WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, SEPTEMBER 2 1901.

A welcome relief from the monotonous twanging of the single string of a naval controversy has been provided here. Two subjects of the first importance have been revived through reports that cannot fail to attract national attention. One is Governor-General Wood's comprehensive review of progress in Cuba; the other Captain Charles D. Sigsbee's annual notes on the advancement of the world's navies, the increase of their tonnage, etc.

† † †

There is no topic more interesting to Americans at the present than that of Cuban development. The cost in blood and treasure for the emancipation of the infant nation so near our shores, along with the hope of the United States that the islanders will move themselves worthy of the sacrifice, has caused the people to follow the trend of Cuban affairs almost as closely as they do an American state.

† † †

General Wood's report is voluminous but the questions presented demand thorough treatment. It is convincing and earnest. It is an intelligent summary of the efforts made for the purification and betterment of the population. In brief, General Wood's document recommends fuller reciprocity with the United States, without which, he says, the thorough development of the island will be impossible. He explains that the American authorities, with native assistance, have abolished many petty offices. These increased the tax burden unnecessarily and militated against a proper centralization of power and responsibility. The objection to curtailment in this direction met with protests, inspired more by personal losses than regard for the common weal.

† † †

A gratifying feature of the situation is that fewer police are required in towns. The progress of the island's agriculture, the root of its prosperity, is marked. The first large sugar crop since the war will be harvested next spring, and the products already sold, or nearly ready for the market, seem to furnish a guarantee that Cuban municipalities will soon be able to assume obligations connected with new public works. Under American protection and encouragement, prison-abuses have been largely eliminated. The hospital system has become practical. Rules and regulations to govern municipal elections have been drawn up, principally for the purpose of preventing the control of government machinery by extremists, who in the past have proved incapable of dealing with the predicaments of their own creation.

† † †

One of the conspicuous reforms has been the inauguration of a modern system of law and jurisprudence. The Cubans, through bitter experience, learned that under the Spanish regime, there was one code for the rich and another for the poor. The Americans have endeavored to establish equality of justice. Natives of all classes are beginning to realize that ancient and injurious practices have passed out. That Americans are the champions of fair play, and that under their plan of civilization no man is too humble to demand justice when he asks for a hearing. Although the new order of things is radical, the reform is not complete. It is hoped, however, that time will bring it nearer to perfection.

† † †

In other respects, General Wood has reviewed the Cuban situation in a manner that cannot fail to interest and enlighten all his countrymen who follow developments outside their immediate boundaries.

† † †

The conspicuous position of the American Navy and its officers renders the information compiled and presented by Captain Sigsbee more than ordinarily interesting. It will enlighten the layman and stimulate the expert for speculation as to the probable outcome of the rivalry for the mastery of the seas. The Chief Intelligence Officer of our navy summarizes the work of leading governments in the creation of fighting vessels. It is shown that, of the foreign powers, Great Britain has made the largest additions to her war fleet during the past year. Russia, Germany and France have not lagged far in the rear. Japan, too, has made progress characterized by Lieut. Phelps as "enormous." The Yankees of the Orient has plans for the near future that promise to place the navy of the Mikado near the top-notch of efficiency and on an equality with several of his leading rivals.

In view of the reported encroachments of Russia in the Far East, the conspicuous naval activity of Japan cannot escape comment.

† † †

While it is not possible in limited space to review the statistics furnished by Captain Sigsbee, it may be noted that the nations are lavish in their expenditures to strengthen their sea-fighting arms. As usual, this feverish preparation for war, seems only an additional guarantee of peace between world-powers.

† † †

Rear Admiral Howison, who was appointed as a member of the Court of Inquiry which is to determine whether or not Rear Admiral Schley was remiss in the performance of his duty at Santiago during the operations resulting in the defeat of Cervera, has denied the allegation that he criticized Schley in an interview given to a Boston newspaper writer. Rear Admiral Howison expresses his willingness to either withdraw from the tribunal or aid in clearing up the controversial cloud that has involved the American Navy. The publication of the Howison correspondence by the Acting Secretary of the Navy will, it is expected, produce a full in the discussion of the relative merits of rear admirals and others.

† † †

After a lethargic summer at the White House, the attachés are beginning to prepare for the return of the President and Mrs. McKinley. It is said that numerous matters of importance are demanding the presence of Mr. McKinley in Washington and that the Executive will soon return to his Capital home.
