PINE CITY, MINN.

Uncle Sam still has land enough to give us all a farm, more than 900,000,000 acres awaiting entry and settlement. But the inhabitants of the States, who have grown to love the lights of the burly guards, stick to their alley homes.

Mrs. Margaret B. Gulon, now residing in St. Louis at the age of 90 years, claims to be the oldest native-born resident of that city. She is of French descent, and for many years her family has been noted for the longevity of its members, many of them having passed the century mark. Mrs. Gulon has had 12 children and 27 grand children are now living.

Some time ago Miss Jennie Posa, a schoolteacher of Florence, Wis., had an encounter with a wild, vanishing animal and displaying great bravery. An account of the incident was read by John B. Bower, a wealthy farmer of Madison, Ind. He paid court to Miss Posa through the mails, his suit was favorably received and the other day they were married.

The official Gazette of Italy says that by a law of June 17, 1902, the exportation of antiquities found in excavations that have an archeological and artistic value—also articles of antiquity or artistic value in the possession of private parties, regarded by the government as having great value for historical and artistic purposes—is forbidden. The law is to be in force for two years.

The figures representing the white population of Great Britain's empire will surprise many persons. The important ones are: Canada, 5,535,000; Australia, 2,850,000; South Africa, 875,000; New Zealand, 815,000, which makes a total of 10,075,000 persons. There are, however, says the London Times, 20,000 white persons now sojourning in the colonies to settle each month, as a result of hard times in England.

It is the universal testimony that clergymen reach the highest age, being close runners by gardeners and vine dressers. Ordinary agricultural laborers, although their occupation is so largely in the open air, are not conspicuous as long lives, except in France, Sweden and England. People working with wood are longer lived than those whose occupations are with metals, and both are longer lived than textile workers and workers in chemical industries. The shortest lived people are miners.

The age of the race of giants is about to be ushered in again. Henceforth there will be no more need for a wonderful food substance has been discovered in Chicago that makes men and animals grow fast and large. The new food is lectin. Its qualities have just been demonstrated by a series of experiments by Dr. Shinkishi Hatal, professor of neurology at the University of Chicago. Dr. Hatal's experiments with white rats, and by feeding them lectin made them grow 60 percent faster than they grow ordinarily.

Postmaster General Payne may make a complete change in the present system of mail wagon service between post offices, railway stations and steamship wharves in the large cities. At present this service is carried on by independent drivers. There has been considerable complaint from postmasters of inefficiency in the service and their inability to exercise strict control over the employees of the contractors. The postmaster general will give the new system a trial in some of the large cities on expiration of present contracts.

Arrangements have been completed for the establishment of a department of forestry in Purdue university. Experiments and testing of the different trees and shrubbery in the United States will be the principal work of the new branch of the school, and the government will soon erect a large building and install apparatus needed in the study. An extensive tract of land will be necessary to be added to the already large Purdue farm for the raising and cultivation of the trees and shrubs, and will greatly broaden the scope of the university.

The glasses which Secretary of State W. H. Howard wore when in office and when he wrote the emancipation proclamation which President Lincoln tore up, are in the possession of James H. Arnett, the well known labor agitator of Kokomo, Ind. Mr. Arnett obtained them from the late Samuel Stratton, and has an affidavit to certify their history. They are interesting to see. The rim of solid gold is of peculiar, but very comfortable construction. The lenses are of French manufacture and are made in the original form. The bridge is also unique in shape.

Professor Edward W. Scribner, director of the psychological laboratory at Yale, will not return there with the new year, but will remain in Germany, where he is pursuing postgraduate research in general psychology, especially in the study of the phonetic following lines he had begun in his student years at Leipzig and Zurich and in his experimental work at Clark university of Worcester, Charles Hubbard Todd, for several years assistant in experimental psychology at Yale, is mentioned as his probable successor.

TORNADO WRECKS SEVERAL TOWNS

Eighteen Lives Are Lost in Hurricane in Portions of Minnesota and Wisconsin.

One Blast Practically Wipes Out the Village of St. Charles and Kills Seven Persons—Many Forehouses and Yards and Live Stock Killed and Grain in Stack Scattered.

St. Paul, Oct. 5.—The little town of St. Charles, in Winona county, Minn., was practically wiped out by a tornado which struck it at 2:30 Saturday afternoon. Seven people were killed and 25 injured, many of them seriously. The entire main street of the town was literally wiped out, hardly a business place being left standing. Forty-two residences also were destroyed and the total property damage is estimated at $100,000.

Made a Clean Sweep.
The tornado struck the town from the southwest quarter and made a clean sweep through it, following almost entirely the line of the main street, and devastating buildings on either side. Then it residences further back from the business center were struck and many of them blown completely away. Two boys, sons of Stephen Johnson, killed at St. Cloud while seeking refuge from the storm.

Follows Boundary Line.
The storm seems to have followed very closely the boundary line between Minnesota and Iowa and damage to buildings, dwellings and grain stacks, with the exception of human beings and live stock is reported from several points in that locality.

WISCONSIN SUFFERS.
Several Persons Killed and Great Damage Done to Property.
Milwaukee, Oct. 5.—A terrific windstorm, approaching a cyclone, swept Wisconsin Saturday afternoon, causing death and destruction. At Independence two persons were killed, three fatally injured and a score of others badly hurt at Eagle valley. The Reformed church was demolished and houses on the prairie were swept away.

At Racine trees were blown down, also electric light and telephone wires, and half of the city was in total darkness. Carl Larson, a painter, and Thomas Garbutt were killed. Country Devastated.
The country in the vicinity of Lake Gogebic was devastated. Near Sheridan five persons were killed and buildings destroyed. The dead are: M. R. Myholtz, Mark Wood, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Cleggery, girl unknown. A barn on the Appleby farm, filled with grain, was blown to atoms, and not a piece of it has been found. In a field in the course of the storm $1,100 in money was picked up, apparently having been blown there by the storm.

STORM IN ILLINOIS.
Three Persons Lose Their Lives and Property Destroyed.
Princeton, Ill., Oct. 5.—A cyclone passed two miles southeast of this city Saturday evening, killing three persons and destroying a large amount of farm property. The killed are Mrs. Charles F. Sherwin, Mrs. Alvirid Sherwin, and Miss Emma Welsh, of Tiskia, a visitor in the eastern part of the city. The houses of Charles Turnbull and Thomas Murphy were destroyed. The tops of the storm were rods wide and touched at several points in Bureau, Stark and Henry counties, doing vast damage to crops.

DEATH ON THE RAIL.
Pleasure Party Run Down by a Train at Sharon Hill, Pa., and Five Persons Are Killed.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 1.—A merry party, composed of about a dozen persons, was run down by a passenger train Wednesday night at Sharon Hill, the new branch of the school, and the government will soon erect a large building and install apparatus needed in the study. An extensive tract of land will be necessary to be added to the already large Purdue farm for the raising and cultivation of the trees and shrubs, and will greatly broaden the scope of the university.

Massachusetts Republicans Meet.
Boston, Oct. 3.—In the same hall which Thursday was filled with democratic cheering to the echo of the oratory of their leaders, the Republicans of Massachusetts met Friday to nominate their state ticket. The assembly was large, and the unanimous renomination of Gov. John Bates, Sen. Geo. Curtis, Chas. J. Jr., and the remainder of the present list of state officers was made.

REVENUES SHOW LARGE INCREASE

Treasurer Roberts Gives Interesting Statistics in His Report for Last Fiscal Year.

The Total Net Increase Was $500,306,674 and Expenditures $400,000,000, Leaving a Surplus of $45,297,007.—Treasury Is Full of Gold and Money Circulation Large.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Ellis H. Roberts, treasurer of the United States, has submitted to Secretary Shaw his report on the condition of the treasury June 30, 1903, and its operations during the past fiscal year. The total net revenue for the year was $500,306,674, an increase of $35,938,439 over the year 1902, 1903, and its expenditures $400,000,000, an increase of $35,782,034. The surplus was $45,297,007, as compared with $91,297,375 in 1902.

At the close of the year, the treasury held $893,068,869 in gold and silver on deposit against outstanding certificates and treasury notes, headed at $150,000,000 in gold which forms the reserve against United States notes.

Treasurer Roberts places the monetary stock of the country on June 30, 1903, including gold and silver, United States notes, treasury notes and national bank notes, but not certificates at $2,638,149,221, an increase of $124,839,933 for the year. The increase in gold was $100,137,401, and in national bank notes $56,909,859.

The total estimated stock of gold was $1,252,731,990; constituting nearly 47 per cent of the whole. The gold in the treasury amounted to $481,439,789, after a gain of $1,129,480 in 13 months. Deposited at the mints and assay offices $770,292,201 in 13 months.

The increase of the money in circulation during the year was $121,740,252, of which $58,776,462 was in gold and gold certificates and $62,963,789 in national bank notes.

There has been a constant increase in the proportions of paper currency of the denomination of one and five dollar notes in circulation, but the growth hardly keeps pace with the demand.

The national bank notes presented for redemption during the year amounted to $196,429,621, or 51 per cent of the average outstanding.

TRADE REVIEW.

Reports from Various Sections with Reference to the Prospects Here on the Whole Encouraging.

New York, Oct. 5.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says: "Mixed trade and crop conditions still present themselves, although some improvement in tone is noted where crop estimates, as in the case of corn, show expansion. Lower prices for cereals point the way to future large business and induce a foreign interest in our farm products. Trade reports vary with sections considered, the best reports coming from the southeast, the northwest and the Pacific coast. Spotted trade reports come from sections of the middle west. From the south the reports are in the main favorable as to trade and collections, but crop deterioration is widespread, except from the lower Mississippi valley. Falling prices for cotton, through a hospital sign for our export trade and domestic manufacturers, do not excite lively satisfaction among producers. Among the great industries from an anxiety about the effect of threatened over-production in proposals for a 20 per cent reduction of Northern furnace output, rumors of like action by southern producers and quiet demand for finished products."

TROLLEY CAR SMASHED.
Crashed Into by a Fast Train in Chicago and Six Persons Are Killed and Eleven Injured.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Six persons were killed and 11 others were badly hurt when a Wisconsin Central limited train going 40 miles an hour, struck a Chicago Consolidated electric car at the Fifty-third street crossing.

Worst Storm in Years.
The storm which sent the Hackley to the bottom was the worst which has been recorded in this vicinity for years. The steamer was seven miles from Green Island when it broke, and was carried by the breaking clouds, the captain was hastening to get his boat under the shelter of the island.

The first blast of the gale was 20 miles off shore, and it was the work of the steamer were torn off. The passengers were in the cabin, but at the sound of the breaking timbers they ran on deck. A frantic search for life preservers began, but before any could be secured the second burst of wind rolled the steamer over until the water poured into the hold through the cabin doors. Again the wind caught the steamer, this time full on its side, rolling the boat completely over. It sank instantly.

Went Down with His Ship.
A number of those who were carried under by the suction of the sinking boat, and it is believed that not one of them escaped. Capt. Vorous remained in the pilot house trying to head the steamer into the wind, and went down with his ship.

BOAT GOES DOWN

Twenty Lives Lost by Sinking of the Erie L. Hackley in Waters of Green Bay.

Seven Men Climb All Night to Drifting Pieces of Wreckage—Rescued at Daybreak by Steamer City of Sheboygan—Names of Those Lost—Worst Storm in Years.

Marionette, Wis., Oct. 5.—During a squall Saturday night on Lake Michigan the steamer E. H. Hackley capsized and 12 persons were drowned. The Goodrich line steamer Sheboygan rescued the other seven persons on board the Hackley, after they had floated about all night on pieces of wreckage. The Hackley was struck by the storm on Green Bay island. The upper work was blown away before the men could reach a haven. The boat then turned over and went down in deep water.

The survivors were almost dead of exposure when they were picked up by the crew of the Sheboygan, and for a time they were unable to tell of the disaster. The pieces of wreckage on which they had floated nearly all night were small, and every sea washed completely over them. Several women who had managed to seize bits of wood when the Hackley went down were washed from their improvised life preservers and drowned.

List of the Drowned.
The following persons, all from Wisconsin, were lost: Joseph Vorous, captain of the Hackley;—Trucully cook of the Hackley;—Henry Reubler, passengers: Freeman Thorp, Fish Creek; Edna Barringer, Fish Creek; Lawrence Barringer, brother of Edna Barringer, Fish Creek; Frances Vincent, Harbor;—Vincent, sister of Frances, Egg Harbor; George Leslair, Jr., Jacksonport, Wis.; N. Fitzsimmons, Jacksonport, Wis.; Henry Reubler, Fish Creek; Carl Kelley, Fish Creek; Neils Nelson, Sturgeon Bay.

On Wednesday afternoon Dr. E. E. Barnum was called to Minneapolis to perform a surgical operation. He was assisted by Dr. Russell of Minneapolis.

Henry Glasow and Ed. Netser, both holding jobs on the boom at Cloquet, came down the first of the week for a short visit at their homes. They returned on Wednesday to resume their duties.

For Sale—Choice 80 acres partly improved, new house, near Pine City, small panmoy, balance 6 per cent. I. A. Armstrong, 55-17th St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

It will pay you to call and buy a good plow, harrow or cultivator at cost, for next season's work. I am clearing out all that which I do not intend to keep in stock. D. Greeley, Hardware Store.

H. W. Daley has the improvements about completed on his residence and expects to have it all done before cold weather sets in. Mr. Daley has spent considerable money on improvements since he came here a year ago, and when he gets through he will no doubt have one of the finest farm homes in Pine county.

(This week Fred Wright purchased the old Clem Williams property, which is joined by E. Madden's residence on the south. He has commenced the erection of an addition to the same.) When Fred gets through with the improvements on the place he will have a fine home in one of the prettiest locations in the village.

J. H. O'Riley is pushing the work on his large new barn as rapidly as the weather will permit. Mr. O'Riley has one of the many good farms in this locality and the improvements made by him are attractive as well as useful and are an absolute necessity on the farm which he purchased. These are the kind of men that do good to a county.

HELP WANTED—Really ambitious students and teachers, out of employment, or who desire to better their conditions, climb up higher, should write Prof. J. P. Simon, New Era Business College, Superior, Wis., and learn a plan of mutual benefit. The cause of humanity is the highest in this life—help one another.

Keep your eye on Breckenridge's Pharmacy. Every day they are getting in some fine new goods for the fall trade and the holiday season. Just received from the east a supply of leather goods, ladies and gents purses, hand bags, cigar cases—the very latest styles and best quality. New and best odors in hair brushes. Latest in military and hair brushes. And stationery. You should see it, something fine. You are especially invited to come in and look over their stock of new and staple goods. Keep your eye on the Drug Store.

The Olyvers have been holding the boards at Rath's hall during the past week, and have had good steel houses every night. The company gives a good clean entertainment which lasts about two and a half hours. They sell medicine but do bore their listeners to death by telling them what it will do and what it will not do, but make a talk of about ten minutes and then give you more show. Five people comprise the company and every member is a hot number, taking many difficult parts in truly professional style. Their music and singing is first class and the illustrated songs and moving picture effects are the best ever seen in this village. They show tonight and tomorrow night, and will present Omidreila, or the Glass Slipper, with their picture machine tomorrow afternoon. Their prices, 10c for general admission, and 10 extra for reserved seats, are so unreasonably low that it affords nearly everybody an opportunity to have a good, long, hearty laugh every night in the week.

LIVE STOCK.

In order to produce the best results for the feeder, must be fed on good rich feed, the richer the better.

It is a daily occurrence for a farmer to tell us that he has been buying the bran and shorts made by the big mills and did not realize what he was losing by not buying that made by us, which is so much richer food.

Our bran and shorts is worth fifty per cent. more for feeding purposes than the bran and shorts made by the big mills.

LITTLE RED MOROCCO SHOE

The little red Morocco shoe. A gap where baby's toes peeped through. Here they play to market went. In the old days of sweet courtship. The buttons dancing by a thread— One touched by the breeze with a lead— Each straggling one it brings to me. A perfume from the little shoe.

This time, but without a heel. Where little piglets used to steal. To me in more than pretense grim. Flushed from a rye and a smile. It brings from amaranthine shore. The face my loving lady wears. It brings, dear heaven! from the night, Her kiss, her voice, her smile's delight.

Ah! what may not a mother tell. Whose ears are bled to the mist. That rises out of shadow land. Made glad by the angelic hand? Their voices come on wings of air. To greet her patient, waiting there. Forasmuch with this Morocco shoe. A gap where baby's toes peeped through.

There comes no sweetness like the song Of love's Invivables, who throng. The sacred oysters of the heart. Unharmful to all the world's smart. So, I may list the whippersnott. Wart, to me from the throne aloft— All only hearsy, while the young mind recalls the baby's smile—

A Double-Barreled Ruse

By J. C. PLUMMER

APT. PRAY gazed placidly around from the bridge of the tramp steamer. Grimly, moored alongside the huge elevator, when Mr. Hogg, chief officer, accosted him.

"Smiley is in trouble, sir," he said. Capt. Pray frowned. "Out with it," said he.

"You see," began Mr. Hogg, "Smiley used to run on the Pullman boats, and on one of his trips to Baltimore he meets a young lady. One thing led to another, and the first thing Smiley knows he is engaged to be married to her. Then he leaves the Pullman line and goes on the Grimbly in the Black Sea trade, and never expecting to come to Baltimore again, he gets engaged to a girl in Birkenhead."

"That's nothing," remarked the captain, disappointedly; "all sailors do that."

Mr. Hogg continued: "Smiley had a quarrel with the second engineer of the Pullman boat, and he knowing all about the Baltimore woman and also says Smiley is coming to Baltimore on the Grimbly."

"Well," snapped the captain, as Mr. Hogg paused.

"When the pilot came aboard at the cape he handed Smiley a letter from the Baltimore girl raking him fore and aft, and saying she would have him arrested for breach of promise as soon as the ship moored."

Capt. Pray glared at his chief officer.

"Where am I going to get a chief engineer if Smiley is put in jail?" he roared, and the Grimbly barely time to load and sail.

"I've thought of that," said Mr. Hogg, slyly, "but some years ago Smiley did me a favor, and he expects me to get him out of this bally bad mess."

"If it wasn't for detaining the steamer, I'd let him get out of it in his own bloody way," growled the captain, "but something must be done. Hal!" He slapped the rail sharply. "I have it. I'm good at these things! I have it, Hogg."

Mr. Hogg gazed admiringly at his commander.

"Smiley must fall sick," announced the captain, briefly.

"Sick!" ejaculated Mr. Hogg.

"Not real sick, you swab," snapped the captain, "but make believe sick. Lay in his bunk and groan. She's never laid out a sick man to jail."

Mr. Smiley was unenthusiastic at the plan, but Capt. Pray waxed eloquent.

"You'll lay in jail until you rot, Smiley," said the captain. "You haven't the money to pay the lawyers, who'll swarm around you like tugs about a stranded steamer."

"How long must I stay in my bunk?" asked Mr. Smiley.

"Until the Grimbly pulls out o' dock," replied the captain, firmly. "With gloomy forebodings of evil Mr. Smiley turned in."

"Now, Hogg," exclaimed the captain, "go on to the girl's house and tell her Smiley is confined to his bunk. Don't lie. I'm a chapel member, and I won't have any lying done. Tell her it may be measles or yellow fever. Stick to something, Hogg, but don't lie."

"You've a great head, sir," remarked Mr. Hogg. "I'll work it all right."

"When you come to the catching part on all steam," advised the captain. "We don't want her coming to the steamer, but be careful not to."

"I'll be careful, sir," said Mr. Hogg, winking his eye, and he departed on his diplomatic errand.

Captain Pray then walked on tiptoe to Smiley's bunk.

"How are you feeling, my poor fool?" he asked, in subdued tones.

"I'm all right, sir," replied the invalid, smiling.

"Sick!" said the captain; "don't talk. I'll get you some beefsteak."

"This here is only make-believe sickness, sir," expostulated the engineer, unsmilingly.

"See here, Smiley," said the captain, sternly, "this whole thing is done for your benefit. It's a kind of deception Mr. Hogg and I are using through it, and I want to keep you close in the truth as I can, for I'm a chapel member and Mr. Hogg is a religious woman. We'll have to make this sick business as near to truth as we can."

Mr. Smiley sighed.

"After you've taken your beef ste I'll give you a nice dose of cod-liver oil," announced the captain.

Mr. Smiley dutifully swallowed the oil, and then the captain, after stalling a bit, seaman at the station-room to give the alarm in case of a crisis, went on deck.

He had just reached the bridge when Mr. Hogg excitedly rushed up to him.

"Here's coming," he gasped.

"Who?" inquired the captain.

"The young lady, and she's fetching a doctor with her."

"You have booted the whole thing, Hogg," growled the captain. "Now we are in a devil of a mess."

"Told her your identical words, sir," explained Mr. Hogg. "I said it might be catching, and she says: 'I'll come and nurse him, and bring a doctor.'"

"You didn't come out strong enough in it's being catching," said the captain, in despair.

"Indeed, I did, sir," said Mr. Hogg, wringing his hands. "And she says: 'I'll nurse my poor Henry if he has all the plague of the world except one.'"

At that moment a tall, reddish-haired young woman and a slender man with spectacles on his nose walked on deck and asked for the captain.

The two officers sheepishly descended from the bridge and approached the couple.

"Oh, captain!" cried the lady, "is Henry worse?"

"He's no better," replied the captain, guardedly.

"He come to nurse him, and have brought a doctor," exclaimed the lady. "Take me to him."

"Some sicknesses are catching," said the captain, hesitating.

"Or'll," chimed in Mr. Hogg.

"I'm not afraid when Henry's life is in danger," she persisted. "Take me to him."

The two officers, with perturbed countenances, led the way below, and the lady pushed the burly man on guard away as if he was of straw.

"Henry, are you very sick?" she asked.

Mr. Smiley caught the glowering eye of the captain, and said, feebly, that he felt very ill, which was far from the truth, as the mixture of oil and beef tea was not having a pleasing effect.

"I have come to nurse you, Henry," she stretched out her hand, and brought the doctor to examine you."

Mr. Smiley turned very pale as the doctor stepped forward and asked him to place out his tongue. Then he tapped his chest and asked him to draw a deep breath.

"Good Heaven!" exclaimed the doctor, "his concern; 'let me feel your pulse.'"

"This is very serious," he continued, placing his ear to where Mr. Smiley's heart was supposed to be.

"What's the matter?" asked Mr. Smiley in a cold sweat of terror.

"Where does this young man's family reside?" asked the doctor, with solemnity.

"Is there something the matter with me?" asked the engineer, piteously. "Am I going to die?"

"Be quiet, poor fellow," said the doctor, slyly.

Capt. Pray, with a pallid face, dragged the doctor from the stateroom.

"Do you mean to say he's sick?" he asked, hoarsely.

"He may be dead before morning," replied the doctor.

"He was well enough a little while ago."

"My dear captain, some illnesses come like the flash of a gun," replied the doctor. "But I haven't given up hope. We may save his life yet."

"I suppose you're plenty of far on the ship."

"Lois," excitedly replied the captain. "Make two beds for the doctor and place one on his back and the other on his breast," said the doctor.

"I'll do it," assented the captain.

The doctor then persuaded the young lady to go home, as the patient was in good hands, and they left.

It was a bad night for Mr. Smiley, as between the tar plasters and the large doses of cod-liver oil which the captain insisted on administering at intervals, he had much to bear, but the next morning the doctor reported him as better, but not up to morrow."

The captain accompanied the doctor on deck, and, pointing to the spots which were emptying the grain into the hold of the steamer, said, earnestly: "See here, doctor, I've got to sail tomorrow and I can't sail without an engineer. Is it likely Smiley will be able to be up by to-morrow?"

"Mr. Smiley," replied the doctor, "has a remarkable disease. It comes quick, and either kills or roasts as quickly. Thanks to your knowledge of the use of cod-liver oil, I think he will be as well as ever by to-morrow."

The next morning when the doctor boarded the Grimbly the assistant engineer had steam up, and everything was in readiness for a start. He hurried below, and, examining the engineer, said: "You can get up, Mr. Smiley. You are entirely well, but you have had a narrow escape. Here's a letter for you."

While the Grimbly was steaming down the bay, Mr. Smiley read by the sunlight gleaming in a port the following letter:

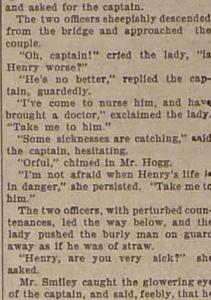

"Dear Mr. Smiley! I never intended marrying you. I was racking my brain for a reason to break it off when I heard of your treachery, and I resolved to scold you, so I sent that letter by the pilot. When Mr. Hogg came with his story of your sickness, I was through it and, with a medical friend, gave you a little scare. You were not sick in the least, but you were awfully scared. I hope the doctor will be kept in your quarters in the winter and have his quarters kept clean. Never feed the calf so much as to bring on the scours, as there is nothing more injurious to the growth of the calf, but feed all that it can digest, and it can be gradually brought to a diet of warm separator milk."

CHEAP PRACTICAL SILO.

Hinta Given to the Connecticut Dairy-men's Association by Edward Van Alstyne.

The silo must be practically airtight. It must be strong and durable, and should be constructed as economically as possible. I believe a good silo is the round silo, but whether the round silo is going to give the satisfaction that some think, I am not so sure. In it may be inclined to rot out in some places, and give more or less trouble. One thing is certain, if you build a round silo, you must build a good one, better one than if you build a square one.

For hoops, five-eighths-inch wire rope is very satisfactory. It can be bought for the same price as the rods, but the tensile strength of the five-eighths-inch iron rope is very much greater than that of the rods. This may be taken as an advantage, that it gives and takes the expansion and contraction of heat and cold better, and only needs one buckle or coupling, and it is very much more easy to put around. The round silo is best in one respect, and that is because it has no corners.

The picture shows a silo that anybody can build, who has the lumber. It is economical, strong and tight. I have three of this kind, and spent where I know. One has been filled with the thirteenth winter, and another one has been filled for nine winters. Anyone can build one of this sort who can handle a level and saw, or a hammer and nails, and a good thing about them is that they can be set anywhere and made to conform to the size of the barn, if you want to put them in.

The picture shows clearly how the silo is built. The foundation is below front, made of stones and the cement floor. On this is placed silo of two by six or two by eight. Matched pine siding is stood up and braced by two by eight or two by ten-inch scantling. The corners are put in on a level to avoid the square corner, and also to allow of braces to strengthen the silo.

The thickness of siding should be put on to break joints. Do not use paper between the boards, as it will rot out. I have a silo built of single boards of six-inch matched lumber. The lumber was as dry as I could get it, and put together as tight as possible, but I found after the first year that those boards would shrink apart a little, and that many places would never get tight again. That is the danger of the single-board silo, and also the danger of the poorly constructed round silo.

An Ideal Potato Patch.

If the ground is quite level place your stiring plow in the center, at one end of your patch. Back furrow. Harrow it nicely. In a few days do the same thing in the same way. Now you have a plot in good till and well drained, as you have left it shaded somewhat as the roof of a house. Fertilize in the center. Now you can plant this in drills or in hills, that is, checks. Harrow often, keeping the ground loose and clean, and you will certainly be rewarded for your labor. Potatoes do not do well when not well drained. The shape of the subsoil will drain it, and good cultivation will insure a sufficiency of moisture.—Isaac N. Green, in the Epitomist.

The Art of Calf Feeding.

J. H. Grinstead, in the Farmer's Sentinel, says that there is an art in calf feeding. The only diet for the first year of a calf should be its mother's milk, and that fed so often that it would not get ravenously hungry at any time. It should be fed four times a day at first. The calf to be kept in warm quarters in the winter and have its quarters kept clean. Never feed the calf so much as to bring on the scours, as there is nothing more injurious to the growth of the calf, but feed all that it can digest, and it can be gradually brought to a diet of warm separator milk.

Accepting Fodder Doesn't Pay.

There is much to be said for the fact that the leaves of corn are more palatable and digestible than the stalks, but the labor involved in stripping and bundling the stalks is much more than can be made in the stalk, and if shredded or cut stalk will eat nearly all. We should prefer cutting and sowing corn while the plant has green tops in it. This will ripen and the whole plant is thus made available. The chief point to remember in harvesting corn is to cut at the proper stage, not too ripe nor too green.—Baral World.

FALL CARE OF COWS.

When Pastures Are Getting Bare It Pays to Hunt a Little Fodder to the Field.

In the feeding of dairy cows two seasons are recognized by the average dairyman. These are the winter (or feeding) season and the summer season. In the former case the animals are entirely dependent upon what grain and fodder are allotted to them, there is no opportunity for grazing afforded. The very opposite of this is true during the summer season, the animals being expected to hunt their own living.

It is an exceedingly good plan to allow cows to have shelter at night for the first of October. If they are put in the stable or in sheds and fed a small grain ration night and morning, together with a little fodder, they will bring straight to such extent as to milking time, and will more than pay for the food fed in this way, and the labor involved in caring for them. While the days remain bright, if they are put in the stable during the night, it is much better to keep them housed until the grass is approaching dryness.—Midland Farmer.

CORN FOR THE CALVES.

After Fifteen Years of Experience Writer Declares It to Be the Very Best Food.

My experience in raising calves extends over fifteen years. Of course, everyone knows how to feed calves, but many do not know just what to feed. Ask me, and I will say "shelled corn." "When do you begin?" "Shell when the calf is three days old. Feed it just a few kernels at a time, and the calf is six weeks old. They chew it all up. I never knew a calf to pass more than two quarts of milk at a milking. If I am raising calves for feeders I do not feed them enough to make them fat. I have experimented with all manner of ground foods, but none of them sold shelled corn. My calves' hair is sleek and glossy; they are growing rapidly; they run and are always ready to eat corn. My neighbor, who persists in feeding his calves all the milk they can drink, besides a couple of quarts of ground feed, has funny looking calves. They are little, poddy things; hair standing on end. They have the scours nearly all the time; he around a corner, and I wouldn't touch one of mine for a dozen of his. In short, if you want good calves feed them corn; if you want poor, worthless animals, feed them something else.—I. H. Watt, in Practical Farmer.

USUALLY EFFECTS CURE.

Common-Sense Device for Preventing Cows Throwing Feeds or Hooking Each Other.

This is my style of a device to prevent cattle throwing feeds or hooking other cows. It is made of a strip of wood, three inches wide, one-and-a-half inches thick, and three-fourths inch thick, being attached to the horns by screws. To this is fastened, by a small bolt, a strip of wood, three inches wide, one-and-a-half

Stood a Knight of Cornwall.

Prof. George Leonard Hays, of Cornell, who lately landed New England on his lecture tour to gather facts about viticulture, is an authority on the history of apple production and preservation, and is also an expert on the subject of the apple. From these lectures, says an expert exchange, he returns with little stories that are new, quaint, and strange, how interesting. A story of the latter sort concerns a knight of Cornwall.

"I arrived one night at a mountainous place, and the professor, blind as for shelter for the night. The good people were very hospitable. They gave me a comfortable bed and an excellent meal."

"While I was eating the meal, my host said to me, 'I have ordered for you a piece of apple pie, he exclaimed in an indignant tone. 'Don't you see, I have tried to eat his pie with a fork?'"

Modern Sherlock.

The modern Sherlock was told to spot the suspected man.

"Well," said Sherlock, "I have at least found that his wife is away on a vacation."

"How did you find that out?" asked the mystified friend.

"He is wearing a safety pin instead of a suspender button."—Chicago Daily News.

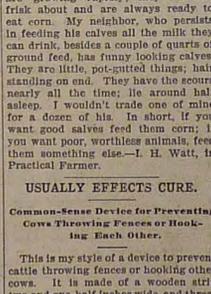

ALL TIRED OUT.

The weary, worn-out, all-tired feelings come to everybody who is overworked, and taking a course of the treatment I told the readers of this paper that they had relieved me of kidney trouble, disposed of some back with pain along the lumbar region, and beneath the shoulder blades. During the interval which has elapsed I have had occasion to resort to Doan's Kidney Pills when I noticed warnings of an attack. On each and every occasion the results obtained were just as satisfactory as my previous ones. I am, therefore, patently indorse the preparation to-day as I did over two years ago."
