The couple is well known and the Protesters joins in wishing them a long and happy journey through life.

Several of our vine waxes have been made up in boxes, each containing a pair of wax tapers, and a pair of candle holders. Little did we know that before the month of August we would be sending out boxes of these wax tapers. Many were the lives that were lost that night. Never forget it.

Lost are the boys on board that ship, which ran into the rocks. Free from the care and look of life, in their watery graves. Never will we see their faces more, but we will be most in the better land. We are sure we are not lost. Cheerful and gay was the happy crew. Little did they think when they left their homes. They never would meet again. Still we will think of the ones we knew, For their memory keep. In the storeroom they lay so still, sad and silent, and we are watching tonight, But they'll watch in vain, Waiting to hear the footsteps dear, That never will come again.

ALL the morning people were bustling about the house, this way and that, 'up to the eyes' in their work.

The baby sat motionless, gazing cowlike with his eyes. He did not even say "Goo-goo!"

"Did you see that?" said Mrs. Jameson, placing casually toward him.

"Yes, I'm thinking of something—not even eating, but looking at me from the sentry, bearing with him a steamy atmosphere and an unwholesome odor of soap."

"Did you see that?" said Mrs. Jameson, placing casually toward him.
