

SPANISH GARRISONS IN THE PHILIPPINES

THEY WERE INvariably SMALL DURING ALL THE THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS OF SPANISH RULE.

The Philippine islands have consistently shown one trait of character ever since they have come to the notice of the civilized people of the world, and that is to run away from battle when confronted even by the merest handful of men.

The islands were conquered without loss to the Spanish. The natives generally were friendly and quiet, and had the Spanish concerned themselves with administering justice they would have had little trouble.

towns and churches, captured many natives and enslaved ten Spanish, including a priest and a woman. The Sangley or Chinese insurrection occupied the attention of the government in the summer of 1663, with a loss of about 20 Spanish. Later in the fall all the Sangleys were captured and killed in their fort, a short distance from Manila, except 20, who were put in the galleys. Altogether 23,000 Chinese were killed. The Mindanao men continued their naval and land forays for many years. In 1624 they burned many towns within 40 miles of Manila.

M QUAD'S FUN. SELF-INVITED GUESTS. What a Country Housewife Think About Unannounced Visitors From the City.

Women living in the country find the problem of invited guests from the city a rather vexing one. While we all have dear friends or relatives that we are glad to entertain, there are a few of us who do not know what it is to be called upon to entertain a certain people from the city who only come to see us because we live in the country, and they want somewhere to go.

"I have in mind two families who live together with their children. The son's wife had been sick for some time, and was just able to be about again. There were several little children, requiring much care, and the mother-in-law was so weak that she could do little more than swallow those things," said the colonel.

"Malaria is what breeds child and fever," explained the colonel. "Oh, no, that's not it. I must be round here, then, though we ain't worryin' any."

"I know a number of instances where city folks have written to friends or relatives in the country, saying: 'The children need a change of air, and we have decided to send them to you. Please meet them at the station on such a day.' So they send them, without asking or caring whether they are to be entertained and housed without help. They did not hesitate to make their wishes known as to what they wished to eat, where they wanted to sleep, and how they wished to be entertained, and they returned home offended because things had not turned out as they thought they would."

It was in front of a general store at a business crossroads. A farmer rode up on a mule just as a second rode up on a horse. Each got down and spent 20 minutes inspecting the other's animal. They then the first one slowly queried:

"Wall, Henry, how'll ye trade?" Henry sat down on a salt barrel and drew out a pipe. He looked very serious. "I've lived here all my life, and I've seen a thousand people go long this road, but you are the first critter who has gone at it to upset me and make me feel disconcerted and unhappy."

Do's He Over the Date. The orthodox condition in which Americans are at the present time is a chief cause, according to an authority, of the scant, brittle and premature gray hair of which many American women complain. It is due to dry luxuriant hair, such as dwellers in most climates possess. The increasing gray hair among women is due to the fact that doors is helpful, but the same authority is urging as much outdoor air as possible during the summer months. It is not unreported to her. It is not unreported to her. It is not unreported to her.
