Ex-Senator Brown and Hon. Jesse Smith, of Utah, are in Washington trying to secure official permission for the people of northeastern Utah to pasture their sheep on the Uinta reservation, embracing 875,000 acres, which was set apart as a forestry reservation under the last Cleveland administration. Mr. Brown said on the subject: "People wonder at crime in the western country and yet these immense reservations, covering thousands of acres, are left as regular hiding places for cut-throats and outlaws of every character. These reservations, and especially those in the far West, have practically no police protection, and it can be readily seen that if the government would permit their use for pasturing our sheep, this would give the reservation protection that it would not otherwise get." Speaking of politics Mr. Brown said that Bryanism was rapidly dying in the West and predicted that President McKinley would receive the electoral votes of Utah and Colorado.

There is neither surprise nor alarm in official circles on account of the few cases of yellow fever among our troops in Cuba. Surgeon-General Sternberg, of the army, said: "We have anticipated yellow fever among the troops and prepared for it, and never expected to get through the occupation of the island without some cases of the disease. Maj. Gen. Brooke understands the situation. He has as his chief surgeon a competent officer, and anything called for by him will be immediately sent. That there may be plenty of surgeons available, additional immune surgeons have been ordered to report to Dr. O'Reilly."

Col. Henderson received a warm welcome from his numerous Washington friends, during his stay of several days in the city. Neither his successful Speakership campaign nor the stirring up, by newspaper writers, of his military title to "General," which seems to have been at once accepted by the public in general—Hon. Thos. J. Henderson, who represented the seventh Illinois district in the House from the 44th to the 53rd Congress, was brevetted Brigadier General in the Civil War, but Hon. D. B. Henderson never got higher in rank than Col. of the 5th Iowa Infantry—has made the slightest change in him. He greeted all his friends, from President McKinley down to the humblest private citizen, in the same whole-souled way that has made him one of the most popular men who ever sat in Congress, and which probably also made him sure of becoming Speaker of the House.

Brookpark, Minnesota.
The business men of Brook Park held a meeting Wednesday evening, June 21, at which time an association was formed to be known as the "Business men's Union" and the following named officers were elected: Pres. A. Berg, Vice Pres. C. F. Seymour, Treas. A. B. Ziegler, Sec. S. P. Marlette. The objects of this union are twofold:—First: To solicit immigration, not only to our town alone, but to adjacent towns, as we have a large tract of farming land which will produce all the cereals, vegetables and small fruits equal to any other part of the state, and with regard to wild or tame grasses it has no superior in, or adjacent to Minnesota. Second: To locate immigrants, assist them in the selection of such land as will be adapted to that branch of industry which they may wish to follow.
We have as good stock land as can be found anywhere in this latitude and good water in abundance may be had by digging a very few feet, generally about 20 to 25 feet.

Also, to correspond with those seeking information with regard to business locations in our village.

INVESTMENTS.
Capitalists can find good investments here. Factories for the manufacturing of wood pulp, cabinet wares, shingles and lath are some of the investments that would make good returns. A brick yard, hotel, shoe shop, dress making and millinery establishments are other branches of business that are much needed. Other industries would suggest themselves as the country becomes more developed.

Now, in making these statements I do not believe I have overrated the value of the country, or the certainty of good results from investment ventures. So far as my own pecuniary interest is concerned it would not warrant me in stating anything that I did not consider facts. Any inquiries with reference to the above may be addressed to the secretary, S. P. Marlette or the undersigned.

J. GOODSPEED.
DIED.

On Thursday evening of last week July 6th, at seven o'clock, Patrick Madden passed peacefully away. Mr. Madden had been quite ill for a number of months, and was confined to his bed since the first of the year. He was born in Ireland in 1816 and came to this country in about 1825, was married in 1850 in Pennsylvania and in company with his family moved to this village about twenty-five years ago, and has resided here ever since. Seven children were born to him, one of whom has been dead for a number of years. Six children are left to mourn his loss. John, Ed, Frank, Madeline and Mrs. A. F. Brackett of this village, Mrs. A. Conure, of St. Johns, North Dakota, and Mrs. Mary Brown of Owatonna. Mr. Madden was a kind father, and ever had a pleasant word for every one he met. In his death Pine City loses one of its oldest settlers and his family a kind and loving father. "Uncle" Madden served as street commissioner in this place for quite a number of years, but had to be retired on account of old age from which cause he died. The funeral services were held from the Catholic church on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock and all that was mortal of Uncle Madden was laid peacefully away in Calvary cemetery. The pall bearers were A. H. Lambert, Ell Stull, W. E. Glassow, Chas. Stauty, Oliver Wilcox and Frank Brackett.

Only genuine to sleep,
Only waiting for us here,
One more tongue to swell the story,
In that land of the dead,
So, my hearts, and find with sorrow,
But a joy reveals the soul,
For when it was the truth, remember,
We expect to reach that goal.

CIRCUS FOR CHARITY

New-Fangled Entertainment Quite Popular in the East.

Some Members of Dan Rice, the Venerable King of Clowns and Originator of the Circus-Show.

(Special Washington Letter.) Have you been to the circus this year? Or hasn't the circus come very near you?

When some of the fathers and mothers of the present day were boys and girls the circuses moved very slowly.

In those good old days the elephants added the horses in pulling the wagons and cages along the country roads, for the circuses were nomadic caravansaries.

Nowadays the circuses travel on railroad tracks. The first day the first bills are posted until the day of the arrival of the circus is probably just as long as it used to be the little ones of the former generation.

The circuses of the present day are really traveling vendible shows with animal attachments. The menageries have become essential features of the show, but formerly the circuses consisted only of a few trained horses, men and women riders, a ringmaster, a single ring and a clown.

St. Patrick's church in the national capital has an institute for young men, a social and educational organization, called Carroll institute. Not long ago it gave public debates, public entertainments, and resort to all manner of churchly devices for maintaining themselves in an organization.

When ticket holders entered the door they stepped beneath the canvas. There was a ring with sawdust all over it, a center pole with acrobatic rigging attached to it, a small track and a discovered circus music, and the tiers of common board seats were soon filled with boys and girls, and a few old people.

When ticket holders entered the door they stepped beneath the canvas. There was a ring with sawdust all over it, a center pole with acrobatic rigging attached to it, a small track and a discovered circus music, and the tiers of common board seats were soon filled with boys and girls, and a few old people.

During the performance a typical hayseed greenhorn came walking about the ring. He was warned by the ringmaster that he must take care not to enter people could see the show. He paid no heed to the warning, and the policeman threw him out. As he went flying through the door, the big hayseed circled around and it seemed as though the hayseed had fallen down several flights of stairs.

This is a novel sort of performance, and it proved to be so attractive that it was repeated several times, to please the market. This fact suggested to the narrator the idea of a national capital, not merely as a national capital affair.

The clever clown who trained him knew that if he could show the hayseed that he was not a national capital affair, he would be able to get up novel entertainments for good purposes.

The first man in this country to attain distinction and fame in the circus business was Dan Rice, who reached his nineteenth year only a few months ago. His real name was Daniel McLaughlin, but he would be known to fame by his circus name.

When he was a young man traveling about race tracks he became known as an athletic and a tumbler, and was generally nicknamed "Dusty Dan," but why he took the name of Rice nobody has ever been able to ascertain.

One of the elderly men who attend the country circuses is the Carroll institute told a number of interesting things about Dan Rice, as we were walking down after the performance. He said that when quite a young man Dan Rice became known as a wrestler, boxer and prize fighter, and that his agility, strength and athletic sparring made him a formidable antagonist.

It is a matter of official record that in 1828 the Twenty-ninth legislature of Maryland addressed to witness a boxing match between Dan Rice and George Bennett, a celebrated fighting man of that day.

What do you think of a legislature addressing to witness a boxing match between Dan Rice and George Bennett, a celebrated fighting man of that day.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

St. Paul had a real kidnapping case and the police are all wrought up over the affair. A. L. Berry, who resides with M. Gagne, was out walking with the latter's little daughter, Eva.

A carriage drove up beside them and stopped. A man alighted, stepped up to Berry and struck him on the back of the head with a revolver.

Another man was in the carriage, however, and, closing the door, ordered the driver to proceed. In the meantime Berry and his young daughter were having a desperate time, but soon Berry felt a revolver at his head and was ordered to resist no longer.

He obeyed, and the kidnaper escaped, but before Berry had recognized him as Joseph Gagne, father of the child.

The Gagne family formerly lived in St. Paul. The father of the boy was an unhappy one and finally Mrs. Gagne secured a divorce and the custody of the little girl.

Climate and Crop Bulletin. In general, the wheat has been a very favorable one. Winter wheat is fair crop and nearly ready to harvest.

Spring wheat is heading as far north as the Red River valley counties, and in bloom in some southern counties. Oats are heading well. Barley is well headed and the heads are filling well.

The crop is a good one. Flax is in all stages of growth, the earliest is in blossom. In Big Stone and Freeborn counties something is causing flax plants to die. Rust is reported in some fields, and also some other crops.

Hay is generally a good crop, but there are localities where both clover and timothy are so poor that other crops will have to be used for provender.

George H. Christian of the Consolidated Milling company announced that the sale of the company's mills to the United States Milling company, otherwise known as the Melnyre flour trust, had practically been consummated.

The price agreed upon is understood to be $1,000,000. With this large capacity in the recently acquired Minneapolis Flour Manufacturing company plants, the Melnyre combine now has a total capacity of 600 barrels, or nearly one-third the capacity at the falls.

The transfer became possible through the purchase of large blocks of Northwestern Consolidated stock by parties interested in the new Northwestern company, lessee of the mills, who were in favor of Melnyre.

Three men employed by the George Tilton Flouring Mill company at St. Cloud went into the wheel pit to make repairs. One of them noticed the sand giving away in time to warn the others, and they beat a hurried retreat. They had a narrow escape, as the sand poured into the pit, and it looked for a time as if the dam would give way and the mill be destroyed.

Tons of bran and loads of hay were found in the hole and danger averted, but the banks were washed away for about 15 feet, and the mill will have to remain shut down about two months while repairs are being made.

News in Brief. Thirty-six applications for pardon have been filed with the prison board. During the first five days of July Minnesota furnished twelve recruits for the regular army.

The state treasury report at the close of business June 30 shows $497,738 in the general fund and $89,882 in the permanent educational funds, the first time the state has been able to get their loaned so low for a long time.

C. E. Elrod, pipeman in a Duluth sawmill, had his skull fractured by some shaffing in the mill. C. A. Thompson, agent of the New Brighton branch of the Humane society, arrested a man for overdriving his horse, and the man was taken to the New Brighton justice of the peace.

It is understood that the Pioneer Fuel company at Duluth will operate its reconstructed dock in that city by electric power in the future.

The steamer Sancy Kate, while steaming away from the docks at Lake Park, Minnesota, struck the steamer Hebe amidships, making a big hole in her side and sinking her.

Moohook calls in all warrants issued up to January, 1908—$17,000. Over 14,000 people have petitioned Mayor Gray to close the Minneapolis saloons on Sunday.

Edward O'Brien, state weighmaster, has announced the appointment of Andrew Harum, Minneapolis, to succeed J. H. Hart as weigher. Michael O'Reilly, who has been in the department 14 years, has been dropped from the pay roll.

Sunday prayer meetings have been inaugurated at the Northwestern shops at Winona. James Ford, of Owatonna, lost an eye by the premature explosion of a dynamite crater.

For the repair of the Winona normal school and the installation of a modern sanitary plant, contracts aggregating nearly $4,000 were let by District Engineer C. A. Moore.

Work on the Stillwater extension of the Twin City Rapid Transit line is being pushed as fast as the weather will permit, and it is expected that the road will be opened by Aug. 1. The Minneapolis retail druggists have been successful in their campaign for early closing. Closing Saturday stores will close at 6 o'clock.

BISHOP NEWMAN DEAD.

Venerable Old Man Passes into the Beyond After a Long Struggle for Life.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 6.—Bishop John P. Newman, of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, died at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

He was born in New York on September 1826, and joined the Episcopal conference in 1849. He was pastor for many years in the leading churches of New York, New Orleans and Washington, D. C. He was chaplain of the United States senate 1867. He has published several works. He was elected bishop in 1888, and presided at the River conference in 1890. He has been honored with appointments in foreign lands, giving an excellent opportunity for travel and study without personal expense.

He was in attendance upon Gen. Grant during his last illness, and died at the funeral of John A. Logan, and preached the funeral sermon on the occasion of the death of Senator Louis Stanton's son, receiving therefor a fee of $10,000. He presided at the general conference of his church, and was intrusted with many important missions. He was a brilliant orator and wrote many well-known works.

When the boys were stopped there was almost steam enough to pump water, and if there had been a fire the ladies would have had a stream of water on the building in short order. The last of the drives to go through here this year are at the Greeley farm and will be down here in a few days the weather permitting. They have come here to stay and if they sell you an animal and it proves to be different from what they represented, you can get your money on paper back. The PIONEER is pleased to announce that an acquisition is to be made to Pine City professional life in the establishment, on the 20th inst. of a branch law office of the St. Paul firm of McDonald, Kelley & Stobart, an established law firm of considerable reputation in the Saintly City. Offices have been secured in the second floor front of the Rybak block and as soon as the same are renovated, they will be well furnished, and a good library will be installed. The local office will be under the personal supervision of Mr. A. J. Stobart, who will shortly take up his residence in our midst. Mr. Stobart is Grand Vice Chancellor of the order of Knights of Pythias of state. Persons troubled with diarrhoea will be interested in the experience of Mr. W. M. Bush, clerk of Hotel Dorrance, Providence, R. I. He says: "For several years I have been almost a constant sufferer from diarrhoea, the frequent attacks completely prostrating me and rendering me unfit for my duties, at this hotel. About two years ago a traveling salesman kindly gave me a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy. Much to my surprise and delight its effects were immediate. Whenever I felt symptoms of the disease I would fortify myself against the attack with a few doses of this valuable remedy. The result has been very satisfactory and almost complete relief from the affliction." For sale by, J. Y. Breckenridge & Co., Druggist. It is a shame to think that Stillwater lumber men have a right to obstruct the river and lakes with booms and logs, so that when our team boats want to go up the river and haul they have either got to dodge around logs and jump booms or stay at the dock. Snake river from Pine City to Graston is a navigable stream and as we understand the law a person or corporation has no right to obstruct a navigable stream. The boom company should be compelled to leave the channel of the river free for the passage of boats. Loucks and Barnes our two steam boat men have lost quite a sum of money on account of the logs in the river, and if the lumber men are determined to obstruct the river they should be made to pay for every day they do so. For the Honor of His Word

His Fleur-de-lis was busy with gray company. The low ceiling room rang with calls and laughter and in the adjoining orchard men clad in all their most imposing finery sauntered up and down the rows of bushes set beneath the trees. There was to be a hunting party on the morrow and the landlord blessed his majesty and the guests and wished them good sport.

A heavy traveling coach with a broken wheel, which was the concern of the courtyard, seemed to arouse the curiosity of each newcomer, but the panels bore neither arms nor crests, and the landlord, who had been well paid, as he knew no more than that a lady and her attendants had halted there for rest and refreshment till the wheel should be repaired. The lady was coy, and kept to her chamber, though the gentleman, who loitered in the orchard, caught an occasional glimpse of her face at a window. None seemed to recognize her, save a courtier, who sat with a companion on a bench almost directly in front of the window. He had started with surprise when he saw her face, as she stood for a moment by the open window, and turning to his companion, he poured forth an eager story of piquant gossip.

"A country woman of those terrible Irish, by dear Montrevil, he concluded, 'who has flirted to the left of the dim cloisters of St. Germain. Heaven send you a battalion of such rather than a regiment of her bawling compatriots.'

"They say she is beautiful."

"I will hover tipped with dew."

"You are rapturously in love," said Montrevil, laughing. "Have you hopes in that quarter?"

"Nay, she threatens and scorns, and most truly. There is no chance of the light in her eyes as in those of all the fire-eating Irish who troop to fortune under the lilies of France. I like not such a woman."

"Oh!" laughed his companion. "The world Irish, then, have quelled your bold spirit?"

"I faith," retorted de Brousson, half angrily, "I fear none of those beggarly soldiers of fortune."

"And little need you, my fine bird, for their mighty or no-hospitality in the fortune you give them," said a voice behind them; and turning they saw the laughing face of an officer who wore the scarlet uniform of the men they vilified.

"You are impertinent, sir!" said de Brousson.

"Only familiar," remarked the newcomer, impertinently.

De Brousson was about to reply hotly when Montrevil interposed.

"Capt. Halloran," he said, "our acquaintance is too brief to spoil by quarrels."

Thady, still smiling, bowed. "It's hardly hot enough yet for spilling; but, gentlemen, it's mighty poor hospitality, if the stranger must hold his tongue, and let all the jesting be against him."

"True; but I would not have it said that Thady Halloran was backward in either."

The little breeze blown by the three sat amiably down together, Thady stating that he wanted a friend, a brother officer in the army.

"Join me, gentlemen, in a stoup of wine," he said, "for it is poor work laughing with a dry mouth."

His invitation was accepted, and presently they were served.

"Here with the flask drink to the lass. The man without either is only an ass—sang Thady. "And pray, my friends, what is this pretty piece of scound?"

"It came only in time to catch the sting in the tail of it."

"Ah, only d'Estrelles' latest conceit," answered de Brousson, "a fair countrywoman of yours. Fair, by Saint Louis, beyond the fairest. She rests even now in the inn."

"Oh," said Thady, carelessly, "von gentlemen of France are hard to resist, for you lay well your words in scattering words and jeweled galleys."

"I faith," d'Estrelles hath store of both," laughed de Brousson, "but I know not how he won her. He is in Spain, but she is in France, and is proof against all temptation, though it is whispered that the regiment which has cast longing looks that way."

"By Venus, there she is," he cried. "Our gay d'Estrelles' most faithful fair." And he pointed to where a lady stood by an open window.

Thady looked, and for a moment he sat as if turned to stone, for the face he saw was that of Kitty Ryan. Then with a rash blood went tingling through his veins, and he leapt to his feet.

"You lie!" he shouted. "She is the best and purest maid in Ireland."

De Brousson also sprang to his feet at the insult. "Then heaven keep his from your courtesans." "If these be your words, I hope your honor is brighter than your maid's."

For answer Thady's sword leapt from the scabbard, but ere the blades could cross, the landlord, drawing to the aid an uproar, was between them.

"Eris, sirs, would ye ruin me? Here is no place for brawl, but yonder is a pretty piece of lawn where gentlemen may play each other out comfortably and not run the reputation of an honest house."

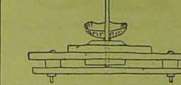

The two men were in no mood to brook interference, but Montrevil stepped upon them, and with a bold point out the place he recommended. The latter, all polite anxiety, bustled before them to a level spot of ground.

"Diamond, forgive me, I am, I'm trying to give myself the lie, I am, and the reckless fighter, the desperate challenger, flung himself downward on the grass, and burst into a flood of bitter tears.—Chicago Herald.

FARM-GARDEN

SHADE FOR CULTIVATOR.

An Arrangement Which Prevents Weeds from the Field, and Being Overcome by the Heat.

Having a large, strong cotton umbrella having a stout handle, without knob or look at the end. Take a two-by-four board three feet long and bore a hole a little larger in diameter than the handle of the umbrella in the center of the board and about two-thirds through. Take a block (two-by-four) a foot long and bore a corresponding hole in each end and the spikes to the first in such a way that the hole will correspond. Take another block somewhat shorter and do likewise with it, thus making a hole six inches deep. This is used as a socket for the umbrella handle. By wedging it can be held firmly in place.

The shade is now ready to be mounted on the cultivator. Much depends on the kind of frame the cultivator has as to

SILKWORMS IN IOWA.

The Experiments of an Italian at Des Moines Have Proved Successful So Far.

Mark Chiesia, an Italian, is successfully raising silkworms at Des Moines. The eggs were brought from Italy by a relative. Two years ago he made the experiment first, but the person who brought the eggs carried them in his pocket and they hatched on the way, so the worms had to be thrown into the sea. This time the person to whom the eggs were entrusted suspended them from strings so that they got cool air on the ocean and on the railway train. Arriving here, they were put into cold storage until the mulberry leaves were sent for them. Then upon being put into a warm room, they hatched in one day.

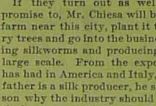

Of the supposed 4,000 eggs from ten silk moth eggs, about 4,000 hatched, which result, Mr. Chiesia says, is better than the average in Italy. The greatest difficulty has been to find mulberry leaves for the worms. They eat about three wagonloads a day, and never stop eating for a minute, but eat all the time, day and night. The worms, in devouring the mulberry leaves, make a noise like rain on the roof. By lively hunting for food, the worms have been provided, and they are well developed and healthy, about three inches long, and are just beginning to weave their cocoons. These seem to be no reason why the industry should not succeed here. Mr. Chiesia has brought a worm from Italy who has had 30 years' experience in raising silkworms, and they are doing as well as any she ever saw.

The experiment is the first that is known to have been made in Iowa, and is certainly the first that has been successful. It has attracted as much attention as a circus in this city, and the number of visitors is very large. The owner is a good-natured man and he cheerfully and proudly shows the industrious 4,000 to all who care to see them.

If they turn out as well as they promise, Mr. Chiesia will buy a large farm near this city, plant it to mulberry trees, and raise silkworms, and produce silk on a large scale. From the experience he has had in America and Italy, where his father is a silk producer, he sees no reason why the industry should not be successful in Iowa.—N. Y. Sun.

MAKING A DERRICK.

For Stacking Hay on One Here Described as the Most Effective and Highly Recommended.

The material for the derrick, as illustrated, is as follows: If the pole can be secured in the near-by woods, only the labor in securing it stands against it. The pole is of one and a half feet square, but on runners, frame, top and bottom. The pole for sling use should be 30 feet long; long boom, 17 feet—short end, four feet.

If they turn out as well as they promise, Mr. Chiesia will buy a large farm near this city, plant it to mulberry trees, and raise silkworms, and produce silk on a large scale. From the experience he has had in America and Italy, where his father is a silk producer, he sees no reason why the industry should not be successful in Iowa.—N. Y. Sun.

the mode of attaching it. There is such a variety of cultivators that it would be useless to describe any particular one. In almost every case, however, the machine are put up in such a way that by taking a two-by-four corresponding in length to the longest of the standard, boring half-inch holes in the ends of each and putting in bolts six or eight inches in length the device can be securely fastened. Set the standard in the desired position across the frame. Then beneath the frame put the second two-by-four. Put in the bolts and tighten up the nuts as much as possible. If desired, more than two bolts can be put in, but two will prove sufficient on most machines. Most machines have the seat back of the shade, instead of in front of it, as shown in the illustration.

There may be some other mode that will suit the machine you are using. If, to use it, it is folly to endanger life and health by overheating and sunstroke, when a trilling expense and a little work will insure safety and comfort. The only great difficulty is to find a pole of the shade is not great with a good breeze blowing. The umbrella may then be taken down or lowered.—American Agriculturist.

DRAINING BARNYARDS.

How the Lots Can Be Kept Sweet and Dry at All Seasons of the Year.

There is a commonly received opinion that tile drains do not work well in barnyards, for the reason that the tramping of the surface will puddle the earth to the extent that the water will not get down into the drains. In our Drainage Journal, to some extent this is true, but tile drains will drain the underlying earth and prevent the water in the barnyard from getting so deep. We have found that three or four drains well located in the barn lot, the number depending on the size of the lot, will serve a good purpose in keeping the foundation firm. It then gravel the surface where I expect the stock to tramp most. By so doing the surface soil gets firm and free from slippy mud, and we have no deep mud. It is all a mistake to think that tiling does no good. The water from the eaves may be caught in gutters and conducted down to a tile drain and carried away, without affecting in any way the barn lot. It requires a little common sense in siting and graveling to have a dry barn lot. But there are some who would not feel at home unless they could approach their barn and stable by stepping from one piece of a rail or board to another, getting to the door with a hop, skip and a jump. It would be so unnatural otherwise. There are some people, however, who prefer dry land, and we write for their benefit. As for the other fellows they can roll up their trousers and wade through.

Most of the complaint about manure being washed away is due to leaving it under the eaves of the barn for the water to fall upon it and wash it away. Here have the water carried away with gutters entering into down pipes connected with the drains. By so doing you have a dry barn lot.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

The medium-sized potato, smooth, even-shaped and free from scab, is the best to plant.

A peck of common soil to 100 hills of sprangus will increase the yield, improve the quality and prolong the season.

A deep, fine soil is not so easily affected by drought as one that is rough hard or lumpy. Fine tilage plays, either in the field or garden.

A dollar's worth of paint well rubbed in, will save five dollars' worth of farm implements. Rub the handles and wood work of small tools with linseed oil.

Mixed gardening is what will bring a sure revenue in New Jersey. A vegetable plant enough of everything for home use, and as much more as you have land for.

Run your farm to make a living from it. Do not get far from a good soil, and one and make some money besides. If you farm to make money alone it is doubtful if you get either.

Concentrate your working capital, have your eye fixed on one-half the acres you are now tilling, and see if farming does not pay better dividends and cost less trouble.—Western Ploverman.

Editor for Soil Test.

Experiments in New Jersey have shown the great value of sulphur, which leads all other substances in checking the soil rot in sweet potatoes. It having proved most effective in destroying this disease, you can afford to use it. Four or five peckers were used, and the test carried on for five years on the same soil, which was badly infested with the rot. The increase from sulphur was nearly three times that of the plots where no sulphur was used. The increase of salable sweet potatoes was 50 per cent, and the increased profit at 10 cents per bushel was $40 per acre.

Curious Custom.

In China it is the custom for guests at dinners to run around between the courses. This is supposed to keep the diner's digestion in good condition, but the nervous bustling attendant means something else, and there is nothing better than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. If a man or woman is suffering with constipation, indigestion, or any such ailment, it's their fault if they don't get Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure them. See that a private revenue stamp covers the neck of the bottle.

Comparing Notes.

"My husband," said the little lady, with pardonable pride, "has had a season set in the highest priced theater in the city."

"A fine thing," replied the other. "My husband bought a seat in the United States Senate and it cost more than the whole theater you're talking about."
