in their hopeless fight against President McKinley, he is more popular than ever. Level-headedness is always appreciated by the people.

It is not often that a man receives congratulations on having made an error of judgment, but Secretary Gage is delighted with the congratulations showered upon him for having underestimated the receipts of the government for the fiscal year just closed, by twenty-odd million dollars.

Gen. Grosvener said of the Ohio campaign, in which he will take his usual conspicuous part, "I think we are going to have just about a nominal campaign. The democrat have not nominated their man yet and new conditions may arise, but it seems to me that the battle will be fought out along the regular lines, with the regular result—republican victory."

Senator Callom who, as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, had some personal experience with Mr. Edward Atkinson of Boston, whom he characterizes as a human talking machine, says it is a great comfort that Atkinson is doing his talking for the Philippines and against the United States Government, in the newspapers, and in pamphlets, because if people had to listen to him, they would surely be talked to death in great numbers.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 3, '99—

When President McKinley announced that the officers of the new regiments of volunteers, to be enlisted for service in the Philippines, would be chosen from the troops which had seen service, with a few from the regular army, he meant exactly what he said, but it did not prevent great pressure, political and otherwise, being brought to bear upon him to give commissions to men who had had no military experience whatever. This pressure, great as it is, will hardly succeed in landing a single commission. In fact, its very existence is almost an insult to the President, as it implies a doubt of his word. The President's position is the proper one. The more efficient the volunteer regiments are made, the greater their value will be to the country and nothing can add more to their efficiency than to give them experienced officers. They are intended for the hardest kind of service, as the understanding is that as soon as the rainy season is over in the Philippines, Gen. Otis will start the most aggressive campaign he has yet waged against the Filipinos, and these volunteers will participate in that campaign.

Senator Carter, of Montana, was to Washington a day or two ago, and said of the political outlook: "President McKinley will be renominated and reelected by an overwhelming majority of the electoral vote. The democrats are hopelessly beaten in advance for they have no issues. Bryan is about dead. I do not think that Bean will be the nominee of his party in 1900, though I am aware that a great many of the democratic leaders profess to be for him. Gorman is popular in the East and if nominated would put up a stiff fight, but he would hardly be satisfactory to the radical element of his party in the South and West. The democrats are in a bad position, for there never was a time when they had so little Presidential timber, and if Bryan should be nominated, it will be largely due to the scarcity of available candidates."

The business of the patent office, always profitable to the government, has become more so than ever under the capable administration of Commissioner Dwell. The weekly receipts of the office are averaging about $5,000 more than they did a year ago, and the number of patents, trade-marks and labels issued last week, was greater than have been issued in one week since the spring of 1890, when the record was broken.

Governor Roosevelt has always been popular in Washington, and since his flat-footed declaration in favor of the renomination and reelection of President McKinley, which made it clear that he properly sided with the attempt of the democrats and assistant democrats to use him aggregation did not score. In the Harris half of the second F. Stark fanned the air as did also J. Wilcox. H. Gardner made a two bagger but R. Wiseman retired the side on a foul fly caught by Edwards. In the third Pine City made five scores, and Harris got another goose egg. In the fourth Pine City found the Harris pitcher for seven safe hits getting five scores. In the Harris half B. Palmer made a two bagger but got out trying to steal home at third base by a pretty throw from home plate. E. Stark again fanned the air but J. Wilcox got a two bagger and scored by a two sacker by H. Gardner, but R. Wiseman went out on an easy one to first base, which retired the side. In the fifth Pine City made three more, bunching the hits of Glasgow, Lambert, Spearing and Edwards. But Harris was given another goose egg. In the sixth Pine City got five more out of six safe hits by C. Griffith, H. Glasgow, R. Lambert, Geo. Persins, W. Hurley and J. Lambert. Harris got one score by safe ones from the bat of W. Wyquist, B. Palmer and F. Stark. In the seventh the home team made three more, and Harris got served to another goose egg. In the eighth the home team after two men were out took a batting streak and as a result nine scores were marked up to their credit. In the Harris half they got one score. In Pine City's half of the ninth two scores were run in making thirty-five in all. Harris tried in this inning to do something to redeem themselves but the best they could do was to get a single score. The following in the game by innings:

Harris 0 0 0 1 0 1 0 1—4
Pine City 3 0 5 5 3 3 9 2—35

RUSH CITY GAME.

According to arrangements the Pine City ball team boarded the 12-37 train on the glorious Fourth and bled themselves down to the city of Rush to try conclusions with the hired players and a few of that city's local team, for a purse of twenty-five dollars. The Rush Cityites thought they were sure that Pine City could not carry away the purse when they got a battery from Stillwater, and Tom Connors, of Brainerd, but the Pine City team say all pitchers look alike to them when he gets in the box, and they pounded Mr. Burns, of Stillwater, all over the race track for a grand total of twenty-four runs. When the best they could do with the curves of W. A. Lambert was to get two runs and that on errors by the home team. The game was called at a quarter to three by B. Sayers, of Harris, who acted as umpire, and Pine City went to bat, and by bunching three hits succeeded in making five runs; in the second inning the Snake river boys got shut out, but in the third they got one; in the fourth, five; in the fifth, one; in the sixth, nine, and in the seventh three. Rush City and her hired players never saw third base until the fourth inning and never made a score until the sixth, which T. Connors made on an over throw by W. Sparring to second and a bloated ball whereby J. McLaughlin brought in the last score. The game was called by mutual agreement at the end of the seventh inning, and the Pine City boys were awarded the game and also the twenty-five dollars. The features of the game were the stick work of the Snake river valley boys and the pitching of both Burns and Lambert. Burns is a first class pitcher and with a team that would support him had ought to win any game. But his support was ragged both in the field and behind the bat. The Pine City boys had on their batting clothes, and gave Lambert good support. The following is the game by innings:

Pine City 5 0 1 5 1 0 3—24

Struck out by Burns, seven; by Lambert, nine. Bases on balls by Burns, four; by Lambert, three. Hit bats out of play, one; wild pitch, Burns, passed balls, John, five; Edwards, two; Atkinson, six; time, fifty-eight minutes.

THE NATIONAL GAME.
The Local Team Wins Two Games From Aspiring Rivals.
On Sunday morning last the local ball team went to Harris to play the return game of ball with the Harris aggregation of ball tossers. The boys reached Harris in due time and were taken care of by the Harris boys at the Montiel House and after doing justice to the splendid meal which was set before them they were escorted to the base ball park where a large crowd from Harris, North Branch and Rush City had assembled to see the game. Pine City went to bat first and ran in three scores. Will Hurley the first man fouled out to the catcher; J. Lambert scored on a sacrifice; B. Hurley, Griffith made a three bagger and scored on a pretty single by Glasgow, who stole second and scored on a hit by R. Lambert and a double by Spearing. Edwards retired the side with a pop-up to the Harris second baseman. In Harris' half Sayers sent an easy one to Glasgow and was thrown out at first. Second singled but was caught at second on Nyquist's hit to M. Hurley, the side was retired on a fly to Spearing. In the second inning Will Hurley got out on an easy one from short stop to first. J. Lambert was retired on a hot one from pitcher to first, and M. Hurley one from second to first. This was the only inning in which the Pine City

Guaranteed to Give Satisfaction.

$1,000 Premium.

The above premium is offered by the Minnesota State Horticultural society for the production of a seedling apple tree as hardy and prolific as the Duchess, with fruit equal to the Wealthy in size, quality and appearance, and that will keep as well as the Malinda. This offer is open to all.

Quite likely the seed to produce this tree may not yet have been planted even. Select a corner of your garden or orchard for a seedling nursery, and plant seed of the hardest varieties of apples. You will find the work of growing and testing seedlings an interesting one, and it promises much for the future of pomology in the northwest.

—Chas. Elmquist and Miss Charlotte Gemmal, of Rush City, were married, June 28. Many friends in this vicinity extend congratulations.

—J. Hammel & Co., of Duluth, is here with a fine stock of horses. They have opened up a sale and exchange stable in the Pioneer horse barn and are prepared to sell horses on easy terms. This is a reliable firm and will do just exactly as they say they will. We have known of these men for the past twenty-eight years, they having done business in the city in which we were born and raised for that length of time, and always had the name of being honest and straightforward. They have come here to stay and if they sell you an animal and it proves to be different from what they represented, you can get your money or paper back.

WEDDING BELLS.

Two of Pine City's Prominent Young People Joined in Wedlock. On Thursday afternoon, July 6th, 1899, at two o'clock, in the M. E. Church by the Rev. J. J. Parish, of Rush City, Miss Ella Glanville and George Perkins were joined in wedlock.

Miss Ella is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Glanville, of this place and is well and favorably known and has been one of Pine City's fairest daughters since coming here about six years ago. George Perkins, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Perkins, was born in this place and has always made it his home. George is one of the boys and is considered a good trustworthy young man and one that will make the lady of his choice a good husband.

The bridesmaids were Miss Agnes Glanville, sister of the bride and Miss Lillian Perkins, sister of the groom. The groomsmen were Paul Perkins brother of the groom and Alfred Glanville brother of the bride.

The happy couple were married under a wedding bell made of roses and ferns and the church was beautifully decorated with ferns, cut flowers and house plants.

Miss Carrie Perkins played the wedding march. A reception was given at the Perkins home from three to six, and a dance was given in Hetzeneker's hall in the evening.

The presents were numerous and beautiful. The PIONEER joins with the many friends of the happy couple, in wishing them a long and prosperous journey down life's troubled sea.

MARRIED.

At the residence of the brides parents at Brook Park, on Monday afternoon, July 3rd 1899, at 4:30, Miss Iona Otis to Chas. Lewellin, by Judge Goodspeed. The bridesmaid was Miss Adelia Ziegler, and the groomsmen Edward Ziegler, both of Brook Park. The bride is quite well known in this place she having lived here for the past two years.

The groom is not as well known as the bride he having only been here a few months and then only staying for a few hours, but those that know him speak of him in the highest terms. The happy couple left Brook Park on the 3:27 train Tuesday morning, for a short wedding tour to Rush City and this place. They returned home on Thursday, where they will remain for a couple of weeks, when they will depart for Irwin, Dakota, where Mr. Lewellin has a farm, where they will reside until after harvest, when they will return to Brook Park, where they will make their future home. The PIONEER joins the many friends of the happy couple in wishing them a long and prosperous life.

In Woman's Life Are Made Dangerous by Pelvic Catarrh.

Mrs. Mathilde Richter.

I suffered from catarrh for many years, but since I have been taking Peruna I feel strong and well.

Peruna has raised me from the bed of sickness and set them to work again than any other remedy.

Remember that cholera morbus, cholera infantum, summer complaint, bilious colic, diarrhoea and dysentery are each and every kind of catarrh of the bowels.

ORDINARY CIVILITY.

The Advantages and Pleasures of It as Elucidated by Mr. Gobbieby.

"I should recommend as an investment," said Mr. Gobbieby, "the practice of civility."

"I should say that from whatever point of view we look at it, civility is a good investment. We are apt to get something out of it anyway, and it doesn't cost a cent."

Immaterial.

What a Little Faith Did FOR MRS. ROCKWELL.

"I was a great sufferer from female weakness and had no strength. It was impossible for me to attend to my household duties. I had tried everything and many doctors, but found no relief."

From a Gentlewoman's Remark. "When I went to you I was very sick, had not been well for two years. The doctors did not seem to help me, and one said I could not live three months."

On the Goal Line

By Jean Outin.

KELLY, the Hilton college footballer, was lying stretched out on his bed in the Camden house.

Some one knocked on his door. "Come," he called, expecting to see one of the fellows, but the door opened and a messenger boy stuck his head in.

"Have you any more of those?" asked the messenger boy, and down stairs to the clerk's desk.

"What's the first train north?" "Come," he called, expecting to see one of the fellows, but the door opened and a messenger boy stuck his head in.

"I must go home. My father's hurt—runaway. Read that and I'll shove the program into your hand."

Kelly raved upstairs for his hat and top coat, and was down again in a moment. "Have you any more of those?"

Berbes looked at the coach in utter bewilderment. "Here's a nice mess," growled "What to do now?"

"Shaw shrugged his shoulders. "It's as good as bad as it can be, but what's the matter with giving Armstrong a try?"

"Armstrong as fullback! I see that boy bucking the Camden line. He'd make about as much of an impression on it as a mackerel on a stone wall."

"Have you anyone else to suggest?" "You have me there, but I see our finish. Thirty to nothing is a mild estimate of the score."

"Shaw stood up and squared his broad shoulders. "Never mind," he said, "I'll take all the responsibility. I'm going to find Armstrong and have a talk with him."

He found Armstrong sitting alone in the rally hall, looking out and imagining football games on the hotel stationery.

"Shaw dropped into an empty chair beside him with a pleasant word, and at once plunged into the subject of the game. "You know that you're going to have a chance to immortalize yourself this afternoon."

Armstrong gazed at him blankly. "Kelly has been called home, and you're to be put in at fullback in his place."

"Armstrong drew a long breath and for a moment stared steadily out of the window, without saying a word.

"Shaw sauntered back to the captain. "I believe the boy has good nerve, and he's a real snapper. I don't think I'll have a field. I made him think he hadn't a ghost of a show to win, and he's just the sort of a fellow to risk his neck on such a venture."

The clock on the high tower of College hall was striking three as the Hilton players clambered out of their "bus" to the field for their first few minutes' preliminary practice.

A moment later the Camden team trotted out on the field at the other end, and began putting the ball through the goal.

The captains and officials of the game conferred for a moment, and then Capt. Forbes hurried back to his men who were grouped impatiently together to hear the result of the toss.

"They've won the toss and chosen the south goal. We kick off. Hurry up to the field and get ready."

Hilton lined up along the long white line in the center of the field, and the Camden players scattered over their territory in the center of the field.

As Armstrong dashed into the line the quarterback passed the ball straight into his arms with unerring swiftness.

As he lunged forward over his tackle the ball slipped from the grasp of his left arm and had a sickening consciousness that he had fumbled.

Armstrong ran back up the field to the fullback's position on the defensive, wishing at every step that the earth would open and swallow him up.

Twice the Camden backs smashed into the Hilton line and then the fullback, with a strong kick, sent the ball 50 yards up the field and the goal was out of danger.

Up and down the field the battle was waged, the rest of the first half, with no notable advantage to either team.

The captain came up to Armstrong in the dressing-room, where the players were resting and regaining their strength.

"That was a bad fumble you made, old man, but don't let it worry you. I've seen older heads than yours get rattled for less cause than you and you may have a chance to redeem yourself in the next half."

The 15 minutes of resting soon passed, and as the players filed out the captain turned to Armstrong and said, "You'll have to play a little better."

"If you fumble again in this half, young fellow, I'll be hanged if I don't make you walk home."

In the second half the superior weight and strength of the Camden players began to tell, and in spite of a few brilliant plays by the Hilton territory.

"All hope of carrying the Camden team had disappeared, and the exhausted team limped off for the call of time to save them from defeat.

The Hilton line was going to pieces, and in spite of the captain's desperate efforts to rally his men, they were being forced back and back, until the ball lay on the ten-yard line, and it was Camden's first down.

Bucking the line had netted all the gains in this half, as the Hilton ends were too sure tacklers to allow any end runs, and they had drifted over to one side of the field, and the ends had been drawn in by the repeated attacks on the line.

Seeing this, and wishing to score the touchdown where a goal would be easy, the Camden quarterback gave the signal for a fake buck. The fullback charged into the line, his head lowered, and he carried the ball.

The Hilton players threw themselves into the center to stop the rush, and even the ends, forgetting all caution, rushed into the thick of the fight.

But the ball was not there. Instead of passing it to the fullback, the quarterback had held it for a moment and then, with a sudden dash, he had thrown it to the left half, Kennedy.

In an instant Kennedy was off like a shot for the Hilton goal. Armstrong was the only man between the flying fullback and the touchdown.

Putting well across the field to shake off all possible pursuers, Kennedy was running almost parallel to his opponent's line.

As the latter gathered himself for the final spring for the tackle, the runner stopped short and dodged quickly back. Armstrong whirled and threw himself into the air, but it was too late.

The ball bounded up almost into Armstrong's arms, and he clutched it half involuntarily. It was a hundred yards to the other goal, but he had a clear field.

The whole Camden team was in hot pursuit. Armstrong's comrades were following in the general rush, shouting words of encouragement, which he never heard, and blocking off the lagards on the other team.

Kennedy was close behind the boy and gaining every yard, but the gap was too wide to be closed easily.

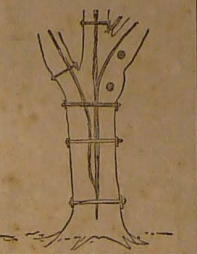

Armstrong heard the dying feet and panting breath behind him, and strained every nerve. As he gave one last leap to throw himself across the line Kennedy sprang at him like a hawk and palled him in the air, and pursuer and pursued came down with a thump—across the goal line.

MODERN TREE SURGERY.

How a Big Tree in Washington Park, Chicago, Was Successfully Baited Together.

The life of a tree, partly shattered by lightning, is often saved by bolting together the trunk and a branch.

menting process and it is predicted that it will survive. Near it stands another tree of the same species, the trunk and main branches of which were bolted together after being torn asunder by lightning five years ago.

SCIENCE OF PRUNING.

Branches Should Be So Clipped That the Tree Will Become More Perfect Each Year.

The man who undertakes to train up a tree accepts something of a moral responsibility, and should remember this when he begins to prune it.

When he was done with a tree it was symmetrical and well shaped, but most of those he pruned were left so they will need pruning next year in order to bring them into shape again.

In pruning a tree the orchardist should have in mind the shape the tree should have at maturity and the branches that each year it will become more perfect.

The terminal buds on each branch should point toward the place they should be filling work. If the tree is overpruned it should be so pruned that it will grow in a well-shaped form.

It does not always leave the tree as nice looking as it would be if pruning were a matter for today or for a week or month, but it is a matter of long run so as to form a spiral, and with care the branch may be shortened so as to have a bud pointing the way the tip of the branch should grow to make the tree most slightly. It is possible by paying attention to this to grow trees in any shape desired, and the Chinese and Japanese are fond of so pruning trees that they will present various odd shapes.

In this country we have an ideal for each kind of a tree, and if we are careful in training them by properly pruning the head we can make the worst-formed tree shape and slightly.

The man who so prunes a tree this year that it will be done over again next year will not understand his business. The skillful orchardist prunes his trees in such a manner that no two-year-old wood ever need be cut out of them, although it is in secret of pruning, but there are very few who understand and fewer who follow strictly the best models.—Bert Carroll, in Farmers' Voice.

Remedy for Tree Borers.

Prof. George H. Sargent, the experiment station, recommends the following remedy for borers in trees: It is made with ordinary soft soap, diluted or made thicker with a strong solution of common washing soda.

Make the solution of washing soda as strong as possible; then thin the soft soap with that. If this wash is painted on the trees on a clear warm day it will have a thin, washable coating on the trunks which will stay there for a number of weeks, and will prevent the female beetles from laying their eggs.

The borers are grubbed by beetles which hatch from eggs laid on the bark; if this coating of soft soap and soda is painted on the trees the mother beetles will not lay their eggs, and the trees will be safe. Other washes are sometimes recommended, but this is as good as any.

Pine Tar for Insects.

By distilling pine knots a very promising insecticide has been secured. The American goldfinch or wild canary is as beautiful as it is useful, and as a weed destroyer has few equals. It confines its attention very largely to one family of plants, the composite, and is especially fond of wild lettuce, thistles, wild sunflower and rag-weed. It is so often seen gracefully poised upon thistles that it is commonly called the thistle-eater. For this reason it also very fond of cultivated sunflower seeds.

HIGH-PRICED FRUITS.

They Are the Result of Careful Planting and Cultivation and Not of Chance.

Every farmer who can get the high-priced fruits to market is sure to make a success of orcharding and gardening.

To get high prices for fruit the fruiting must continue throughout the whole season, even after the fruits have been harvested, for then it is necessary to prepare for the next crop.

In planting and cultivating an orchard this object should be kept steadily in mind. If it is for profit, methods of culture and harvesting must be followed that will give the best results.

There are too many orchards of a medium class in the country. They produce an indifferent crop of fruit any time through the season, and usually the crop is ready for harvesting when the markets are glutted, and prices very low.

It is much better to raise the fruits a little earlier and a little later, so that they will be in the market in the middle of the season, but they should be selected with reference to the size and quality of the fruit.

When the market is flooded with cheap fruit, I should divide my trees and vines into three general classes, and cultivate each one differently.

First, I should have ready the earliest marketable kind, and give them all the forcing possible. A few days' fruit will make all the difference in the world.

I should try to force them so as to get ahead of everyone else who had trees of the same variety.

Second, I should have a class of trees that ripened the fruits in the middle of the season, but they should be selected with reference to the size and quality of the fruit.

Third, I should make a list of late bearing trees and vines. These, like the early varieties, should produce marketable fruit. I should cultivate to prolong and postpone their season of bearing as much as possible.—S. W. Chambers, in Journal of Agriculture.

APPEARANCES COUNT.

The Man Who Picks His Fruit Attractively Is the Man Who Makes Fair Profits.

When there is anything like a full crop of fruits it often occurs that the markets become overstocked and the price drops so low as to give little or no profit to the grower.

At the same time large quantities of fruit are being sold every day. In a majority of cases the fruit is of inferior quality, which is put up in neat, convenient packages and that presents an inviting appearance—that sells first and best.

The grower who is careless in picking and sorting his fruit, who pays but little attention to the kind or appearance of the packages in which it is set to market, is the worst sufferer.

It is this class of fruit that is passed by when there is an oversupply. When there is a scarcity and the demand exceeds the supply almost any kind of fruit will sell at some price. But with plenty of good fruit the poor grade won't sell at a low price. It is sold at all.

In all cases it pays when picking the fruit to sort carefully, grade according to quality, and with small fruits especially to pack in addition to send to market in attractive packages.

The difference in the cost is small, especially as compared with the better opportunity to sell at a higher price. It is possible to realize, and this is more important in a year when there is a good supply of fruit than at any other time, although a difference in favor of the better fruit is made at all times.

But usually it is only when there is a scarcity that poor fruit is marketable. The grower who carefully sorts his fruit and takes pains in sending to market in a way that will attract the customer not only realizes good prices, but does good missionary work in encouraging the consumption of fruit.—Farmers' Voice.

USEFUL GARDEN CLARKE.

Indispensable Where Vegetables or Fruits Have to Be Carried from Garden to Cellar.

PLU-NESS

Do you get up with a headache? Do you have a bad taste in your mouth? Then you have a poor appetite and a weak digestion.

You are frequently dizzy, always feel dull and groggy. You have cold hands and feet. You get but little benefit from your food. You have no ambition to work and the sharp pains of neuralgia dart through your body.

What is the cause of all these troubles? Constipated bowels.
