TROPHY IS SAVED BY THE RELIANCE

American Yacht Wins Final Race with Shamrock III in the Com-test for the Cup.

Victory is a Decisive One, the De-feted Yacht Being So Far in the Lead That She Did Not Consider
It Necessary to Cross Finishing Line.

New York, Sept. 4.—The Reliance, the American cup defender, on Tuesday won the third and final race and the series for that famous sea trophy, the America's cup. In a dense fog which prevented vision beyond 200 yards, the Reliance beat the Shamrock III by 100 yards in the final race at 9:30 a.m., thus becoming the first American yacht ever to win the cup.

After striving for nine years to be appointed a skipper in the Luverne county (Ia.) court, Harry Bullock, aged 54, yesterday came into his own at last, when the object of ambition was his. He was suddenly stricken with heart disease after learning that he had received the coveted job, and the physicians who attended him said that death was caused by syncope resulting from overwork.

From Calumet county, Michigan, there comes to the Smithsonian Institution a sensational story of the invasion of that county by an army of 5,000 rats in one pack. A big gray rat is said to be leading the vast array of rodents. Michigan papers depicted considerable scenes of terror, panic, reverence, and some Battle Creek citizens who have become interested in the migration have written to the Smithsonian institution for an explanation of possible.

Senator Foraker, of Ohio, is an enthusiastic fisherman, and recently put in some happy days seeking the coys trout in the neighborhood of Hot Springs, Va. A friend who was with him declares that the salmon is one of those fish which can be easily recognized, "In fact," he adds, "no one could convince me that Grover Cleveland himself can land a bigger string in the same time than Joe Foraker. He had no trouble in getting two fish to my one, and I'm not amateur."

The microbes of lockjaw or of other diseases, the venom of snakes, the virus of smallpox or the vegetable poisons may be successfully converted into weapons of war, but they will never prevail. Neither the heat nor the friction in firing destroys them, whether they are on the ball, in the powder, in the wad or smeared within the gun barrel. In the powder they are carried on unburnt grains, which make up 40 per cent in every charge of powder exploded.

The champion money finder is Isaac Banks, of Philadelphia, and he holds the championship because he was, until recently, the manager of the investment service, doorkeeper of the vaults of the Fidelity Trust Co. He found and returned to the owners about $2,000,000. His largest find was $100,000, and for it he return got a $100,000 fee, while he returned half what he has never since received anything but studied disbursements.

Aerial navigation is a certainty of the immediate future, if the plans of an aerial navigation company do not go wrong. When the big ship is completed it is expected to start for New York from San Francisco, where it is now under construction. Coming along as the crow flies, this vessel will make the long journey over mountain tops and plains in 26 hours, if all goes well. It will be 228 feet in length and 56 feet in diameter. Its weight will be 13,000 pounds.

A fatal parasitic disease has been successfully used on a large scale to destroy the grasshoppers, another for locusts, and now for rats and mice. It has already been used for the discovery of an insect which will destroy the cotton boll weevil. These success made Dr. Stile's proposition to destroy mosquitoes by applying the same idea with the same success, certain, which now destroy millions of them by developing in their abdomens and making them sterile and short-lived, possible.

Constituent and heretofore unknown of the Congress has been made to submit a bill to the House of Representatives for the purpose of authorizing the Secretary of War to call into the service of the confederate army, entering as a Lieutenant and rising to the rank of brigadier general. After the war he will be given a pension, to be paid in Congress from 1870 to 1883 as the democratic representative from the Eleventh district of his native state, after which he was elected several times to be clerk of the house of representatives, and finally to retirement in public life. He has remained in Washington or on a farm in Maryland.

GREET THE PRESIDENT.

Roosevelt Accorded a Magnificent Reception and Passes Busy Day in Syracuse, N. Y.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 8.—President Roosevelt on Monday was accorded a magnificent reception by the citizens of his own state. From the moment of his arrival in this city at 9:30 a.m. until he stepped aboard his special train at 10:30 to begin his return trip to Oyster Bay he was given a continuous ovation. Syracuse never before had such a throng as assembled here to greet the president. Fully 100,000 persons from all sections of New York state tested the carrying capacity of the various lines of railroad, and many thousands more came from the country contiguous to the city, to anywhere in the city, and at the grounds of the New York State Fair association, the president was received with notable enthusiasm. As he drove through the streets the tens of thousands of persons banked along the roadside with banners and the American flag floated in the breeze from almost every window.

For the president it was a busy day as well as a day full of interesting incidents.

Upon his arrival he reviewed a military parade in front of the State Fair grounds.

WASHINGTON EVENTS

Coming Retirement of Secretary Root Is of Great Importance.

STRONG MAN OF THE CABINET

Has Restored the War Department to Prominence—Able Successor Will Be Found in Gov. Taft—Datto Pershing."

Elihu Root.

Washington.—Of all the happenings of the Roosevelt administration there is none which is likely to have a greater influence on his fortunes than the coming retirement of Secretary Root, which will take place at the beginning of the new year. Until the president himself, the secretary of war has been the strong man of the administration, as solicitor general of the department of justice.

It was as solicitor general that Root first had an opportunity to distinguish himself. He was a young fellow then in the early thirties and he had not been in office six months before he was one of the best known and best liked officials of the government. He had the secret of getting along with the secretary of state, and yet at the same time he was winning his way among the leaders and establishing himself as a lawyer of unusual promise. The promise he displayed then he has more than fulfilled.

Datto Pershing's Philippine Record.

A modest hero whose name has not been equal to his deserts, registered a few days ago as "John J. Pershing, U. S. A., on leave until October 30." The record of Captain Pershing, the young officer who has done such brave things in the Philippines where he has brought the forces into subjection.

It is a striking circumstance that two presidents of different parties should have placed dependence on the same man and that both should have found in him just the qualities which appealed to each. No matter what view may be taken of Root's policies and political nobodys will deny him the possession of a sense of high order and a capacity for accomplishment which have been possessed by few.

A fact not generally known was revealed a few nights ago by Postmaster General Payne at a dinner party given to the returning members of the Army corps d'élite in Washington. The postmaster general, who was very close to the inside of the campaign of 1900, declared and produced the documents to show that he was right—that when republican leaders were plotting to run on the ticket with McKinley their choice fell on Root and that it was the president's desire that Root should be selected, but that Root refused to let his name be used, as he preferred to stay in the war department and complete the work there he had begun.

Regains Lost Prestige.

Owing to developments since the war with Spain the secretary of war has come to be again one of the three great men of the nation. The other two are the secretary of state and the secretary of the treasury. It was the original intent of the government that this should be so, but in the course of time with the creation and development of the war department the war department sank into a subordinate place, and in the whole history of the United States there are only two secretaries who had great reputations in office prior to 1898.—Edwin M. Stanton and Jefferson Davis.

Davis as secretary conceived and executed the plan of seacoast fortifications which, for that reason, was the most complete and up-to-date system in the world. He did a great work which ought not to be altogether forgotten in the later treason. Stanton was, of course, a real war secretary with an almost little fault. But with three exceptions up to 1898 the secretary of war was regarded as one of the minor positions in the cabinet, so far as work and influence were concerned. It was a position where even the most able men could do little, and there was little for a secretary to do except occasionally to assert his dignity and prerogative against a commanding general. Among the later presidents it grew to be the rule that the politician of the administration was put at the head of the war department because his official duties were less likely to interfere with his political work than in any other cabinet.

The war department changed all this. The reorganization and reorganization of the army, the acquisition of distant possessions requiring a certain degree of military supervision, and the thrusting forward of the United States into the affairs of other nations where there was more likely to become an object of envy and attack have combined to make it essential that the secretary of war should be one of the very highest abilities, and that he shall attend to business. Root has filled the bill.

Root's Probable Successor.

When Root goes out his position will be filled by Governor Taft, who has made out a record as to convince the administration that he is the man for the place.

He is a man of great executive ability. Taft is a quiet, thoughtful person from Root. For one thing he is 20 years younger than Root, but he has established his position in the New York bar, while Taft was just graduating from Yale.

One Great Advantage.

A longer life is never interrupted.—Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

William H. Taft

big, companionable and good-natured while Root is slight of figure, and inclined to haughtiness and reserve, except with those whom he knows intimately. Taft is a "mixer." Root is the reverse. But Taft is a master of the art of getting along with an indefatigable worker, as Root is.

It is safe to say that if Taft becomes secretary of war he will get along swimmingly with every officer, high or low, who understands his business, for he has consummate tact and has a faculty of getting along with any human being in him without causing any hurt.

It is a fact that when he was in Washington during Harrison's administration he was solicitor general of the department of justice.

It is also a fact that he has done

The MINNESOTA BUILDING at the ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION

It Will Be a Permanent Structure, Built at Home, and a Credit to the State.

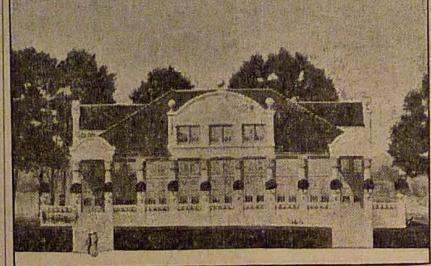

Minnesota is fortunate in having its board of managers for the St. Louis world's fair three progressive business men with ideas. So far, every move they have made has apparently been dictated wholly by the best judgment.

One of the first decisions made by the board was that Minnesota's building at the fair should, if possible, be a permanent structure. At all the former great expositions the state buildings have been built of staff, and when vacant could only be sold for the value of the land on which they stood. In this case, however, the board decided that the buildings should be of timber, doors and removal.

The result has been, and will be at St. Louis, that state buildings costing from $10,000 to $150,000 will be sold to wrecking companies and speculators for from $200 to $2,000. The buildings of states like Minnesota will cost for parcels, an office to supply information and a retiring room for the sick. There will be nothing for show, but everything for comfort, and the board will feel that they have accomplished their purpose only if the visitors to the fair from our state find when in their state building that they are at home.

In the construction of the building the architects, Messrs. Reed & Stem, say that not a log of nails of all kinds will be used. The logs will be joined, bolted and screwed in place. The walls, columns and floors will be of cement blocks. The ceiling of the lower floor will be of matched plank supported by heavy beams, and this will also form the second story floor. The roof will be colored tile. It is expected to construct the entire building in this state; to set it up before from $30,000 to $40,000, the first figure being the cost of our own structure, the remainder of the cost being for the state building. Such buildings after the fair will not sell for over $500 and are practically money burned up.

Minnesota's board at its very first meeting decided to build this building, and the cost of the land, $1,000,000, the large office room will be furnished by the pupils of the public schools of the grounds, but the only one built

PINE COUNTY PIONEER.

ED. C. GOTTRY, Editor and Prop.

Entered in the Post Office at Pine City as Second Class Matter.

PINE CITY, MINN. Sept. 11, 1903.

The army canteen has bobbed up again. Possibly the poor thing wants to be filled.

ANOTHER crank with a gun has got his name in the papers by making a demonstration against the President.

Turriduously low lines imposed upon some of the millionaire thievery impels many of us to the belief that it is safer to steal a million than to raid a chicken coop.

BOOKER Washington says that labor is the sole salvation of the negro. From which we assume that Booker is in favor of the negro going to work and forsaking his insatiate craving for official preferment.

EVANS poor Hobson has not escaped the blight of politics and the caustic newspaper paragraphs. He has been "mentioned" for the vice-presidency, and is now said to be sorry he ever left the navy.

For several weeks the assistant secretaries at Washington have been running the government, and we fail to see any injurious effects resulting from letting the young fellows take their turn at the reins.

We heartily command the statement of John Mitchell, president of the United Miners Workers of America, when he said: "In discussing the relations of employer and employee I have said repeatedly that most strikes and lockouts could have been averted if the representatives of capital and labor had met in joint conference, looked each other in the face and told the unvarnished truth." It is to be regretted that such wise council cannot prevail in the settlement of all such disputes.

It has been some days now since the announcement was made that Secretary Root would retire from the cabinet, but we fail to notice any special amount of regret expressed by the great papers and men of either party. This is not because Mr. Root has not made a good secretary, for his administration has been fraught with much that is of benefit to the country. But rather because of the fight he has made upon General Miles. The old general has more friends in this country than Root has, and they are indignant at the slight that has been cast upon him by the clique that rules the war department. Even now Mr. Root is paying the penalty for the humiliation that has been wantonly placed upon a brave soldier.

OF INTEREST TO MERCHANTS.

A correspondent of Irvington, Ill., writing to one of our exchanges, gives some very pointed facts about mail order houses and how to learn their trade, and how some merchants hold their customers.

This is what he says:

"If our home merchants would advertise their goods properly the large supply houses would find their trade falling off in the country districts."

"The big department stores advertise and give prices on every article, while the home merchant, if he advertises at all, seldom quotes prices."

"We like to read in our home papers the prices for which we can buy goods from our home dealer, together with a description of the goods, so that we may know what we can purchase from our home stores."

"The home merchant, nine times in ten, sells his goods as cheap as the same grade of goods are sold by any of the big supply houses, but their customers don't know it."

"A merchant must not think that even his best customers are so familiar with his goods and prices that he knows all about it without being informed."

"We can buy as cheap at home as we can anywhere, and it is the merchant's duty to educate his custom ers to that belief."

"Printer's ink is the great business educator."

"An average of about $300 per month is sent away from Irvington to mail order houses in distant cities for supplies, the greater part of which could be bought at home as cheap."

The President is said to favor the candidacy of Secretary Root for President in 1908. But then the President may favor his own renomination about that time. Such things have been known before, and are not surprising.

JOSEPH PULITZER, of the New York World, has given a million dollars for the purpose of establishing a school of journalism in connection with Columbia University, and if at the end of three years the school is in successful operation he will give as much more. While the journalistic field is already overcrowded, the training of young men in such a way as to fit them for such an avocation will be of very great material benefit to the nation, for it will give them a breadth and scope in their intellect that is hard to obtain in any other way. The modern newspaper has long been recognized as the greatest educator of the day, and he who is fitted for conducting such an enterprise is more than fitted for the average vocations of life.

OPPOSITION TO WOOD

The opposition to the promotion of Brigadier General Leonard Wood to be a major general in the army is assuming lively proportions and is likely to be a stumbling block in the way of that ambitious officer and protege of the President.

When the war with Spain broke out General Wood was an assistant surgeon with the rank of captain, but through the intervention of powerful friends, the late President McKinley being one of them, he was made colonel of the Rough Riders, of which Mr. Roosevelt was lieutenant colonel.

He commanded that famous regiment only a short time before he was advanced to the rank of brigadier general of volunteers.

He was then made military governor of Cuba, where his work was of a very high order of merit, not in the line of duty as a soldier, but more in an executive capacity in cleansing the island of its filthy sanitary condition.

Since then he has been made a brigadier general in the regular army, and now the President proposes to elevate him to the high rank of major general, over the heads of some four hundred gallant officers who fought in the civil war.

The Grand Army of the Republic is opposed to the promotion, and their powerful influence will undoubtedly be felt when the Senate is asked to confirm the nomination.

It is quite likely that General Wood will remain a brigadier general, which is all the honor that his services date warrant.

L. E. Wiley, of the Zenith Paper Co., spent several days of this week among friends in this village.

Mr. Clark, of Duluth, came down Saturday to visit his old friend, T. G. Baxter, returning Sunday.

Go to the Big Store for men's wear line of Sweaters for men, youths and boys. Just opened.

Miss Anna Anderson returned to her home in Hinckley, Sunday, having spent several days here visiting friends.

George White last week resumed his duties at the depot, and his many friends are glad to see him at his old post.

Mrs. Frank Laird and daughter, of Skiba, visited at the home of H. W. Hart the latter part of last week, returning Sunday.

George Kunz returned from St. Paul Sunday after having spent a week attending the fair and visiting his old Mrs. Ruhn.

You will be well fed if you go to the supper at Maude's next Wednesday from 5.30 to 8 p.m. To be given by the ladies of the M. E. church.

Miss Besse Cushing, of Tracy, stopped off here for a day to visit her sister, Mrs. E. W. Chamberlain, while on the way to her school at Kerrick.

Miss Maggie Henderson, of Chamberlain, and Miss Emma Wolf, of Harris, were among those from town who attended the dance given last evening by the Fair association.

Johnnie Hurley, youngest son of James Hurley, came down from Hinckley on Wednesday to spend a few days with his brothers and sisters before school starts in the above named village.

Work is being pushed as rapidly as possible on the school house, and the time will not be long before it will be ready for occupancy. Each of the different grades are comfortably settled in their temporary quarters.

The Indian agent from the State Indian school, was in this village on Wednesday and visited the Indians at Pokegama Lake trying to induce them to send their children to the school. We do not know whether he met with very much success in his undertaking.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kenney departed on Tuesday morning's train for their home at Banning. Mrs. Kenney has been here a week visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Griffith, and Mr. Kenney came down the latter part of last week to spend a few days and accompany his wife home.

Martin Hurley departed on Monday of this week for Minneapolis to enter the Engineering Department of the State University. Martin is a graduate of the Pine City high school, class of '93, and is a brilliant young man, and while his course is completed we predict that he will return home with high honors.

Mrs. W. J. Axtell departed on the noon train Wednesday for St. Paul, where she accompanied her daughter Glen, who will attend the state school, for the deaf and dumb at Faribault. Miss Glen is a bright girl and enjoys her studies as well if not better than most children who have all of their facilities.

The following interesting bits of Pine county news items were jerked out of the "Notes of the Pine City Fair" of Tuesday's St. Paul Daily News: "The Pine City Fair association will give a dance Sept. 10 and make an effort to hop out of debt."

Blue-stem wheat near Hinckley holds itself up proudly on four feet of stalk . . . Muscled and school have begun operations at Meadow Lawn at the same time.

Road building and improvement are having a boom in the vicinity of Brookbank . . . The Willow River saw mill shut down for a day to let its employees do the state fair . . . Billy Follett is getting up the greatest ever in the way of a miasma show at Sandstone . . . Some hunter near Rock Creek took George Meyers for a crow and George is thankful for a poor shot."

LIVE STOCK.

In order to produce the best results in the recorder's office, the feed must be good rich feed, the richer the better.

It is a daily occurrence for a farmer to tell us that he has been buying the bran and shorts made by the big mills and did not realize what he was losing by not buying that made by us, which is so much richer feed.

Our bran and shorts are worth fifty per cent more for feeding purposes than the bran and shorts made by the big mills.

A WILD-WOOD IDYL.

Seeking wildwood, open sky,
Billets beneath the trees am I;
Watching squirrel chattering high,
Watching the deer leap by.
Elias to tread the forest way
Along trails where rabbits stray,
Great woods, great woods, great woods,
Hearing every's tender lay.
Joy to watch the birdie bird,
Cuckoo, the stately bird,
Downy feather lightly stirred,
Singing "Wildwood, Wildwood."

Solids of nature, dappus tree,
Seeking blossoms with the bee,
Tracing brook through flowery lea;
Friends in the wood, the green tree;
Feeding wild hidden low,
Where do mous and cresses grow
Nestled in the wood, the green wood,
That through beechen grove do go;
Flushing trillium wet with dew,
Felt heart, stand still, stand still,
Finding elc's whipperwill shoe.
Hil among the mosses grow.

Loving twilight, meet thee,
Seal'd in the heart of hermit thrush
Trilling sweet at evening hush
Sheltered by the swaying rush;
In the wood, the green wood,
Watching butterflies winging wing,
Moles fluttering round the winding limb,
Do we find the new-mown's rim,
Dreaming beneath dusky sky.
On the wood, the green wood,
Surrounded by pine-trees crooning sigh Lulled by night winds passing by—
"Ah, here's a child's am I!"—

CHAPTER XIV.

Within 15 hours of the coming of Trooper Kennedy with his "rush" dispatches to Fort Frayne, the Indians in our little drama had become widely separated, while the general staff of their troops as still had mounts and no serious wounds were marching straight on for the Dry Fork of the Powder. They were 200 fighting men and, although the Indians had now three times as many, they had learned too much of the shooting powers of these seasoned troopers, and deemed it wise to avoid close contact. The fair Indians could, however, be seen in their true sportsman-like ads for odds of ten to one, as when wiped out Custer on the "Greasy Grass," or Fetterman at Fort Phil Kearney, or even the Gray Fox General Crook—an Indian and Sibley's little party among the pines of the Big Horn. Horn's plucky followers had shot valiantly and emptied far too many saddles for Indian cavalry to make any real effort to get to let. While he had run through and wait for further accession from the agencies at the southeast, or the big, turbulent bands of Utecapas and Minneconjou at Standing Rock, or the Cheyenne, the Indians of the Powder had so soon won Lamb Wolf, and his band, bearing Stabber with them, flitting northward again toward the gloomy country beyond the "Chukade," and on went Webb with Blake, Gregg, and the others, with intent to take care of such as might be wounded on the way; and, after still, the old post surgeon reached the Elk with guards and hospital attendants, and on the morrow began his work. He had been dead and wounded—a sad and solemn little procession. Only 20 miles he had to go, but it took long hours, so few were the ambulances, so rough the crossings of the ravines; and, not until near nightfall, did he reach the center of the parade ground.

So began with Lamb Wolf, and his band, bearing Stabber with them, flitting northward again toward the gloomy country beyond the "Chukade," and on went Webb with Blake, Gregg, and the others, with intent to take care of such as might be wounded on the way; and, after still, the old post surgeon reached the Elk with guards and hospital attendants, and on the morrow began his work. He had been dead and wounded—a sad and solemn little procession. Only 20 miles

he had to go, but it took long hours, so few were the ambulances, so rough the crossings of the ravines;

and, not until near nightfall, did he reach the center of the parade ground.

"Craps," said the Frenchman,

the chief, the post commander and possibly even the side-de-camp had forgotten about the waiting coffee. They still stood there, and the general

of the cavalry, left behind

charge of the fortifications, of the crossroads, Crabb, too, threw

dignity to the winds, and ran at the

beck of his superioir officer.

"Have you two men who can ride hard a dozen miles or so—and carry water?"—said the captain.

"Certainly, sir," answered Crabb, professionally resentful that such a question should be asked of men of the 7th cavalry.

"Send two to report to me at once, and have them ready at half past one."

And by this time, apparently,

the chief, the post commander and possibly even the side-de-camp had forgotten about the waiting coffee. They

of the cavalry, left behind

charge of the fortifications, of the

crossroads, Crabb, too, threw

dignity to the winds, and ran at the

beck of his superioir officer.

"I knew he had thought of going,

He told Major Webb so," said Dado, the chief, that was before the outbreak assumed proportions. He had given up all idea of it yesterday, and told me so."

"Has anything happened to—start him since then?" demanded the bearded general, after a moment's talk.

"He has been ill, and has not been able to eat, and has not taken his departure by way of the Rawlin's road, and without so much as a whisper of his purpose to anyone."
