ove the Constitution as much as he did, or words to that effect.

Although the question had already been decided in the negative by President McKinley and his advisers, making legislation upon it unnecessary, the Foraker amendment to the army bill, declaring that no property franchises in Cuba shall be granted by this government during its military occupancy, is warmly welcomed by the officials, because it will put a stop to applications for such franchises.

The Nicaragua Canal amendment to the River and Harbor bill, as finally agreed upon, authorizes the President to appoint a Commission of engineers to investigate the Nicaragua and Panama Canal routes, and report to him in time for him to report to the next Congress, and appropriate $1,000,000 to pay expenses.

The House succeeded in compelling the Senate to agree to the number of new warships authorized by the original House Naval bill, but the limitation of the cost of armor to $300 a ton, in the bill as finally agreed to, makes it impossible to make any contract for constructing the battleships provided for, without further legislation, because the bill provides that no contracts shall be given for the construction of the ships until contracts for the armor have been made, and no contracts for armor can be made at that price. But we're very long says he can and will go right ahead with the cruisers provided for, as the armor they require does not come under the prohibitory clause of the bill.

Nothing but good words are heard of the appointment of ex-Gov. Merriman of Minn., to be Senator from the States, although his nomination did not reach the Senate until a few minutes before final adjournment; it was promptly and unanimously confirmed. His business career leaves no doubt of his making the confidence reposed in him by Congress and by the people.

The appropriations made by the Congress just closed were large in the aggregate, but if any man can point out any particular appropriation that was not needed, he has not yet done so. A large proportion of the total was for the war to meet expenses consequent thereon. For several years the condition of the Treasury, owing to four years of democratic hard times, made it necessary to skip the appropriations for public buildings, many of which were badly needed, as we have had provided for as well as important River and Harbor improvements. The Republican party has always believed in liberality.

Miss Amanda Wicklund returned home from St. Paul Saturday for a short visit with her parents.

H. Anderson and Fred Norstrom are at home, after working all winter at Stark's camp on Deer River.

Mrs. Beems and sons arrived at this place from South Dakota, last week. They have purchased two-hundred acres of land, and have a lot of horses and cattle. We wish them success.

Mr. Mrs. Holstrom gave a dancing party at their home Saturday evening. After dancing awhile a sumptuous lunch was served, when it was again resume and continued until the " wee sma hours," when all departed for their homes having enjoyed a very delightful evening.

CHAMBERLAIN COUGH REMEDY.

This remedy is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, and influenza. It is becoming famous for its cure of these ills over a large part of the civilized world. The most flattering testimonial have been received, giving accounts of its great powers of destroying and removing the effects of the disease.

Representative Bailey, after being defeated in their refusal to follow his lead in support of a motion to take up the resolution drafted by the state of Gen. Wheeler and the other members of the House, who voted down the bill, had the nerve to get up and announce that he would no longer be the democratic leader in the House, because those of them who did not vote with him did not fail to effect a speedy cure, and he said they had found that there was not the least difficulty in giving it even to babies, as it contains nothing injurious.

Wanted—A few cords of wood on subscription—at this office.

STATE FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

A Meeting of Unusual Importance to Every Farmer In Pine County.

The State Farmers' Institute will be held in Court House hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 21 and 22, 1899, session to commence at 10 o'clock a.m. and 2 p.m. of each day. The best of instructors have been secured in the different branches—farm work, breeding and care of stock, dairying, horticulture, etc.

Farmers' Institute work in this state has become a permanent institution, and the instructions the farmers have received from the previous meetings have resulted in a vast amount of good to the community at large. Every farmer in the county should try and attend this institute as they will receive pointers that will help them in their work.

This is state work, and is consequently free. No charge for anything, and no collections; and besides, all those who attend the meeting in the forenoon of the first day will receive a very valuable book free of charge. The book contains over 350 pages, and is estimated to be worth from $5.00 to $25.00. The book is made by practical workers, and can be relied upon with confidence.

In connection with the institute work there will be held in the afternoon of each day, at Pioneer house, a cooking school which is a special feature of the Institute this year. The instructions will be given free and by an experienced teacher. This cooking school is for the benefit of the farm's wives and daughters, so on the above days bring your whole family to the institute as you can all receive valuable instruction, come not only yours, but see to it that your neighbors know about it. Noteth yours nor your neighbor can afford to miss this institute.

The book will only be given on the forenoon of the first day, so if you want one be sure and beat the court house hall before 12 o'clock on March 21st, as after that time you will be unable to get one, as they are not sold in book stores.

Remember the dates, Tuesday and Wednesday, March 21st and 22nd, 1899. For further information call on or address R. B. Griggs, president of Pine county association, or Robt. Wilcox, secretary.

A Valuable Reference Work.

The Year Book and Almanac issued by the Globe Company, of St. Paul, is the best work of the kind which has come to our notice. Complete in every particular, it combines history and facts, statistics and general information, properly classified and indexed in a manner which renders it most valuable. The statistics are most complete and admirably arranged for intelligent readers. Sixty pages of this book which this word full book contains are devoted to Minnesota, and the political information is the most comprehensive and valuable ever published in the state. We bespeak for this work the consideration of every intelligent person in the state, and we can say without hesitating that it is valuable alike to merchant, mechanic, sportsman or politician.

The price of the book is 25 cents, mailed anywhere, and, considering the amount of information it contains, it is worth fully three times that amount.

The creamery business at the State Farmer's Institute will be represented by those who have had years of experience, and will help those interested.

I have been afflicted with rheumatism for fourteen years, and nothing seemed to give any relief. I was able to be around all the time, but constantly suffering. I am happy to say that it has not returned.—JOHN ENGAN, Germantown, Cal. Forsale, Pine City, Minn.

Wilcox, recording secretary; Mrs. F. T. Wilcox, treasurer. The ladies' club is doing a good work in a social and literary way, and all of the ladies of the village should seek admission.

Thos. Ling met with a very serious accident on Monday morning at Rath's saw mill. He was putting on his belt, when his mitton got caught between the belt and pulley driving his hand, which went around the pulley, injuring the back of the hand quite badly. But Tom considers himself in luck that it is no worse than it is.

Rev. E. Edwards, pastor of the English Baptist church at Mineralville, Pa., when suffering with rheumatism, was advised to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. He says: "A few applications of this liniment proved of great service to me. It subdued the inflammation and relieved the pain. Should an sufferer profit by giving Pain Balm a trial it will please me." For sale by J. Y. Breckenridge, the druggist, Pine City, Minn.

On Friday evening the fourth and last lecture of the course given by the Ladies' Reading Club will be given by Dean Pattee, of the state university. The subject will be "Vesuvius and its Buried Cities." The Dean is a very bright talker, and his subjects one of the best he has, so our citizens should all turn out and hear this great lecturer. J. Adam Bede will also deliver a lecture about the 30th of this month, but it has not been decided yet whether it will be included in the course or charged extra for. No matter which way it is, the Pioneer speaks for the ladies a crowded house for our fellow-townsman J. Adam whenever he appears.

Sheriff Hawley took one August Asa from the Fergus Falls ligatured asylum on Saturday last, he having been affibited inmate by doctors Barnum and Stephan at the Private office on Friday last. It will be remembered that some four or five weeks ago this man was found near Barom in a "frosh" condition, his hands, feet and face being badly frowed. He was taken to Hinckley, and Dr. Stephan summoned, who has been treating him ever since, hoping that when his frozen members should his mind would be more settled, but instead he gradually grew worse and was taken to the asylum at the mentioned time. He could not tell where he lived, or anything about any relatives. He gave as his name the one stated above.

The Woman's Reading Club will meet next Monday evening with Mrs. F. T. Wilcox.

Sale of the Orrville Stock of Goods.

As advertised for the past three weeks in this paper, the stock of clothing and pictures recently owned by N. A. Orrell, which he sold to C. N. Carson, of Littlefield last fall, and who was succeeded in his stock and possessions, is now owned by Kettig & Johnson, of St. Paul, who sold it to Mr. H. L. Brooks, who was clearing for Mr. Critte den and also for Mr. Carson, has had charge of the stock and stores. On Monday afternoon the stock was $34 to the Rite City Mercantile Co. for forty-eight dollars. They will move the stock to Rush City as soon as the sale is completed by the referee in bankruptcy. Jim Hurley of this place bought the stock fixtures for the sum of thirty-five dollars, which was the best bargain of the lot. Thus Pine City's clothing stores is an era, now there is a good chance for some one to come in here with a first class clothing store which will be a paying investment for the right party. Mr. Carson told a reporter of this paper that if he had not been closed up he knew that he could have done a good business in this place. With the selling of the stock and fixtures Fred Brooks is out of a job in this place, but we are pleased to inform our readers that the prospects of his working for Kellogg & Johnson, of St. Paul, are very favorable, as he told him on Monday that as soon as we got through with the Rush City Mercantile Co. to come down to St. Paul as they had a place waiting for him. Fred's many friends are sorry to have him go, but are glad to know that he has secured a position with a good firm.

What might have proven a very serious accident occurred at the residence of J. Adam Bede on Tuesday afternoon at about 5 o'clock. At the above mentioned time the little children went up stairs to play after coming home from school. Russell, a boy of about 14 years of age, jumped up onto a trunk behind which was a twenty-two calibre rifle which was supposed to be empty, but which in some unaccountable manner fell and was discharged, the charge going within a few inches of Mr. Bede's little babe of about three years of age, jumped up onto a trunk behind which was a twenty-two calibre rifle which was supposed to be empty, but which in some unaccountable manner fell and was discharged, the charge going within a few inches of Mr. Bede's little babe of about three years of age. It was a very close call for the little one, who was very nearly scared to death, as was also the whole family.

Jam's Mulvey was up from Stillwater on Wednesday, and while here made arrangements with A. F. Brackett to drive piles on the river where they were taken out by the high water last spring. As the piling is now they would not hold the logs coming down this spring. The amount of logs that are expected to go by here this season, will without doubt give the Bear's Ear boom crew a long summers job.

Burger Bros', saw mill shut down for a couple of days the middle of the week to repair the friction pulleys. They are doing a good season's work, and now have logs enough to keep them running until about the middle of June, but if the weather will last the rest of this month they will be enabled to run the greater part of the summer.

R. P. Allen, at the Pine City Roller Mills, has secured as miller E. H. Staples, who is a first-class miller, and has worked in the mills at Wess. Superior, Fergus Falls and other places in the state. The mill is first class in every particular, fitted with the best of machinery, and with Mr. Staples as miller should turn out as good flour as can be made in the state.

Services as usual Sunday in the M. E. church. Morning at 10:30, subject "Excuses for not Unititing With the Church." Evening at 6:45, young people's meeting, preaching at 7:30, subject "The Atonement." Everybody Invited.

That valuable book to be given away at the close of the first forenoon session, contains important information that the farmer can use to advantage everyday in the year.

Notice to Dairymen Tributary to Pine City Creamery.

Yours Respectfully,

S. S. SIMPSON.

The New Cure for Kidney, Bladder and Uterine Ailments.

Almost everybody who reads the newspaper is sure to know of Swamp-Root, the great Kidney remedy.

It is the greatest medical triumph of the century. It was discovered after years of scientific research by the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, Dr. Kilmer, and has truly wonderful powers in curing kidney, liver, bladder and uretic diseases.

Kidney trouble is responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, and is so direful that thousands have it without knowing it.

Thousands over their health and even life to Swamp-Root, and thousands more who take care of themselves beyond help, can be made well by this great remedy.

Swamp-Root has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, and in business too, that it is safe to say that, in each case, it is successful in every case, that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may send a sample bottle at once to the free home service, a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and containing some of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact, to this remarkable remedy.

Write to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N.Y.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent-and-one-dollar size bottles at drug-stores.

JIMMY GOT HIS RAVE.

His Troubles with a Lady Customer Caused His Butcher Boss to Come Down.

"We got to have my pay raised," announced the thin, sickly-looking boy gently but decisively. "It's got to be raised."

The butcher smiled indulgently and replied: "Well, Jimmie, of course I'll always be willing to do the right thing, but times in this business are hard, and we're not making much."

"Small, still, if I can do anything."

"It's over that Mrs. Justmariner," complained the boy. "She's been a pest all right, but everybody else but her says, I told you how she wanted the sliced meat extra fat, and she only wants a little," he said.

"Yes."

"And that order of 'one dozen lamb chops,' they had, and the pound of boneless sausages."

"Well, to-day happened the worst yet. She's now a Mexican lady stopping with her, and she's the other woman that I had been talking about. She's got us a Mexican dinner, for to-day she's eaten in high and mighty places, and the same day I may get up an order for Mrs. Spangler's Mexican cut thick and with the bones broken. And let me tell you, she's a whole different animal. She's fat, she's fat, and ready for the oven. Pick up the plumpest tom-tom we have in the yard and have them killed and sent to her."

"Say, won't that Mexican lady have a hot time? I can go up there and explain matters up to her."

"I guess I can give you 50 cents more a week," said the butcher boy—the Chicago Lamb-Ocean.

Governor McCord

Recommends Pe-ru-na to All Carr-tar Victims.

Hon. Myron H. McCord, Ex-Governor of New Mexico, in a letter to Dr. Hartman, from Washington, D.C., says:

Gentlemen—In the suggestion of a friend, I have written to Dr. Hartman, a cataract and after using one bottle Pe-ru-na to feel better in every way. It helped me in many respects. I was troubled with colds, coughs, sore throat, etc., but as soon as I had taken your medicine I began to improve and soon got well. I take pleasure in recommending your great remedy to those who are afflicted with cataract.—M. H. McCord.

Thousands of cases of chronic cataract have been cured by Pe-ru-na during the past winter. In spite of changeable weather, in and out of doors, back-breaking cold, and confinement to ill-ventilated rooms, the great cataract remedy—Pe-ru-na—has effected these cures. But now spring is here. The days are longer, the sun warmer, and the blizzard is gone for another year. This presents a most favorable opportunity for the permanent cure of chronic cataract, especially old-stubborn cataracts. Now is the time to begin treatment. Other things being equal, one month's treatment in the spring is worth two months' treatment during the inclement weather of winter. Insist upon having Pe-ru-na. There are no successful substitutes for this remedy. Send to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for a free cataract book.

THE OLD ROCKING CHAIR.

It stands ever there in the corner, its worn and cracked back and brown leather apparel silent its fringes hang down. What we were but children it saw its best days: a face that was rosy and fair Reposed after play in the old rocking chair.

How often in it in the winter nights cold The voices of the fairies by nurses were told! How often we layed with kiss-bedded hair.

To lullaby strains that we hear even now Ay, the old chair with its cushion and shade.

I hear the sweet sounds that the old rocking chair makes when it creaks at the noisy household, when the children run about.

She rests where the roses their love slight keep.

Who fondly and tenderly rocked me to sleep?

But still, when I look in the corner, I trace Within the old rocker a well-chambered face.

Years that have vanished no more to come.

But deeper the joys of a childhood mourn, And thus doth the past with a halo bestow.

Recrown with its beauty the old rocking chair.

So long to rock now fast and now slow.

As though it minded and evening it moves to and fro.

No more from its depths where a weeping monarch strong.

With an angelic touch comes a lullaby.

The covered with dust, but the dust can not hide.

The hands that will ever abide.

Upon the old arms so restful and fair.

When memory turns to the old rocking chair.

Twice Saved

MISS DORIS and her groom cantered together across the downs that swept in broad folds of many-tinted greens toward the sea, flashing and sparkling in golden sun gleams on the horizon.

The 17-year-old only child of parents married late in life, after many years with settled ways and habits according ill with the latter day intrusion of restless youth—their growing up now, though they doubtless loved but little apprehended.

"She was and is sweet, happy in her recent emancipation from school restraints and trammels, content with the simple joys of life, the joys of a youthful mind attuned to all manner fancies in the milder girth of 'university brotherhood,' equality, the leveling of class distinctions as practised by her best bred schoolmates, the daughter of the house, the girl of the house."

He who rode beside her at her own request, a few years older only, good-looking, manly, with that air of clear-cut cleanliness common to grounds like his, the stables, the kennels and ready for the oven. Pick up the plumpest tom-tom we have in the yard and have them killed and sent to her.

"Say, won't that Mexican lady have a hot time? I can go up there and explain matters up to her."

"I guess I can give you 50 cents more a week," said the butcher boy—the Chicago Lamb-Ocean.

At first the groom had responded shyly in monosyllables: "Yes, miss," "No, miss," as the case required, in a manner little satisfactory to enthusiastic maiden attempts at surmounting fear of the unknown. The girl had tactfully described a similar incident as happening at a like entertainment in his own village home across the country, and the ice was broken, the friend—a common joke established between the girl and her little more than boy servant.

"Well, miss, if you would be so good, really, you could do me a very great kindness this very day. You see, I'm married, but we've kept it dark, my shop and all the time I've been here, as though nothing had happened."

What would he? A kiss of her lips perhaps, or—her foolish girl's heart beat with great throbs—if he dared more, spoke of love, would she have him?

He too, twisted his hands, cleared his throat, then spoke at last.

Conductors Dropped.

A sudden and unexpected change in conductors on the St. Paul & Duluth railroad was made last week, when J. W. Daly, T. C. Leonard, J. McManus, John Buckley, Fred G. Horsey, George Richardson and Geo. Bardsey, the popular conductors were laid off as fast as they came in. We understand there was no reason given them only that there would be other men to take the runs. It was quite a surprise to the citizens of this place, as some of the gentlemen laid off have been on the road for quite a number of years and have made many warm friends in this place by their kind and obliging manners.

SULTAN FLARED THE GUN.

The Turkish sultan was greatly impressed by the Mexican Army.

Hiram Maxim, the inventor of the Maxim gun, the continuing story of an exciting life, culminating in his key. This shows how the sultan of the wonderful story went to the fire arm and was greatly impressed after seeing the small weapon deliver a dozen or more rounds without being touched by human hands save the full pull of the trigger.

"Wonderful! wonderful!" he exclaimed in amazement. "I must have some of those arms."

Some time later Mr. Maxim received an order for an especially pattern of small field arms. Hiram's gun was fully chased in gold and of marvellous workmanship. What the sultan could want of such expensive outside trappings he did not know, but they were duly sent to Turkey, where they now rest in the royal gun room.

"All the shots," said the sultan, "are reported to have had such effect why they were not used in the field. They are better where they are."

It was afterward said that the sultan, having a superstitious regard for their shooting power, thought they were better where they could be seen instead of hidden, and accordingly used them times of peace. But now, having gotten over somewhat his fear of their "barbarish devilishness," he is said to have arrived at that point where they may find their way extensively into the Turkish army when the next trouble comes.

Show Burlesques.

The burn, or snow hurricane, of the Prairie is a meteorological phenomenon of great interest. Even in midwinter the temperature often reaches low burns frequently falls to 14 degrees Fahrenheit, while in the winter of 1892 it dropped in 45 degrees below zero at the end of January. The burn comes with startling suddenness, the atmosphere growing dark with whirling snowflakes where scarcely a minute before the sky was perfectly clear.

DEAD OR ALIVE.

My narrator is an old, white-haired gentleman. Truth speaks from his gentle, withered lips. Strange as his story sounds, his whole existence vouches for it. He has lived the life of a man who has never been in love, who never experienced the tender ministrations of a loving wife, nor had ring in his ears the innocent prattle of little children, and all because of an incident that cast a shadow over his early life.

My friend was at Heidelberg in the days when the old German university was as popular with Americans as with England and the entire European continent. From the time of his studies he had been in love, but his days were intimately acquainted with a colleague from a little German town in the Harz mountains, who was studying law, and whose only desire was to gain for himself a position which would make it possible for him to support his aged mother. His mother to reduce expenses she had come with him to Heidelberg, and the two were keeping house together in a little cottage not far from the university grounds.

During the first year of their sojourn at Heidelberg Karl Werner, the young fellow from the Harz, fell in love with a beautiful German girl, the daughter of a glover, who was "Gretchen" by name, with long wavy hair and eyes of heavenly blue. The attachment between these two young lovers was most pathetic, especially as Karl was poor, and suffering from the same dread disease that carried away his father before him. He was compelled to take part in their sports, their dallying bouts and their frolics, but once a month he insisted on dancing the supper dance with his German sweetheart at the sophomore's reunion.

More and more by, and Karl grew neither better nor worse until, when the winter set in with unusual severity, he was missed from the lecture room one morning. My white-haired midst of the sentence, the last words of which were "to his lips."

"It was Karl," he declared, "gashly white, and his blood all over his white dress shirt."

The girl had seen nothing. Nobody else had seen Karl about the place, and just as some of the college boys began to think that Geoffrey had imagined what he had seen, there came into the room and handed Geoffrey a note.

It was from Karl's mother. "Please come immediately," it said; "my son is dead."

Geoffrey hurried away. In the little cottage under the bare trees he found the woman beside her self with grief. She led him to her son's chamber, and there a ghastly sight met Geoffrey's eyes. On the floor before the bed lay Karl in his events, with white shirt front and stockings with blood. Amidst the mother told him that her son had died so much better that evening that he decided to go to the reunion and surprise both his sweethearts. He had brought on a hemorrhage, he dropped to the floor, and a moment later was dead.

It was at the very moment that Geoffrey had voiced his admiration for his friend's beauty that he said there was never any doubt in his mind that Karl had kept his word, to let nothing come between him and the woman he loved—"dead or alive."—St. Louis Republic.

IN VARIOUS PLACES.

Arctic travelers have noted the curious fact that snow, when at a very low temperature, will absorb moisture and dry garments.

The Japanese always bury their dead with the head to the north, and this is said to be the reason why no Japanese will sleep with his head in that position. Many private houses and hotels have a diagram of the points of the compass posted on the bedroom ceiling for the convenience of guests.

The subjects of the mikado are great readers. They read everything—histories, novels, magazines and newspapers. The last-meantimes are innumerable. Books, however, are also a great favorite. Many of these contain miscellaneous articles dealing with various topics of current interest, biographical sketches, short stories, interviews, and many of them are illustrated, some having truly wonderful frontispieces. The price of a book varies from a cent to ten cents per month.

The commonest price is ten or fifteen sen, one sen being about equivalent to a farthing. One of the most popular of the monthlies is the Young Man's World, published in Tokyo; the price per copy is only six sen. Books can be gathered from a glance at its contents page. To mention a few out of the fifteen articles appearing in one number, there is one dealing with Sunday, another with the moon and one, entitled "The Home of Civilization," deals with ancient Egypt. A picture of the famous pyramid is an account of a military expedition and the records of an exploring party in Batavia form two other articles, and there are also two short stories and a prize poem. Several of these are illustrated. The first few and last few leaves are taken up with advertisements, mostly of printed matter, such as Japana, Japan, etc.

London has suddenly found itself in possession of a cheap and inexhaustible supply of pure water, the existence of which it had never expected.

Walter Moses, the engineer of the London city corporation, informed that the sewer underneath London is an enormous lake of pure cold water, in a chalk basin 2,500 square miles in extent and 100 feet below the surface of the ground.

The annual rainfall that sinks below to the lake is estimated at 1,000,000,000 cubic yards, which would give a daily yield of seven thousand and sixty-five million gallons.

THE HAWK'S BURG, CRADLE OF HABSBURGS.

Habsburg, the mighty cradle of a mighty race, has just been replete and restored, and is now the abode of its sons, the might and grandsons. The work was finished in time to come as an offering for the anniversary of the Emperor, who is trying so hard to build up a dynasty to keep up the old brand of royalty.

It is a dynamic, to keep all the world in awe, and to make the entire world tremble before the might of the Habsburgs.

It is a great, and noble, race, and whatever may have been the sins of many of their great men are atoned.

Alas! the old castles on both sides of the Rhine are pointed out to-day as having belonged once to the men who founded the family of Habsburgs.

While the Habsburg really may be viewed as the cradle of the race, the real origin of these rulers dates far beyond its existence. In unbroken succession the family can be traced back from the powerful nobles of the tenth century, beginning with Guntram the Rich. Going still further back, but in a not unknown line, the Habsburgs trace their ancestry to the great houses of Arden. Alas! the old castles on both sides of the Rhine are pointed out to-day as having belonged once to the men who founded the family of Habsburgs.

It was Guntram's second grandson, Bishop of Strasburg—a friend from youth of the Emperor Henry II—who built the Habsburg castle. He did it in 1053, eight years after he had begun the work. It is the main characteristics were the same as those of the old castles.

By the thirteenth century the Habsburg was pretty well abandoned by the family as a residence, for the Count Rudolf of Habsburg visited it only once. He was elected as German King.

"KARL, YOU HERE!"
friend, then a handsome young man with raven black locks and alluring dark eyes, immediately hastened to see him. Karl was ill. He had taken cold, and was sick, and probably would be several days before he would be able to resume his studies again.

The two friends talked of the coming reunion, and Karl regretted that probably he would not be able to enjoy his monthly dance with the girl of his choice.

"I am not able to go, promise me that you will dance with her that night, and afterwards take her to the little round table in the corner, where we have been wont to sit together. Take my place, Geoffrey, and be her escort that night!"

Geoffrey promised. To cheer up his friend he made light of the whole thing; said he would go further, and endeavor to say to the young lady all the sweet things she had been in the habit of hearing from Karl.

"She shall not miss you, old fellow," he remarked jocularly, as he held out his hand to press Karl's slender fingers.

Before the words had died away he saw that he had made a mistake. Karl's face grew deathly pale. "You do, I shall stop you, dead or alive," he said, solemnly. "Nothing shall ever come between me and the woman I love."

"You can't bear to be tested," replied Geoffrey, with a jolly nod, and we went from the room.

The night of the reunion came. Karl was not able to go, and sent word to Geoffrey to take his place with the little German fraulein.

He danced the supper dance with her, as he had promised, and then led her to the little round table in the corner for the customary refreshments.

"We promised Karl to do just as he would do," remarked Geoffrey, in the course of the conversation, which reverted to the old man more than once. "If we were here I know he would have all sorts of pleasant things to say to you, and it's about time I began to compliment you on your beautiful ball dress, your brilliant—"

Geoffrey stopped suddenly. He was deadly pale. "Karl, for heaven's sake, you here!" he yelled, looking at an imaginary figure behind the theater. Everybody looked at him in amazement first, and then with apprehension, for by this time Geoffrey was on his feet, searching the place with his eyes for his colleague, whom he declared he had seen standing behind his chair, whose hand he had felt drop heavily on his shoulder in the

NEW HIDE-AND-SEEK.

WESTERN GAME FOR BOYS AND PONIES.

Hard Runs and High Jumps—The Interest That Horses Took in the Sport—Riders Often Left in Creeks or Hanging from Bouquets.

One of the games boys played on horseback in California in my day was hide-and-seek. It was exciting sport, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. As I recall incidents of the game, it seems to me that it has been dangerous, but that is a mature view, which never occurred to us then.

Our favorite place for the fun was on the edge of a neglected park, with a creek running through it, and another crossed a field nearby. Both the boys were mounted, and each carried some of the ponies. But there were several good jumps, five or six over three or four fence posts, two over hedges, and fallen trees were innumerable. The great advantage, however, the ponies had was the perfectly straight road along the side of the park. We measured off a distance of about 300 yards down the road from the nearest bunch of woods. For this distance there was no obstacle except on one side, a fence too low to stop the horses, so that when the line to the line we drew with our guns across the road, and many were hot races down it.

For the game was to pick a boy to be "It." Usually the fastest horse decided that point. The boy who was chosen had to go to the other end of the line, then to scatter off into the woods, across the creeks and down any of the many side roads, paths, trails out of sight. Since everything was clear off east of the home mark, all the riders went off to the west before they left the park, a straight road. After that they could ride any distance in any direction.

But they did not go far, for the purpose of each boy was to get back either undetected to the home mark, or it seem, to ride across this line before "It" did, and he tried to ride cautiously after us, slipping along on his horse at a walk, while we peered into the woods and high brush to detect the signs of being or of having been. We saw one rider, the rider's name and rode for home, unless the fellow caught gave in to save the horse's wind. And if "It" called a boy from a position between home and the hiding place, the usually hung him by the hair. This was not, however, for the lay of the land was such that the outs could work around, moving north or south from the main road and then eastward, while "It" had to hunt sometimes half a mile from home and far off on one side.

Then when he was off the road he would catch the sound of horses from the other way over a distance of half a mile, and turn back for a race to home base. It was a disgrace to lose more than one or two riders in without a contest. Well-mounted men liked to be "It" so as to make high records, and of course the variety of animals was great.

All the horses, however, learned the game and enjoyed it. Indeed, it was their interest in the sport that made it dangerous, for often when a rider would not see "It" coming, the rider would, and a fall would bring the rider to the ground. Feeding was taken care of by the men themselves, and the stable keeper was a remarkable uniform, with a wide belt, a cap with a plume, and a long coat.

The game was to pick a pony to get home safe, but without his mount, so common that it was a point long unselected whether this or that could serve. Sometimes it was hard to decide before a game that it should sometimes that it should not. "It" had to be a good horseman, for his horse, put on the alert by his cautious movements, would listen and watch, and at the slightest sound of alarm, whirl and dart away at full speed. Fences were taken by horses with unready riders, creeks received boys who could not keep up with their horses, and brush and the limbs of trees often kept them back, suspended till help came.

STRANGEST BRIDGE IN THE WORLD.

Many and strange were the things seen by the French expedition of Bonvalot de Bouchamps in Africa, but nothing stranger than the bridge of vines over the Omo river in Abyssinia, which is a picture of a scene of savagery from a photograph taken by a member of the party. In most parts of Africa bridges are unbridged; of big rivers are crossed by rafts and little ones span plan, hung from big cables made of twister creepers; from these depend the upstream bearing the door supports. The roadway is a narrow path, no one ever travels alone, the men always in pairs, carrying or portering bearers trade goods. The bridge with which the bridge is built is something marvelous. The Bonvalot de Bouchamps party set out from Djibouti, on forded. But in the mountains of Abyssinia the torrents that pour down to join the Nile are not so lightly stemmed. Over one of these the Abyssinians, who have something like a settled country and stable government, have built a bridge, like the Brooklyn bridge or the suspension bridge at Niagara, these Abyssinian engineers had no cables, no scientific bands of steel. Instead they had only nature's growth with which to withstand nature's force. But ingenuity succeeded in the absence of other resources. It is built upon the suspen-the Red sea, and traveled across the Somali desert and the Abyssinian hills to join Marchand at Fashoda, which they reached from the west coast. Thus they planned to throw a strip of French soil right across the dark continent. It reached the head waters of the Sobat and went boating merrily down the river; but meanwhile the British gunboats reached the junction of the Sobat with the White Nile, and the expedition is now rolling back to Djibouti. The road going out is a good deal longer than it was going in.

MEN AND WOMEN OF SALOICA
Letter Describing Comparing with the Congress.

As for the male population, it consists mainly of some 50,000 replicas of Sir Henry Irving as Shylock, says the London Chronicle. They have all born and brought up in his family garden, and his complete make-up. These are the descendants of Jews who fled from the Spanish Inquisition, and whether it be the result of in-breeding or of many other causes, they are all alike. They never sleep together, and perhaps a practised reader can tell his flock apart. Their women wear a remarkable uniform, which might be described as a chiton or tunic, with a wide belt, and a small door-knocker at the back of the neck. Feeding was taken care of by the men, and the women are too wise to omit any precautions to insure safety to

GUARDING THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

"Old Lady Threadneedle Street" Is Watched by Thirty-Four Soldiers.

It would be a bold burglar indeed who should assault the Bank of England. All night long have night guards to be sure, but the one popularly known as "The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street" is one of the few in the world watched by a dozen men, and trained to the task by the most rigid discipline of having never been robbed—something few such institutions can assert. Yet the attempt has been made and the garrison are too wise to omit any precautions to insure safety to the bank notes in the vaults.

After getting the money, the men receive a blanket each on which to sleep when not doing a turn on the sentry post. Sentries wear overcoats of peculiar and antiquated pattern, decorated with huge buttons, with "Bank of England" engraved on the collar.

A separate guard, adjoining the guardroom is provided for the officers' mess and convenient in both cases, where those not on sentry duty may amuse themselves. Feeding was taken care of by those who wish to read and everything possible is done to make the time a pleasant one, as many may leave the bank until relieved in the morning.

John Atkins is a great example, whether he has charge of the guards or other branch of the service, and the bank governors recognize this. A sergeant comes in shortly after the first sentries are posted and at once opens a canister for the good of the force, a box of tobacco, a mug of beer, and good things to eat and also a can of porter, but the men are restricted in their allowance of the latter. Two messes are made at night, the first, scarcely a quarter past nine, the second, when the canteen runs out midnight, when "taps" on eating goes and the boys go hungry until morning. Then it is full swing. Pickets have light duties as the chances of an attack are very small.

The walls are very thick, the cellar deep, and even if any man should get in he could find no harbor to set out with any hope.

In the absence of emergency calls each soldier does one turn of sentry duty during the night, the guard being doubled just before "rounds."

At 11 o'clock the officer, who has supervised all this time, gets out and visits the sentries. Hearing that all is well, he retires to his room again and is seen no more until the detail passes for dismissal in the morning.

The sentries remain on guard in the bank until the picket departs in the early morning. This hour is winter 7 o'clock and an hour earlier in summer. Sentries are posted in the bank throughout the day, and the rounder passes about in the court where it is said bank notes are burned after withdrawal from circulation.

In the morning the detail is paraded in front of the officer inspected them and then they are marched to their barracks, a shilling each ahead for the night on duty. The senior sergeant makes the report of the watch. An official of the bank is on hand to take over the blankets, bedding and like articles, and giant aids in his report that all of these are present and in good order. He then sends the drummer over to the Horse Guards to turn in the report, just when the officer serves is not very clearly set out.

The military picket is not alone in

GUARDS MARCHING TO THE BANK.

The first duty these men perform is to receive their pay for the night on guard. The privates and drummer get a shilling the corporals "one and six," the sergeants half a crown, a total of 38 shillings, exclusive of the pay of the officer. The allowance for the guard, therefore, is about £500 a year. The officer receives pay, the exact amount of which is unknown, but selected are stuck on post and the monotony of a night in the bank is that he who is not on guard sleeps for he has nothing else to do.

The ceremonies begin with the reading of the regulations for the duty of the night by one of the sergeants. These are intended to brace the sentries and tell them how they must act in case of fire or in case of storm the eastern. Then the first men selected are stuck on post and the monotony of a night in the bank is

GALLANTRY'S SLIGHT REWARD

The Fair Creatures Was Not at All Grateful.

If virtue is its own reward, gallantry is also occasionally paid off in the same way, says the London Daily Union Citizen. One day last week a very handsome young woman, sumptuously attired, sailed out from a large store on Bay street. She might have been a member of an opera company, or she might not have been, but she is neither old nor young. She specialty is the exposure of every masculine eye in the immediate vicinity, and as she swept regally toward Hogan street many admiring comments followed her. Men passing her turned to look a second time, and a girl who was walking down the sidewalk at the same instant a ragged pickaninnie made a grab at it. Both clutched the object, but after a few heated words the boy ran off, leaving the girl with the object in her hand. The young woman, however, was a keen observer of the fact. The young man swooned down upon the little object lying on the sidewalk and at the same instant a ragged pickaninnie made a grab at it. Both clutched the object, but after a few heated words the boy ran off, leaving the girl with the object in her hand.

Of course few of these curious miseries ever reach the Prince of Wales, for his experienced secretaries sift the correspondence with care and knowledge. Every day there are scores of letters connected with the public ceremonies in which the prince takes part, for every letter is carefully read and approved. There are the thousand social invitations requiring a reply, and unnumbered appeals for money in aid of charities. The private letters for the prince are very numerous, for his relatives keep him in touch with all interesting them. His sister, the Empress Frederick, is a charming letter writer, and corresponds with the prince regularly.

As She Expressed It.

There is one portion of the human body which continues to increase in size throughout life, and does not cease with the attainment of maturity. This is the crystalline lens of the eye. It is a good deal thicker than it was when the mother was born.

Nearly every married woman thinks a lot of other women envy her.

BRANDED NOT TO MARRY.

Twelve Boston Young Men Decided to Encourage Bachelorhood.

With the greatest difficulty an amateurish club was recently formed in Boston, with a membership of just twelve. The secret was too much for one or two of the young men, and now nearly all about the unholy compact is known. It is proposed to dine annually as long as the men hold together, and if any one of them becomes married, he must give a gold dollar costing not less than $10 a plate and as much more than that as he cares to afford, to all the other members, and must also pay into the general treasury for the accumulation of a club fund, the sum of $500 as a slight contribution, and the balance to be used in taking unto himself a wife. Generally, if all but one member becomes married, the remaining bachelor would pocket the contributions of the others, amounting to $4,500 and interest accruing from time to time, besides which he would meanwhile enjoy the services of a maid-servant. The members of the Club of Twelve, as it is called, were desirous of keeping their plan secret, fearing that if it became generally known, society might receive them less cordially than of yore. Such a result has not yet become apparent. Indeed, matrimony seems to have struck at the whole affair, hinting that these rows of celibacy must represent some cases of disappointed love.

Raising Tobacco Under Cover.

Tobacco is being raised under cover at Tampa, Fla., and the Baltimore Sun says the experiment is a success. An acre or more of ground in a patch is covered with a framework and cheescloth, and a number of patches of these patches amounting to nine or ten feet above the ground. The cloth also runs around the patches. It affords protection from heavy rains and from winds that would injure the plants. As it is, beautiful leaves for wrappers are raised. As filler tobacco, however, it is good, but not equal to the tobacco raised for wrappers. The advantage of raising the plants under cover is found in the excellent coloring they take on. There is a demand for light wrappers, and this shade is taken on by the plants.

At the Height of the Quarrel.

"When I die," said Mr. Pneer, "you'll have the goodness, I hope, at least to close my eyes." "Yes!" blazed forth Mrs. Pneer, "and I'll put the smallest copper coins on them." A cent has always been as big in her eyes as a man of infinite pleasure to return it." A look of cold surprise dawned upon the fair face confronting him. "You are really very good, sir," she replied in a clear, self-contained voice. "I have my puns, but I will not say it is not a good life." "I'll be a bachelor," she added haughtily. "You may keep it if you like." What the young man did thereafter is not a matter of record.
