenses, it seems can hardly be condoned.

In this emergency Americans have cause to congratulate themselves upon the wise, conservative and patient forbearance of President McKinley, who, in the face of a continuous and noisy storm of hostile talk has remained calm and collected, unmoved alike by the unreasoning denunciation of the jingoes and the crafty diplomacy of Spain's avowed and secret emissaries.

If war shall come, which God forbid, we may go into it with clear consciences and with conviction that we have done all that national honor permitted to prevent it.

REFORMATION IN TAXATION.
Single-taxers will doubtless be interested in the movement in New York city toward the adoption of a system of local option in taxation. The idea is, in brief, much the same as that prevailing in the State of Washington. A tax reform association has formulated a bill for the taxation of real estate alone for local purposes in any city that so desires. Furthermore, authority is given to exempt improvements, as well as personality, if it be so voted.

To levy taxes upon the unimproved value of real estate is the essential feature of the Henry George single-tax idea. Many of the most prominent business men in the city are favoring the idea. Doubtless there is much to be said in favor of putting all taxation upon a d. Such a plan would be less liable to fraud, and in its operation would be fairer to all parties than any system of general and universal taxation, however well administered. Statistics are easily obtainable to show what everybody knows, that the rich man's personal property escapes taxation, while the poor man's is taxed, but the most singular illustration of that fact is on in the reports which show that in the City of Chicago they have nothing like the watches and clocks they have in Wood county, West Virginia, as the assessors find in Chicago only $5,713 worth. In rural Wood county they have $29,985 worth of clocks and watches.

A glance at the books in any county in the state will show that it is the poor man who pays the taxes, while the rich by juggling their property escape their share of the burden.

That old chestnut about nominating Senator C. K. Davis as his own successor in the next republican state convention, will not go. It was worked by his enemies in 1892, and they nearly defeated him by using it. He is the choice of the state this year, and the people will see that he wins, but it will not be by allowing his opposition to run his campaign.—Le Sueur News.

The recent experience of Ohio should be a lesson to Minnesota republicans. The state convention will have an abundance of work if it attends properly to its own business; that of nominating a state ticket, and leaves the selection of a senator to the legislative districts through their representatives.—St. Paul Dispatch.

The Dispatch is all right, but there are a great many people in the state who are inclined to doubt the loyalty of the Dispatch to Senator Davis. It will do no harm for the people of the state to express themselves at the state convention, and then follow it up by electing to the legislature only men who are pledged to him and who can be trusted to carry out the pledges they have made.

Life is not so short but that there is always time enough for courtesy.—Emerson.

THE STORY

IF HE HAD KNOWN

BY HELEN RAY KENT.

THE young man stepped from the platform with a private and turned back, asking his valet for an overcoat, the wind was so chill. Then, with a few words, he dismissed the smart carriage that was waiting for him, and strode off after it up the country road, swinging his stick. The late autumn air was invigorating, and the young fellow threw back his shoulders and drew it in his long breaths as he used to before a football match in college. Not so long ago, that was, and the pleasure and excitement of the great world had not yet put their ineffable yet unmistakable mark upon his face and figure.

For half an hour he walked briskly along the path, thinking over the events of the past evening, and saying to himself that when his great home-party assembled on the morrow he would take the first opportunity offered to ask her to marry him, and they would keep their engagement a secret until the last evening, as a fitting climax to the fortnight's jollity. That she would accept him he had no doubt, although he was not a conceded fellow or over-certain of her love for him. True, last year they had been much thrown together, and she had shown in many ways—litttle, indefinable, but none the less convincing—that she liked him, and lay his heart and fortune at her feet she would accept them; not eagerly, not rapturously, not passionately, but with the exquisite grace and tact which characterized her every act. He even smiled as he remembered that the man had nicknamed her "the Gibson Girl," because of her lithe, trim, elegant, almost seemingly self-effacing creations. The night before they had been discussing the possibilities of "Soldiers of Fortune" as a play, and the conversation had led from that to a standing argument as to the attractiveness of the story's two heroines.

"I don't think Harding Davis knew what he was going to do when he began that story," she had insisted. "He meant to make Alice beautiful and lovely and sweet, and to make her as she is, for that matter. But Hope grew to be too much for him—emotional, sensitive people are always too much for those who are not—and he knew what to do with her; so Alice was sacrificed. Not that the sacrifice hurt in my estimation. She is my favorite still. But you men all the time, and she is a charming, naive child. I grant, but well, I can't just explain why or how, but she is a finer character in every way to me."

"That is because you are more like Alice," one of the men had said, teasingly; and then you men all the time, passed into bantering and compliments. But he remembered that the same fellow had said to him later over cigars: "I had her there, didn't I? There's a girl, all our society girls are 'Alices.' Nice, sweet, refined thoroughbreds, but with blue, or at the most pale pink, blood in them. No one's passionate interests in them. It isn't good form, you know. Hearts, emotions, impulses, brains, everything regulated by behavior. Perhaps a good thing, but on the whole, I'd rather be Clay and have Hope than the other, wouldn't you? It's all very well as long as things all go smooth, but in a crisis—or anything, you know, came into your life, wouldn't you rather have a girl like Hope to go to with it, than the other?"

The young millionaire poked a dead leaf out of his path energetically as he recalled that he had answered: "But the trouble is to find it. Hope, we don't know and we don't know where to find them?" And his friend replied, lightly: "Oh, there must be plenty in the world, if we only knew where to look."

"If the young man smiled as he thought of the three years of travel ended a few months ago. Girls, the girls he would know, were much the same the world over. And the one he had determined to marry was exceptionally attractive to him and to society.

"To society! Aye, there was the rub. Did he want a charming chaineuse, a beauty to sit at the head of his table and dispense favors with a boundless grace? A woman to admire; to be fond of in the world's way, the social world all about him? He would be contented indeed to marry a fellow if he could win all this to add to the fortune he had inherited.

"Or did he want a very different wife, one who would grow out of him all the intensity of a young girl's enthusiastic love for her first sweetheart? One who would be radiant in his joy, and full of sympathetic grief in his sorrows? One he could seize and crush in his heart in passionate affection, who would run to meet his footstep with an eager, joy turning frown, and watch him depart with a suspicion of tears about the eyes? If he could find such a one."

Suddenly his reverie was arrested by the sound of a heavy wagon rumbling upon the frozen ground, and he realized that he was passing through the little settlement of people who lived outside the grounds of the estate and were all employed about it in various ways. The houses were nearly all new, and built with an eye to beauty as well as to comfort. He felt a thrill of pardonable pride as he looked at the pretty little village nestling on the broad river bank and belonging to his domain. Surely he had been liberal in all matters pertaining to the people's comfort.

"Then he noticed that the wagon had stopped before one of the cottages, and the men were lifting out a coffin and carrying it into the yard. As he passed the gate he noticed a bit of crate splintering from the door-knob, and the splinter gave him an odd shiver. He had never forgotten the morning he reached New York after his mother's death. He had seen a same hideous scene as he ran up the steps, beaten in his race by the one great power who is no respecter of persons.

"Remembering it now, I wonder who lives there? I must ask Hawkins. I can't remember," he thought, as he came to the great gate of the park.

"May half way up the long avenue, shaded by noble trees now stripped of their autumn foliage, he met the agent walking out to meet him.

"What's that, sir? A coffin, or well, sir," said the man, after first greetings had been exchanged. "It's been a long time since you were here, sir. Yes, ever-long since you were here, sir. I'm sure you'll find things all right about the place, sir. We try to keep it so you could come any time without our home. I'd sort of get it when you're here. When do the rest of them come, sir?"

"Tomorrow," answered the young man, feeling his heart beat more quickly as the stately mansion came into view far down the avenue.

"By the way, Hawkins, I saw a coffin going into one of the houses," I came through the settlement. Who's dead? I couldn't remember the living in that house."

"Oh, sir, it's Miss Dean," began the man, with a shade of embarrassment in his manner. "You know I wrote you that John Dean died over a year ago—last March, or thereabouts, when you was in Europe? Well, of course you don't know, sir, but most everything has died—his man, his wife, but meant a good deal to them—went in the bank failure two years ago, I think that was the beginning of the end, sir. He never seemed to have any courage after that—when you were here, sir, when you were here, sir. When do the rest of them come, sir?"

"I don't know," answered the young man, feeling his heart beat more quickly as the stately mansion came into view far down the avenue.

"By the way, Hawkins, I saw a coffin going into one of the houses," I came through the settlement. Who's dead? I couldn't remember the living in that house."

other. "But I didn't know anything about it myself until I met them walking through the greenhouses early in the morning. You know you said anyone could see them, sir. They didn't know I was there, or see me coming, and although they were waiting for me to see them, I could tell that they understood each other. I was glad of it in first for I thought she would have an easier time, and she was so refined and well educated. I knew she would make a good wife for anyone—anyone, sir."

"But in the fall, when she went back to New York and used to come up for Sundays, I knew something was wrong, she used to look so white and miserable. It made my heart ache for her. The story soon got about that, although he admired Mabel and was in love with her, he was poor, and had told her that marriage with a poor girl would ruin his career. If it had been me, that would have made me hate him; but women aren't like men, and though she tried to get over it, I guess she couldn't help loving him in spite of everything."

"All the time she had to keep on working for her, she was feeble and busy, and it took a deal of money for her, let alone the house. The night before Christmas—last Christmas—I went over to the store to bring some things home. I'd sort of get it when you're here. When do the rest of them come, sir?"

Very Painful

Could Not Move Without Great Suffering—Hood's Cured.

"My shoulders and arms were very painful with rheumatism, so that I could hardly move. After taking a few bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, the pain was relieved and I was able to move without suffering."
