WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, January 26th, 1903.

What promises to constitute the greatest triumph in the present administration was accomplished in Washington last Saturday afternoon when Secretary of State Hay and Sir Michael Herbert signed a treaty providing for the final settlement of the Alaskan boundary difficulty, the last occasion of dispute between Great Britain and the United States. Three eminent jurists are to be appointed by each of the treating countries and the six will constitute a joint commission by the decision of which each is bound by treaty to abide. The settlement of this last remaining dispute between Great Britain and this country removes every ground for difference between the two nations and makes for that perfect harmony which has been the object of Secretary Hay ever since he took charge of the diplomatic relations of the United States.

Congress now has before it a carefully considered skillfully drawn and conservative anti-trust bill, which while it would not injure any so called trust doing a legitimate business would, if placed on the statutes and enforced, prevent the unjust and nefarious practices which have in the past operated to build up gigantic monopolies and drive competitors out of the market. The bill reported by the House Judiciary committee has received the approval of the Attorney General who states that it contains provisions which are needful to the proper prosecution of the present law against trade discrimination and that it in no instance violates the Constitution of the United States. While the democrats will urge the adoption of more drastic provisions than those contained in the proposed law, they will support it in lieu of something more in accord with their ideas.

Briefly, the proposed law provides for publicity for corporations doing an interstate business, prohibits rebates or discrimination in rates and service by transportation companies and forbids conspiracy, cutting prices, etc., with a view to ruining competitors. Reviewing the measure, Representative Powers of Massachusetts said to your correspondent "It lies fully within the constitutional authority of Congress, but it marks a distinct advance in the legislation already provided to prevent rebates and discrimination and the destruction of competition by large corporations and combinations. Publicity for corporate statistics is left largely in the discretion of the Interstate Commerce Commission which will not make public such facts and figures as could be used to the disadvantage of legitimate enterprises. No corporation is endangered by the provisions of the bill unless it is engaged in operations in violation of the law now on the statute or of its spirit."

The Littlefield anti-trust bill will doubtless pass the House at an early date with few dissenting votes. It remains to be seen, however, what the Senate will do with it. It is well known that the upper chamber contains champions—it might almost be written creatures—of the great corporate interests of the country and they are to be found in both parties. Under the rules of Senate a few men are all powerful; and the question which now interests the vast army of consumers is whether the Senate will permit an adequate and effectual trust bill to be placed on the statutes.

When the Senate first convened this winter the leaders were unanimous in their statements that there would be no anti-trust legislation. Later the President announced that if there were none he would call Congress in extra session. Then the leaders experienced a change of heart and announced that there would be some "statutory revision" but that the Senate would await the action of the House. When the House had about concluded its anti-trust bill, framed in accordance with and almost under the personal supervision of the Attorney General, three new trust measures were announced as in preparation in the Senate committee. One of these has been reported and referred back to the Interstate Commerce committee. Are these Senate measures intended to complicate the situation and "head off" the House bill? Is the question everyone in touch with the situation is asking.

Much has been made of the Statehood deadlock in the Senate but within the past week the supporters of the Statehood bill have demonstrated that they have a majority of the Senate with them, thus placing the opponents of the Omnibus bill in the position of filibusters. Senator Quay and his friends are ready for a vote at any time and have so announced. They have proven the futility of further debate on the question and made evident the fact that the opposition is either determined to filibuster until the 4th of March or to avail themselves of the Statehood debate to prevent all legislative enactment at this session.

The Cuban treaty is on the executive calendar of the Senate and merely awaits an opportunity for ratification. That a sufficient number of Senators favor the convention to insure its ratification is now certain. When there will be an executive session of sufficient duration to permit its further consideration rests with the opponents of the Statehood bill.

The treaty with Columbia has finally and unexpectedly been concluded and has been sent to the Senate. By its provisions the United States is to pay a bonus to Columbia of $10,000,000 and an annual rental of $250,000 beginning five years after the mutual ratification of the treaty. At the end of sixty years the entire property of the Panama Railroad Company will revert to the United States. This country will collect and retain all tonnage and other fees collected, not only on the canal but also in the ports of Colon and Panama.

The M. A. Godney Pickle Co. have an agent in this vicinity scouring the county to see how many acres of pickles he can get contracts for. He reports that he has no trouble in securing contracts with the farmers as those who contracted one acre last year want contracts for three or four this, and those that would not have one last year are more than anxious to get the chance this season. He says, if the balance of the farmers that he has not seen do as well as those he has seen there will be many more pickles brought to this place next fall than there was last. We are pleased to know that the farmers are satisfied with the pickle factory and that it is a benefit to them. As some of the wiseheads around town said, "that this year there would not be half as many contracts for pickles, and that the bonus that the village gave would be money thrown away."

Some Attractions at the Poultry Meeting. The exhibit of the Minnesota Poultry Association at Minneapolis is reported to be the finest in quality ever shown in Minnesota. Twenty-two hundred birds, including chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, etc. are entered. In addition 800 pigeons and 300 blooded cats are to be presented to the judges.

The concession of a fare and one-third in rate made by the railroad companies has attracted a large number of out of town visitors. Those together with the liberal support of Minneapolis and St. Paul are bound to bring up the attendance to a record mark before the closing nights next Tuesday.

Several pair of valuable chickens and homing pigeons will be given away, also a $25 Angora cat.

The star exhibit is that of Albino Boy, the famous $1,000 pigeon who has a record of 1,000 miles in eight days and twenty-four minutes. It required a good deal of finess to secure this bird, and while on exhibition he will be in a cage locked and sealed by a representative of the national association. It was first necessary to get the consent of the national racing secretary at Washington. The owner in Indianapolis then consented. After the managers of the Minnesota association had given guarantee of safe return Albino Boy was finally started for Minneapolis. Albino Boy stands in the pigeon world as Dan Patch does among horses.

Another exhibit is that of a pair of silkies, or bantams with wool covering in place of feathers, and with blue combs and wattles. Special interest is attracted thus far by the half cat and half rabbit animal. Only one exists as the owner of the litter destroyed all but one of the freaks.

The association has on exhibition everything from a bantam hen to a 25 pound bronze turkey.

THE DAIRY

CHEAP FODDER STORAGE.

An Idea That Should Be Tested by All Farmers Who Have a Big Supply of Stover.

Stover requires comparatively tight storage room to keep it until wanted for feed. Stacked in a windy country before it can settle to the ground, it is liable to become scattered to the four winds. A very satisfactory method, according to a writer in Ohio Farmer, is to build a simple, open-sided structure, in a board floor, and run the staves into it, packing down as close as possible. When filled, cover over with matched roof boards, a tarpaulin, slough grass or anything that will turn the rain. As the material packs very close of itself and is very impervious to rain, it will keep the stover in the best condition. The method described and illustrated by the same writer combines cheapness with the "self-feeder" idea. The crib is made of the smallest possible ribbing as used by the farmers in the west when their crops are larger than their crib room. The slating is made usually in five and six foot widths and two ties up, making the combined height from ten to 12 feet. A floor of boards is put in and the bottom tier of slating fastened to the supporting posts five or six inches from the floor boards, which should project two or three feet outside the slating. The cattle will pick up clean all the feed they will pull out through the space between the boards and slating. When no more can be reached by the cattle, the space around the bottom can be filled by the attendant of the stock with an iron rod sharpened and bent into a hook at the end.

STOVER CRIB AND SELF-FEEDER.

CHANGE IN MILKERS.

It should Be Avoided, If Possible, as It Affects the Cow's Temper and Milk Yield.

There is a great difference in the effect that a change of milkers will have upon different cows. Some will submit perfectly to milking by almost every one who approaches them, but no cow will milk equally well with all persons. Some will milk with ease and fear, or battle nervously with three out of five persons who try to milk them. They will often refuse to yield their milk to any but the regular milker to whom they are accustomed.

Owners of dairies cannot well overlook this preference of the cows for certain milkers. It is a preference that is based on nerves, and neither the cow nor the milker can control it. The cow in perfect nerve accord with the attendant will show few feelings by her actions. She will lay her head against the one whom she likes. When one whom she does not like approaches her, she shows her dislike by standing perfectly still or by turning away her head, or by moving away.

The Hollanders and the Jersey islanders, those masters of dairying, understand this characteristic of their cows, and they make much of their knowledge. They accustom their magnificent cows to personal touch, to the human presence, to the voice, to the caressing and coddling and caressing. The results are seen in the perfect animals they produce, the highest types of quality and capacity known in the dairy world.

DAIRY AND LIVE STOCK

A thrifty calf and a healthy boy are very much alike in some respects. Both are chook full of mischief and always hungry. Do not turn a cow off just because she is old. The question of usefulness is far more important than that of age. Not that we should be swayed from our best judgment by sentiment. The butter tub tells the story. Milking at five o'clock in the afternoon of one day and seven of another is the surest way to serve notice on the cow that you do not care whether she does her best or not. If you fall on your part, she will certainly not work hard to keep up her part of the bargain.—Farm Journal.

Sugar Beet Pulp for Cows.

A publication of the department of agriculture says: "Prof. Thomas Shaw expresses the belief that sugar beets can be fed more advantageously to cattle and sheep than they are being fattened than to dairy cows. The New York Corners experiment station, however, found that this material gave good results with milk cows, the dry matter (solids) in it being about equal in value to that in corn silage. German experiments with beet pulp for cows have also given good results, the flow of milk being maintained in a satisfactory manner. Some Danish experiments have shown that as compared with mangels, the butter produced on sugar beet pulp was about equal in quality and kept fully as well. Where large quantities of the pulp were fed the cream required to be churned a few minutes longer."

CAUSES GREAT LOSS.

Instructive Information Concerning Aphous Fever, or Foot and Mouth Disease.

The outbreak of aphous fever, commonly known as foot-and-mouth disease, among cattle in several New England States, with a fatal case of widespread human infection, says the Rural New Yorker, as the disease is highly contagious among warm-blooded animals and is known to be transmissible to humans under certain conditions of exposure, but such infection is really so rare and not to be worth consideration. Like many other plagues and pests it came to this country originally from somewhere Europe. Though seldom fatal, aphous fever causes great loss in reducing the flesh and vitality of the animals attacked, but particularly through the interference of commerce by the rigid quarantine measures to limit an epidemic of this serious affliction. The average loss of flesh in horses attacked by aphous fever is estimated at nearly $10 each, and in dairy cows much more. The disease is primarily a skin affection, and appears on the feet, about the mouth, udder and feet, developing severe and extensive blisters about these parts. The blisters on the feet are especially dangerous, for they are the source of great damage in neglected cases, especially among hogs and sheep. The most efficient treatment consists in the local application of antiseptics and should always be given by a competent veterinarian. The infection of aphous fever appears to be entirely transmitted by direct contact with disease products and chiefly affects humans through milk from sick animals, when it may produce dangerous irritation of the intestines. It is plain the most radical means should be taken to stamp out the disease on its first appearance and limit its outbreak to the smallest possible territory, and it is in every case a fit subject for control by local health boards. Aphous fever is one of a small group of diseases, communicated to man by domestic animals, among which rabies or dog madness is the most common and distressing. Glanders a crime, who because they are poor and cannot be bled, are put behind the bars, while we know many criminals are at liberty. It is possible in Massachusetts to keep an innocent man in jail for ten years if he happens to witness a crime and does not have money enough so that he may be set free on bail.

SANITARY COW TIE.

It is Made of Chain and Thoroughly Clean, and for this Reason Highly Recommended.

The cleanest possible way to fasten a cow in the stall is by the chain tie. Dirt and microbes do not adhere readily to a chain that is in motion. Another very important advantage is the freedom of motion allowed the cow. The uprights (b) are 1 1/2 in. gas pipe.

EXCELLENT COW TIE

Rings (a) permit the cow to raise or lower her head or to move sideways the width of the stall, while she cannot move ahead or back more than the length of the chain. The uprights (b) look into the other end of the collar chain, rendering it impossible for the cow to get loose. A cement rail (c) forms the back part of the cage, and the gas pipe uprights (a) are set. The uprights (c) are shown four feet apart, but this distance should be governed by the size of the cow. The floor is shown at c, sloping to the gutter in the usual way.—F. A. Converse, in Farm and Home.

HAMPERED BY DEAD LAWS.

Courts in General Are Embarrassed by Statutes That Are of No Effect.

How about the administration of justice? Did you ever think how justice "is dispensed with" as Mrs. Partridge says, in our courts? Is there a court for and what does it actually do? What governs us? Dead men's laws that dead men made and thousands of precedents that dead men established, with a cumbersome and complicated machinery of law, have caused our courts to be the despair of all except the unjust and the rich and the powerful, says Willshire's Magazine. Mr. Lawyer, how can you have the face to sneer at an orthodox minister? You are a thousand times more bigoted than he is; he has had some modern thoughts, but your business has allowed you to have none. Tell me, if you can, what real, vital, vigorous improvement of the most in the administration of our courts of justice while the world has fairly leaped along in other respects, even in religious improvement of the most superstitious denominations that exist in America? I believe that the administration of our courts is vastly to be improved. One lawyer is always an advocate of injustice in every case that is tried. There are not many people who could afford to go to law. I am not impugning our judges and our juries, but they, with our courts and our lawyers, are all parts of a system that grinds the souls out of men. Judges and juries are just as good in their way as preachers or manufacturers or workmen are in theirs. They look at an ordinary case in our courts all through its very length of one, two, three, four, sometimes five, ten and even 30 years, and how wicked and ridiculous is to call that justice. We even imprison our witnesses—innocent men who are unfortunate enough to witness a crime, who because they are poor and cannot be bled, are put behind the bars, while we know many criminals are at liberty. It is possible in Massachusetts to keep an innocent man in jail for ten years if he happens to witness a crime and does not have money enough so that he may be set free on bail.

A CLEVER "TIP" COMBINE.

Waitress and Stenographer Unite in a Little Scheme for Catching the Coin.

"One clever waitress in a restaurant downtown can beat anybody I ever saw getting tips," said a salesman, according to the New York Herald. "It was only by accident that I found out her little game, but I was curious and went there often, so now I know how she manages it."

"The tables she served were patronized mostly by men. As it was more of a 'quick lunch' place, the patrons were not very liberal with tips. This waitress was a nice, genteel sort of a person, with curly hair and baby eyes. She and another girl, a stenographer, formed a little partnership and started out with a capital of 25 cents."

"The stenographer was pretty and possessed a superior style and manner. She would enter the restaurant during rush hours, select a chair at one of her partner's tables, and always endeavor to find a place near a most prosperous looking man in sight. Of course, each day there would be strange faces and another audience to play to."

"After she had finished her luncheon she would calmly hand the waitress a quarter and the waitress would look exceedingly grateful and happy. Nobody would ever surmise by the innocent faces of those girls that they were putting up a bunco game."

"Of course, it was the most natural thing in the world for the men around the tables to notice, and nothing could be out to be outdone by a woman. Consequently, the gentleman sitting next to her would have a quarter at his place, and the others would all sit around feeling like 30 cents. Some of them would part with a dime, just to keep up appearances, and some of them wouldn't give a cent; but as a rule the little game worked."

"All the money received from this source would go into a convenient pocket and the proceeds were divided equally at the end of the week. Of course, the 'decoy' quarters came out of the capital and went back into the business. It is an actual fact that those girls are putting money in the bank."

He Knows 'Jack Frost.'

It was the first bitter cold day of the winter, and the kindergarten was animatedly discussing the advent of "Jack Frost." Finally the teacher said, with an air of mystery: "I wonder if anyone can tell us what Jack Frost really is?" Silence for a moment, then Louis' black eyes began to twinkle, and he gave a little wriggle of joy. "That's just what I know. I know what's Jack Frost. He's the jee-man!"—N. Y. Tribune.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP. RELEASED BY PE-RU-IA.

Congressman Geo. H. White's Case. A Noted Sculpless Cured.

The world of medicine recognizes Grip as epidemic catarrh.—Medical Talk.

A GRIPPE is epidemic catarrh. It spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper, the masses and the classes are alike subject to a grippe. None are exempt—all are liable. Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip got you? Grip is well named. The original French term, la grippe, has been shortened by the busy American to read "grip." Without intending to do a new word has been coined that exactly describes the case. As if some hideous giant with awful Grip had clutched us in its fatal clasp. Men, women, children, whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of a terrible monster.

Pe-Ru-IA for Grip. Mrs. Theophile Schmidt, wife of the Ex-Secretary of the German Consulate, writes the following letter from 3417 Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill. "I suffered this winter with a severe attack of a grippe. After using three bottles of Pe-Ru-IA I found the grip had disappeared."—Mrs. T. Schmidt.
