Will Hold Annual Fair September 14th, 15th and 16th 1905. The Society, its Officers and Stockholders. An Invitation Extended.

Top of the citizens of Pine county, principally at Pine City, a number of years ago paid in each $25.00 or more and started the Pine County Agricultural Society, held quite a respectable fair for a start, and since then annually have been holding a fair with more or less success and a considerable amount of work by a few.

The fair a number of years has been fairly successful and they have acquired quite a tract of land on the north side of Snake River, all paid for, upon which is located a very good race track, ball grounds, a couple of buildings for exhibits and a considerable number of sheds for stock, etc. In case of not holding and keeping up the fair, the title and all appurtenances thereto reverts to Pine county.

In the meantime the society has paid to the farmers who patronized it and brought exhibits, a number of hundred dollars each year, as well as paid for and had on different years a very good program of sports and attractions.

According to the law under which the society is incorporated, the shares are limited to three hundred. The shareholders are now as follows:

Anyone having shares that are not on this list are asked to kindly notify the secretary, D. Greeley, Pine City, so he can be issued new stock and be taken care of in a fair and just manner.

Feeling that this which should be a county fair in fact as well as in name, and that the matter had not been fully enough advertised and stated to all the citizens in Pine county, no matter which part or corner, the shareholders met at the annual meeting in June and reorganized, electing J. Y. Breckenridge, president; D. Greeley, secretary; F. A. Hodge, treasurer; H. J. Rath, general superintendent, and we are giving this information fully to all the citizens of Pine county, and ask for the co-operation of farmers, business men and representative men generally in their respective localities in every part of Pine county, to buy some shares, come and help bring exhibits, get part of the premiums, have a say and take an interest in the management of its affairs and make this Pine County Fair one of the best in the state each year.

The management will take pleasure in answering any inquiry, and any of the citizens of the county from the north, south, east or west who are willing to take part and help bring exhibits or honor us with their presence will be used the best in our power in every way.

The premium list is now being printed for the coming fair, September 14, 15 and 16, 1905, and will be quite freely distributed, and any request for a copy will be promptly filled and copy sent.

Shares are $5 each. Apply to D. Greeley, Secretary, Pine City, and farmers, business men and the people generally in EVERY PART of Pine county take hold and push your FAIR this year.

The state gives the Fair association each year an amount equal to what it pays out in premiums the year before. The county also is disposed to make an appropriation within reason each year for the assistance of the enterprise.

Remember the DATES and COME to the FAIR. Yours Truly,
J. Y. BRECKENRIDGE, Pres.
D. GREELEY, Secretary.

A CLOSE CALL.
Little Carrie Boyle Falls Into Cross Lake and Barely Escapes Drowning.
Carrie E. the 13 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. D. Boyle, nearly met death by drowning in Cross lake yesterday afternoon.

The little girl, who is just able to toddle about in baby style, and her older brother, who is only a couple years her senior, were playing down on the beach below the Boyle residence.

It is surmised that the child fell into the lake out of an old boat which was run up a little way onto the beach. The brother ran up the embankment with all possible haste and informed his mother whose presence of mind enabled her to grasp the situation immediately. She ran to the beach and after a desperate effort succeeded in landing the child who was apparently dead. The little one was carried to the house where after heroic efforts on the part of the mother and several of the neighbors signs of life rewarded them, and the lad is now as well as can be expected.

Prof. J. B. Hay was reported quite seriously ill with inflammation of the bowels at Rush City this week. Late advice though informs us that he is now much better which we must impart with pleasure.

NEW MAIL ROUTE.
R. F. D. No. 4, for Patrons to Pokegama Lake and Return, will be Established Soon.

A new mail route is to be established at Pine City, and its carrier will make the first trip October 15th.

The consummation of this desirable advantage will be due to the interest taken by J. Y. Breckenridge and Congressman J. Adam Bede.

An inspector, together with Messrs. Breckenridge, Redding, (representing Mr. Bede) and W. P. Gottry went over the proposed new route, about two weeks ago, and as a result a favorable report has been returned and the route is assured.

Applications for carriers will be sent to the Department and examinations for the position of carrier will be held as soon as possible.

The route will be known as R. F. D. No. 4, and will pass 100 homes with 475 persons residing along the road directly north of Snake river to Pokegama lake and return. The distance aggregates a total of about 26 miles.

Those who make Tuxedo and the various other resorts about the lake their retreats during the summer months will be accommodated by the carrier on this route, and the mail at that time of the year will naturally be unusually large.

Route No. 4 will go north one mile, crossing the bridge at Pine City, thence directly west to St. Elmo, following the section line road commonly known as the "new road," thence northeast to Mission Creek, and leading for Pokegama lake over Brookpark road, and north to Pokegama creek crossing. It then follows the road west to Jarvis bay road, then turns south to Tuxedo. Here the road is retraced to the Cornell crossing, back to the head of the lake and thence, following the old road, back to Pine City.

BODY OF STRANGER
Taken Out of Kettle River Near Rutledge Yesterday, Coroner Wiseman Goes to Scene.

County coroner, Dr. R. L. Wiseman, received a message yesterday afternoon requesting him to come to Rutledge at once to view the body of a man who had been found lying in Kettle river near that place.

According to the report received by the doctor nothing could be learned of the case further than, that the corpse appeared to have a large fracture of the skull and that he had been in the water for two or three weeks.

Dr. Wiseman left this morning on the early train for the scene of trouble and until after the inquest nothing further can be learned.

Tuxedo Club Riplets.
The members of the Pokegama Tuxedo Club now enjoy the pleasures of a new sail boat. Under the masterful hand of Major Cooley "Lois" has all the honors and medals for speed and safety on the placid waters of Lake Pokegama.

P. L. Williams, vice-president of the Minnesota National Bank, and Jay D. Utendorfer, also of the Minnesota National, of Minneapolis, were in evidence at the Club last Sunday. Mr. Utendorfer made the record fishing catch of the day, even leaving our "Isak Walton" (John Faulkner) in the clear. The ambition thus aroused bids fair to bring out a lot of followers of the rod from the twin cities.

Paul Wright and daughter, Ruth C., of Chicago, are the advance members of a party from the Windy City in search of health and comfort. Mr. Wright, who is afflicted with asthma, reports immediate improvement, and is exceedingly pleased with the accommodations found at the Club.

BEDE SPEAKS AT ST. ELMO
Our Noted Congressman "Makes Good" as a Preacher at Pokegama Lake, Sunday.

Sunday afternoon J. Adam Bede addressed a large number of the citizens of Pokegama lake and this place. He made one of the best talks it has been our pleasure to listen to for some time. More than one expressed it, Mr. Bede has missed his calling, as he should have been a preacher. He spoke on a religious subject, and said when he commenced that he would only speak for fifteen minutes, but instead he spoke for over an hour, and when he got through his audience could scarcely realize where the time had gone, being so interested in the talk.

Mr. Bede spoke in the open air in front of "Heart's Ease" cottage, and his audience reclined on the ground or occupied benches and chairs furnished by Messrs. Harte, Holbert and Greeley. There were about one hundred in the audience, and all enjoyed the sermon—as it could be called by no other name—and said they were glad to have been able to have Congressman Bede as a parson.

BARRY MAN NISSING.
Oscar Hanley Disappears from Home Near Hinckley and His Whereabouts Sought in Vain.

Great mystery surrounds the disappearance of Oscar Hanley, the young man who left his home in the Town of Barry, east of Hinckley, last Friday afternoon.

During the past week numerous searches have scoured the woods in search of him or his remains but without success. It is generally presumed that he has been killed by lightning or that, as he had a gun with him when he left his home, he accidentally shot and killed himself.

He might have been out in the woods during the bad storm Friday evening and been pinned beneath some fallen tree, and it is this theory as much as any other that has moved the men to be diligent in their search.

It is also possible, though doubtful, that he left for parts unknown.

There is a railway over the Egyptian desert which runs for 45 miles in a straight line, but this is beaten by one in Australia. The railway from Nyngan to Bourke, in New South Wales, runs over a plain quite level for 125 miles in a mathematically straight line. There is hardly an embankment, not a curve, and only three very slight elevations.

One of the most beautiful diamonds in the world is the "Regent". It weighs 410 carats. Its present weight is only 136 carats. Its cutting, which is of great excellence, required two years of work. It was valued in 1771 at 12,000,000 francs. This diamond was purchased in the rough state by the manufacturer, William Pitt, for $12,000,000. The Duke of Orleans then regent of France, acquired it in 1771 for the sum of $3,750,000 francs.

Mrs. Annie Riker, of California, not content with years of prospecting and mining during which she discovered the Calico silver mines and several valuable gold properties, set to work some time ago to build the San Joaquin and Truckee railway through a rough, mountainous country covered with forests. Mrs. Riker is president of the company, and an excellent president. Her husband is its treasurer, and four of the six directors are women.

Gold and silver bullion, buried under the sea for more than 3500 years, is being brought to the surface of the Bay of Moul by divers employed by the Duke of Argyll. The search for this fortune, the size of which can only be guessed at, but which report says runs well up into the millions, has been, intermittently constant ever since the days when the great Spanish galleons lay to the bottom in that secluded bay on the west coast of Scotland, but only now is it meeting with any real success.

The desire expressed by the Japanese envoys that the peace negotiations shall be conducted in the English language once more illustrates the spread of this speech. For the past 300 years French has been the accepted language of diplomacy among European nations, although of late English has been freely used. The ascendancy of English is due not so much to its own vigor and elasticity as to the more practical reason that it is becoming almost a universal language and, therefore, carries expediency with it.

There are two trade secrets that the outside world, it seems, will never learn. One is the secret of the making of the bright and beautiful cut or called vermilion, or Chinese red; the other is a Turkish secret—the infusing of the hardest steel with gold and silver. Among the Chinese and among the Assyrians these two secrets are guarded well. Apprentices, before they are taken for other trades, must swear a strong oath to reveal nothing of what passes in the workshop. These apprentices, furthermore, must belong to families of standing.

The only two dollar bills in existence have been taken to the bank for an eastern collector and the other to Mrs. Julia Turner, of St. Louis. They are worth $1,000 each. "My number was a Bryan," said Mrs. Turner, "and the bill was one of several paid to my grandfather, Col. John N. Bryan, who bought the bill in 1812, and by the father of Mrs. Turner. The payment was made in connection with a land deal in Tennessee, the details of which I have never seen and do not learn. The bill was an inheritance of mine, but I never realized its value."

Washington, Aug. 7.—Attorney General Moody Saturday telegraphed the United States district attorneys at Madison, Wis.; Milwaukee, Wis.; St. Paul, Minn.; Parkersburg, W. MILWAUKEE JURY INDICTS PEISTER PROMINENT AND WEALTHY CITIZEN CHARGED WITH PERJURY OF BIG SWIM.

Indictment Causes a Sensation—True Bills Against Four Others Returned—Milwaukeean Makes a Counter Attack.

Milwaukee, Aug. 8.—Charles F. Peister, one of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of Milwaukee, was indicted by the grand jury of Milwaukee county Friday, charged with stealing $14,000 belonging to the Wisconsin Rendering company of this city. At the same time indictments were returned against four others, the charge of which was being alleged in three of the indictments and one of perjury. The list of persons for whom capias were issued and the charges are as follows: Charles E. Peister, capitalist, one indictment; Jacoby A. Eaton, former supervisor, one indictment; bribery; Frank F. Retcher, supervisor, one indictment, embracing 14 counts; bribery; Frank F. Retcher, county senator, one indictment, bribery; Frank F. Schultz, formerly newspaper editor, one indictment, perjury.

The indictment against Mr. Peister alleges that on March 30, 1901, the accused was balise of a large sum of money said to be $14,000, said amount being placed in his hands and deposited with him for the Wisconsin Rendering company for the purpose of obtaining for the Wisconsin Rendering company a large and valuable contract of the city of Milwaukee for the collecting, transporting and disposing of garbage, and if not so used and expended to be returned to the Wisconsin Rendering company, and not having been used for the purpose aforesaid, and while he was balise of said amount did unlawfully, feloniously and fraudulently steal, take and carry away and fraudulently convert the same to his own use.

Indictment Causes Sensation. The indictment causes a profound sensation in Milwaukee, and many of the biggest enterprises of Milwaukee. He is a director of one of the leading banks, owns a large interest in a livery, is proprietor of a large hotel and one of the leading newspapers of the city. He is perhaps done as much or more than any other citizen of Milwaukee in building up the city.

Peister Makes Counter Attack. Milwaukeean, Aug. 7.—Charles F. Peister, who was indicted by the grand jury Friday, charged with larceny of $14,000, has issued a defiance against the Wisconsin Rendering company, which was practically an invitation to come forward at once and prove their case. His action took the shape of a civil suit commenced against the Wisconsin Rendering company, Fred S. Gross, Joseph Schaefer, R. Schoyer, Charles Fredrich and Henry J. Killian. These defendants were members of the rendering company, or guarantors of the company.

ENVOYS OF PEACE GREET EACH OTHER

MEETING OF ELEPHANTINE ARRIVES AT OYSTER BAY AN AUSPICIOUS EVENT.

President Said to Fear End of War Will Not Result from Conference—White Opposes 'Admiration and Cession of Territory.'

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 7.—In no imperial court of the old world was the dove of peace ever liberated under more favorable auspices than those which attended her on the Mayflower Saturday under the shadow of Sagamore Hill.

Whether Japan and Russia agree upon peace at Portsmouth or not, President Roosevelt feels that the first step has been fully as successful as he had dared to hope. If spontaneous cordiality and good feeling between BARON KOMURA, the representative of the warring powers mean anything the conference at Portsmouth promises to be the crowning event in Mr. Roosevelt's belated career. The failure of his plan for an armistice has brought discomfiture, but there was nothing to grieve for an instant the success of this particular day. The little questions of precedence which, it was feared, might rattle the diplomatic dignity of the ambassadors of peace were met effectively by the "come along boys" simplicity of the president's methods as usual.

Meeting of the Envoys. The actual meeting of the representatives of the warring powers took place on board the Mayflower. The president introduced the visitors in an impromptu manner, moving from

Horrors of Prison Life on Sakhalin Island

The Russian Prison Colony and Its Terrible Tragedies.

DESCRIBED BY A RUSSIAN WRITER

Terrible Cruelty of the Keepers and the Executioners—Methods of Punishment That Stagger Humanity—Dreaded "Knout" and How It Is Applied,

The interest of the world in the Russian penal system is awakened by the capture of the island of Sakhalin by the Japanese. From time to time during the past quarter of a century the civilized world has been shocked beyond measure at the tales of cruelty to which the Russian convicts in this vast prison have been subjected, and the depths of degradation to which these once human beings have been brought. But Russia has been careful that little of the true picture of the island should reach the outside world, and newspaper and magazine writers from England, France and the United States have made repeated attempts to secure authentic descriptions of the conditions in this great prison land, and of the atrocious cruelties practiced there, but none have ever been fully successful. Much has been guessed at, and the world would scarcely credit these pictures of the imagination.

It has remained for a Russian to give us a practically authentic picture of Sakhalin, and though the picture is tempered by seeing things from the Russian standpoint, it is still a picture that is so horrible that it staggers humanity. This story of the horrors of Sakhalin has been published in book form, and it is only translated extracts from the book that we can give here.

The First Impression.
First impressions are likely to be very vivid. I shall certainly never forget the moment when our steam launch came alongside the jetty at Korsakovsk. The landing was crowded with men. A few more steps and I was lost in that sea which I so yearned to fathom.

During the months I passed among the convicts at Sakhalin I could not free myself from two impressions which held me in thrall, torturing me and oppressing my soul like a heavy burden. They still are holding my soul under their ban and still are expressing it. The first of these impressions concerns my trip to Sakhalin. Our steamer, which transported the convicts from Odessa, reminded me of a huge barge, like those used in our sea-coast towns for transport.

The chain prison of Sakhalin is intended for the criminals of the worst kind. Officially it is called the "prison for the testing of convicts," while the "prison for convicts showing signs of reforming," or the "free prison," is reserved for convicts who have passed the test of the "chain prison."

"Our chain prison is half very bad," remarked the inspector. "We are building a new one, but it will take years to get it ready."

"Attention!" calls out a guard. A rattling of chains, and the convicts rise from the benches. On Easter Sunday two of the convicts fled from the prison, in spite of the fact that the convicts in a body had given their "word of honor" not to attempt an escape. As a punishment, all of them were put in chains, it is said, and close. Not an attempt at ventilation. No attempt at making the place habitable. No effort to make existence tolerable. Not even the convicts' chests are to be seen anywhere. Here benches, filthy straw mattresses are bundled together at the head end of the benches. The manly, lean cut plays among the benches and porrs. Unwillingly the convicts are fond of animals, for they regard them as human.

In the center of the room is a table, like a tall bench. It is triangular in shape, wet and filthy, covered with broad crusts and dirty tea cans.

We enter a cell, where we find two convicts chained to bars.

"This is your treatment!"

The warty, yellow, swarthy, chain rattles, and the men attacking the barrow show us the impudent way to control them.

The barrow, which weighs about 100 pounds, is welded to the chain around the convict's ankle.

At one time the barrows were welded to the handcuffs, but now the former is the more usual method. No matter where the convict may turn, he drags with him the unwelcome burden. He even sleeps with it on a bench made specially for the purpose.

"How long is he condemned to be chained to the barrow?" I asked.

"For two years; and the convict before him had slept in this bed for three years."

I approached the "bed." The head end of the bench is worn out with the friction of the chains. The wood had rubbed up against the iron for five years. "Even the wood wears out," rumbles the convict.

The punishment is very cruel, and would be intolerable if the convicts did not ease their burdens now and then. It is impossible to chain the convicts so fast as to absolutely prevent their freeing themselves. With the help of their feet, sometimes they grease the chains with soap and take off their burden at night under incredible agonies. But still for a few hours each month they manage to rid themselves of their incubus.

All around us we see angry faces. They peer hopelessly into the future. The places are cold, hard, somber and bitter.

Among the chained convicts many are captured fugitives, released murderers, and many still waiting to be sentenced.

"Why were you convicted?" "Suspected of theft." "And you?" "Suspected of murder." "And you?" "Suspected of murder." Nothing but "suspected!" "And you?" "And you?" "The reply came frank, sharp and firm."

The Female Prison.
The prison for women is very small. It consists of one ward which holds ten persons. The women convicts of Sakhalin are punished for their crimes in a special manner. They are given away to settlers as so-called "life mates."

Only those are in prison whose cases have not been finally passed upon. Two women arise as we enter. One is a dark, thick-skinned woman from the hills of Caucasus, who does not speak a word of Russian. The other is a young woman. She was banished here because she had induced her godfather to kill her husband.

"Why?"

"I was married to him against my will, and I loved my godfather. I thought they would send us away together. But they sent him to one place and me to another."

At Sakhalin she committed a crime rare in the annals of the island. She had defended her life mate with a gun.

He got himself into a fight with the settlers. Nine men surrounded him, and were grabbing a rifle, and shot into the group.

"You must have learned to love your life mate?"

"Of course; would I have killed for him? I might have been fought for his good fellow. I hoped I could live with him to the end, and now there's a fine mess to be told. She dries her tears and sobs sulkily."

"Nothing will happen to her," says the inspector. "She will be convicted and given to some settler in one of the distant settlements. Women in Sakhalin are not punished as men."

Perhaps some people may consider this impunity. But what greater penalty could there be for a woman who loved well enough to risk her life, and who was sentenced now to be "given away" to another man?

What a dreadful custom, remaining one of bygone ages. In the days of serfdom it was customary to give people "away," toying with their life and happiness. Of all the prisons in Rykoffsk this little prison impressed me most sadly.

The Executioners.
"Hallo, baby!" "Hallo, uncle!" "Don't you call me uncle, baby, I'm your godfather, or rather your life mate's godfather," merrily exclaims Tolstych, the old executioner of Sakhalin.

"And how do you come to be his godfather?" I ask.

"Ha, ha, your honor, I knouted him."

"Have you knouted many people?" Tolstych smiles. "Well, just as many as you see hereabouts, your honor." Tolstych is about 60 years old. He does not look a day over 40. He is a good-looking man, with a fine mustache and carefully shaved chin. He is wealthy, according to Sakhalin ideas, and is somewhat of a dude. Tolstych wears a coat of blue, and even a leather cap, which is the same of Sakhalin fashions. He always jolns and is full of fun. "Why were you banished?" "Because of the old woman!" He had killed his wife with a hatchet. "Why did you do it?" "She was no good. The husband to Sakhalin he did not lose courage. He soon found out what he was best fitted for. Cruel by nature, strong and able to become an executioner. Man is born to be an artist. He makes an art of everything. Give him any instrument, and he will show you its use like a virtuoso. The wagner's knout is called: 'With a skilled executioner, it is hard to tell whether he knouts. Apparently it is looks and sounds as if he wants to deliver a terrible blow. These heart stands still when he holds the knout. And then, weakly and patiently, he will fall know how to do it, and there is no way to control them."

Tolstych knew that there is no knout to perfection, but he used the instrument. If he was well paid, the convict soon after a hundred blows days later without regaining consciousness. Komleff had been bribed to do this by convicts who hated Gubar.

Corporal Punishment.
Ivan Grusadoff, sentenced to 80 lashes with the knout for giving an offense, was brought into the office of the doctor at the Sakhalin prison.

"Your name?" "Ivan Grusadoff." "The doctor throws a glance at the documents, and gasps.

"'Merciful Heaven! Eighty lashes!' 'The devil!' exclaims the inspector.

"Eighty," repeats the assistant, like an echo.

"Do you know where your heart is, you idiot? No pain in the side? Never! Don't you understand me, you fool? Don't you feel pain occasionally?"

"Quite well, no pain." "Yes, sir." "He will, you say again?" "Yes, sir." "No, sir; none at all."

"Do you know where your heart is, you idiot? No pain in the side? Never! Don't you understand me, you fool? Don't you feel pain occasionally?"

Every five blows required another rod. Chruspel changed his position for each rod. The second of the rod whistling through the air almost broke one's heart, and the interval between two blows seemed like an eternity.

The inspector counted: "Twenty-nine, thirty."

Wassjutin rose on the horse and sat astride. His eyes were filled with tears. "Get off!" "Two and a half minutes," said the doctor.

I thought it had lasted an hour. Then came the "Caucasian's" turn. Chruspel laid the knout on the horse one after another. He used the knout on them "in accordance with the verdict."

A look at the inspector explained to Chruspel that he was to do. He grasped the knout in the middle, which is the punishment of the "half knout."

Bardunoff trembled and shivered. He looked helpless like a hunted rabbit, and attempted to smile. Chruspel poked him in the ribs. "Lie down."

Bardunoff convulsively clasped the doctor and pulled himself together. Chruspel swung the knout with an ominous movement. This was not a punishment "in accordance with the verdict of the court," but was a private transaction, according to the customs of the Sakhalin prison inspectors.

The room was perfectly still, not a breath was heard.

Chruspel gazed inquiringly at the inspector. The latter looked about for a moment and then glanced at the doctor and me, and finally made a sign to the executioner. Chruspel grasps the "half knout." A sigh of relief was heard. "Get off!"

Former Methods.
"When I used to come to roll call," boasted K., "I was in the habit of saying: 'Good morning, dogs. Good morning, jailbirds.' And they always replied, joyfully, 'Good morning, your honor.' For they knew and I did not know that they knew that something was wrong. When I ordered something they faltered with fear. I used to say: 'Knoutians! spades! dig a grave.' My intention was to make them believe that some one would be known to death. My assistants pretended that they were calming me. The convicts were waiting in the dust before me, and punishment is no good. In my opinion nothing brings solitary confinement worse than knouting. Two weeks of solitary beats and I will show you."

We entered a gangway which was narrow and dark. On both sides were narrow cages, with bars and windows in the middle. The air in the gangway made breathing impossible. It smelled like a dog kennel. The moment we entered the gangway barking and cries were heard on all sides. The convicts howled in frenzy and attempted to burst their doors. I was reminded of a madhouse and of Dante's inferno.

"Dussouff out!" commanded the inspector.

The guard approached his cage. From the cell arose a maddened roar. "I will murder you!" "I will murder you!" "Well, perhaps you'd better leave him," calmly remarked K.

"Don't you see how that is more effective than knouting? Knouting is nothing."

W. DORASHNEVITCH.

Not for the Drawing-Room.
A woman of recently acquired wealth went into an art gallery and asked for a painting of a certain kind. "I have just what you want," said the dealer. He showed her a beautiful animal painting. She looked at it for a few minutes and then asked her the dealer: "I won't do," she said, "I want this picture for my drawing room." "It's a beautiful picture," said the dealer. "Not for a drawing room," announced the woman, conclusively; you couldn't have a cow in a drawing room."

"Didn't seem impossible." "Do you think you're going to love me?" he asked the lady as he looked into her trembling eyes.

"Well," she said archly, "popular education has advanced with such rapid strides that one can almost learn anything in these days!"—Silly story.

take the refuge and dumping it into the sea. And these convict stations and settlements seemed to me like moonstruck dumping grounds.

It made me sad to think that down in the prison settlements and all around me all traces of the human which may have remained in this before were irrevocably obscured to perish.

The second impression concerned Sakhalin itself.

My first steps on the island apparently took me back to at least a year in the history of Russia. The primitive simplicity of the existing simplicity and of the camps and many other things brought to my mind the days of serfdom.

Albert Neubauer returned last Thursday from St. Luke's hospital, St. Paul, where he had a piece of steel extracted from one of his eyes. His eyesight has improved considerably since the operation which occurred about five weeks ago. The accident happened while he was working in his father's blacksmith shop. It is sincerely hoped that his eyesight will not be permanently impaired.

A country life for a child,—not the few brief weeks of summer boarding, when he plays at doing "chores," plays at working in the garden, plays at following the plow, but the all-the-year-round tussle with weather and work, yes, and schooling in the little far-away district school, is a blessing which nothing else in life can make up for the kind; a blessing which gives him such a supply of strength and sturdiness and animal spirits as will enable him to buffet storms which would overcome a lesser spirit.

Diriding the Sexes.

While worshipping in a little chapel-of-ease a few miles from Rulith, on the Wrexham road, the sexes are so strictly divided that they cannot see each other. The building forms a right angle, in one arm of which the men sit, and the women in the other. It was built and endowed by a misogynist of the Stuart period, who objected to having his devotions distracted by the sight of the hated sex, and, sympathizing with male posterity, stipulated expressly for this division in his deed of endowment.

For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor operated on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a disagreeable place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.

Man Past Sixty in Danger.

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of prostate gland. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger, as it corrects irregularities and has cured many old men of this disease. Mr. Rodney Burnett, Rock Port, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure, I feel better than I have for twenty years although I am now 91 years old. J. Y. Breckenridge.

A Warning to Mothers.

To much care cannot be used with small children during the hot weather of the summer months to guard against bowel troubles. As a rule it is only necessary to give the child a dose of castor oil to correct any disorder of the bowels. Do not use any substitute, but give the old fashioned castor oil, and see that it is fresh, as rancid oil manifests and has a tendency to gripe. If this does not check the bowels give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy and then a dose of castor oil, and the disease may be checked in its incipency and all danger avoided. The castor oil and this remedy should be procured at once and kept ready for instant use as soon as the first indication of any bowel trouble appears. This is the most successful treatment known and may be relied upon with implicit confidence even in cases of cholera infantum. For sale by L. E. Breckenridge.

Many persons in this community are suffering from kidney complaint who could avoid fatal results by using Foley's Kidney Cure. "I had diabetes in its worst form," writes Marion Lee of Dunreath, Ind. "I tried eight physicians without relief. Only three bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure made me a well man."

Little White would be quiet; Emma to thrive on dip and rice. He was a man and a woman, a man and a woman, a man and a woman...

REUBEN WHITE'S ESCAPE

By DUKE CUYLER.

THE mountain tourist, as they follow along the banks of the winding Saco toward the place of its birth in the Great Notch, have their attention attracted by a sign rock by the roadside that bears the name of the Bartlett bowlder.

IT WAS HIS ONLY CHANCE.

Reuben White, his calm stood upon the high bank overlooking the fertile region that lies along the Saco, where he had made quite a clearing and got the most of it into a good state of cultivation. He had been subjected to the usual drawbacks incident to the settlers of that region, but thus far had triumphed over them all.

lon, he proceeded to bind Reuben's arms behind him in such a manner that he would be powerless to use them. The work was done in a twinkling, but subtle. To resist would only be to lose his life at once.

He thought of those at home, and of the danger to which they would be exposed, but there was no help for it. He must give up with them or die. He was powerless now to help himself. There was but one way, and that was to hide his time, and if the opportunity occurred to make his escape.

All that afternoon they kept on up the valley, and with every step the settler put between himself and his cabin, his heart seemed to sink still lower in his breast.

The rock of which we have spoken toward the end of the valley. Reuben knew it at a glance, for he had seen it several times when on his hunting trips in the forest.

With the aid of their tomahawks a notched stick was hastily prepared, and, leaning this against the rock, one of the savages hastily clambered thereon. Then Reuben was told to do the same. He made the attempt, but it was soon evident that he could not get up without the aid of his hands.

Convinced of this, the savages hastily unbound them, and he scrambled up. The other savage followed close behind him, and not a moment too soon. The foremost wolf sprang at his legs as he drew them up.

Cast the stick down among them, they felt themselves safe. The wolves snarled about the rock, springing up against its sides, only to fall back again in impotent rage. Reuben threw himself down upon the summit, apparently without hope or thought of escape.

Of course there was no chance then, and the savages seemed to know it. At least they did not again bind his hands, as he had feared they would do. The minutes went on, and below them the wolves snarled and gnashed their teeth in impotent rage.

Suddenly an idea presented itself to Reuben—a thought that seemed to give him a promise of escape. It might not succeed, but if it failed it would not cost him anything. He watched his opportunity, and summoned all the strength he had for the attempt. He was to make it. It was his only chance, and a desperate one at that.

HORTICULTURE

THE APPLE ORCHARD.

How It Should Be Cared For—Fighting of Insect Pests Should Not Be Neglected.

If the orchard is young, hard crops may be grown between the trees, and the practice may be safely continued till the trees begin to bear.

I have seen a good many apple orchards that could have been made sources of revenue by the judicious pruning of the trees and keeping of the insects and fungi.

The time has come when no man can afford to grow an apple orchard and leave it to the multitude of insects that now are to be found in every old-settled orchard.

In a few early days, apple orchards were not infested by the codling moth, but now these insects are to be found in almost all parts of the country.

I have seen an acre of apple orchard return more revenue to the owner than ten acres of the best corn land on the farm.

I have known the fruit from a big apple orchard sold one year for more money than the farm cost.

The apple tree that is pruned correctly at the time of its early development and first bearings can be made to be an annual bearer instead of a tree that bears only once a year.

Bearing a crop every other year is a habit with some trees that cannot be broken. It is well established. Grass, insects and fungi are the three deadly enemies of the apple orchard.

TWENTY YEARS OF IT.

Resisted by Diabetic, Tortured With Gravel and Kidney Pains.

Henry Steele, collector, of Hammondsport, N. Y., says: "Sixteen years ago I was troubled with diabetes, and I was unable to work for many years longer. For twenty years ago I had kidney trouble so bad I could not work. Backache was so serious that it was agony to lift anything. Gravel, whirling headaches, dizziness and terrible urinary disorders ran me down from 160 to 100 pounds."

Doctors told me I had diabetes and could not live. I was writhed and hopeless when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they cured me eight years ago and I've been well ever since."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all druggists. Price, 50 cents per box.

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

In each package of LION COFFEE you get one full pound of Pure Coffee. Insist upon getting the genuine. (Lion head on every package.)

The Drama of the Century.

Klaw & Erlanger's mammoth mechanical production of Gen. Wallace's mighty play, "Ben Hur," with its lustrous star of Bethlehem, its camels, Arabian steeds, oriental trappings and mimic splendor of the "gorgeous East," is beyond dispute the most elaborate spectacle ever staged in the history of the world.

Its scenes, seventeen scenes, present to the eyes a feast of multicolor beauty and variety, all set to a symphonic accompaniment of grand music. The exciting episodes such as the galley scene, with its horde of chained slaves, the sea-fight, the rescue in mid-sea and the thrilling race with two chariots and eight horses, combined with the picturesque scenes illustrating the wise men in the desert, the moonlit lake in the Orchard of Palms, where Ben Hur and Iras enjoy seclusion and make love in Iras' barge; the palm waving worshippers on Mount Olivet, dancing in their skins of beasts, to the music of the kissing cymbals, simply captivate the great audiences that are nightly in attendance wherever it is being enacted.

Whatever may be thought of the purely dramatic element supplied by William Young in his adaptation of Gen. Wallace's unique romance, it must be admitted that the result is an effective popular appeal to four classes of play goers—the spectacle-loving, the sensation-loving, the book-lovers, who like to see their favorite novels enacted on the stage, and the religious people of the community who are always attracted when a play containing healthy religious influence is presented.

TELLS YOUNG TO MARRY.
 Bishop Delaney Urges Early Unions and Advises Men Not to Delay Until 35.

Manchester, N. H.—In talking to his people at St. Joseph's cathedral, recently, Bishop Delaney said there were but 40 marriages at the cathedral during last year, ten of which were mixed—too many of the latter, he said, and not enough of the former. Mixed marriages, he continued, are not to be encouraged, as the church is against them. They are performed, not because the church is willing, but because, in a majority of instances, the contracting parties would go to the city clerk or a justice of the peace to have the knot tied.

The bishop urged the young people to get married and to do so soon. Some men, he said, think it well enough to wait until they are 35 before getting married, but at this age a man has lived the best part of his life. He is an old bachelor and the wife he chooses is generally a prim old maid. "Too long contrivances are not advisable, said the bishop. He advised the fathers and mothers of daughters to give the young man six months to call upon his lady love, and, if in this time his intentions do not prove serious, to inform him that he had better go.

Many young people contend they cannot afford to get married, as they cannot save money enough to warrant it, said Bishop Delaney. But if they did not spend so much money on other things in presents and in going about, they could save sufficient money to furnish a nice home and to live comfortably.

I used this liniment and in a few days I was able to walk again. I have since used it many times and it has always proved a life saver. I can not say enough for its merit.
