CLAIMS DISCOVERY OF NEW POWER.

Mysterious Energy by Use of the Principle of Weights.

Claiming the discovery of a new mechanical power, Max W. Kollm, artist, by profession and inventor by inclination, is in Seattle on his way to Alaska, where he will work out his principle undisturbed by troublesome visitors or jealous competitors. Within eight months, says Kollm, he will return from the north and give to the world a power as valuable in practical mechanics as steam or electricity.

For sixteen years Kollm has been working on his pet idea. He has carried it with him from Germany to the interior of Alaska, and nursed it night and day. He says that for these sixteen years, in the midst of other work to give him a livelihood, he has been thinking out the principle, and that at last he has the scheme practically perfected. After a year spent in the mountains of Idaho, where he went to work out a few mechanical details, he is at a point where he is sure success looms before him. He will leave for Fairbanks on January 25, and believes that in less than a year he will have his apparatus for utilizing the new power patented and in shape to be of immense commercial importance.

Particularly as to the exact nature of this mysterious power are not to be gained from principle of weight applied on a series of levers. "I got my idea from watching a man manipulate scales," says the inventor. "He lifted a railroad car by a touch of his finger on a certain lever, thus throwing a number of weights into play. My principle is along the same line, but much farther worked out." And beyond this the reticent inventor will not go.

Men who have "mashed" over the trails in Alaska know the name of Kollm well. He has been in the interior for years, and has gained a reputation in the north for bravery and ability. With his paintings and curios he has made more than sufficient for himself and his wife, who has accompanied him in all his travels. She went to Alaska with the first woman who ventured into the key north, and is almost as well known throughout Alaska as Kollm himself. She is said to be the first woman who walked every foot of the way from Dawson to Skagway in winter.

Kollm has led a roving life. Born in Germany fifty-three years ago, he studied painting at Berlin and Munich under the best masters of the day. When the Franco-Prussian war broke out in 71, Kollm, then only 17 years of age, volunteered for service, and went through the war, serving with such distinction that he was granted medals for conspicuous bravery. In 1873 he came to the United States. Since then he has been much on the move, finally going to Alaska in the early days of the gold excitement, where he corresponded for London newspapers.

In Alaska he is known principally as a painter. He designed the diploma of the Arctic Brotherhood, of which he has been an prominent member for years. Painting on tent-canvas, tarp, moose hides or what ever came to his hand, he found a ready sale for his work. Besides this, Kollm has done work outside of Alaska that entitles him to be called an artist. One of the San Francisco theaters used to boast a huge curtain painted by him, and a Boise, Idaho theater is now using another curtain decorated by the same hand.

Through all his years of roving and painting, Kollm cherished his idea of the new power. Whenever he had a little leisure time he set himself to working out the details. He had many a failure before success seemed even in sight. Many a time he had to leave work on the great idea to take up something else. But always he came back to the scheme with energy unabated.

Finally, about a year ago, he felt that he was nearing victory. He left Alaska with his wife, and came to the states. They went into the mountains of Idaho, where for months Kollm fished, planning the final details before he should announce them to the world.

Then came a disappointment. Reading a San Francisco paper, Kollm saw a dispatch from New York, telling of an inventor there who had announced the same thing that Kollm had been working on for so long. Kollm was stunned at first. Then, thinking it over, he decided that he could improve still further on his idea.

With this in mind he will go back to Alaska with his wife. He believes that the New York inventor has not, after all, solved the great problem, and that it remains for him to give it the world. He expects to be absent in Alaska for eight months, then to come out with fame and perhaps fortune awaiting him.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

A VILLAGE HALL

Pine City is Large Enough and Should Have a Village Hall—Every town and Even Every Cross Road Has Such an Institution.

The council at their last meeting broached the subject of a village hall. This is a move in the right direction, as our village has long been in need of just such an institution. The village owns the ground from the court house to the corner where the engine house stands. Of course we understand that the village has what it calls a village hall, i. e., the old school house. But compare the hall in this place with the halls in Hinckley, Sandstone, Rush City, Rutledge, or even Rock Creek, and every citizen of the capital of the county should hang their heads with shame.

It is time we have a larger hall in this place, much larger than any hall in any of the places we have mentioned, but just the same we need a village hall.

If the village could sell the building it now uses as a village hall and on the same ground put up a fine two-story building with council chamber, justice of the peace office, hook and ladder truck room, and club room that could be used as a fireman's room on the first floor, and the second story to be fitted up with a good stage and a good dancing floor, the village would not only get the license from the shows, but all there is in it, and our citizens would have a building they could point at with pride, and say, "this is our village hall."

We earnestly hope that the council will early take steps for the construction of a building to be used as a village hall.

A Chimney Fire.

Thursday morning an alarm of fire was turned in, and upon investigation it was found that the roof around the chimney on the Jonas Gray residence, on the south end of Cross lake, was on fire. The fire ladders turned out but owing to the deep snow and the distance the engine and hose carts were not taken out. When the citizens reached the scene J. D. Wilcox, Jr., and several of the neighbors had the fire about out. The damage to the house is but slight.

The Coldest of the Season.

Sunday night was the coldest of the season, the thermometer registering as low as 32 degrees below zero, several of the pumps freezing, the one in Peter Enger's saloon freezing up and bursting. A train on the N. P. had to remain on the side track all night because it could not make the hill a mile south of town on account of the frost in the rails, and it was noon Monday before it could get away from there. The sewer from the Hotel Agnes froze up just outside of the building during Monday forenoon. The water backed up and flooded the barber shop in the basement of the hotel, and made it very disagreeable for all concerned.

Ryder Will Furnish the Music

Don't forget that the music for the Firemen's ball will be furnished by the Ryder orchestra, of St. Paul. All those who like to hear good music, whether you trip the light fantastic or no, should come out and hear this celebrated orchestra. John Ryder, the leader, is an old Pine City boy, he having been born and raised in this place, until going to St. Paul with his parents, when about twelve years old. He took up the study of music and made the mandolin a specialty, on which instrument he is considered the best in the twin cities. He has gathered a number of first-class musicians, and formed what is known as Ryder's Mandolin orchestra. If you like music and wish to spend a pleasant evening attend the dance at Rath's hall on the anniversary of the birth of the Father of his country.

HER SECOND VALENTINE

By WRIGHT A. PATTERSON

St. Valentine's day, but it brought an unexpected flush to the cheeks of Jennie Morris. Rather she was Jennie Morris 20 years ago, now her neighbors knew her as plain Jane Morris. Twenty years ago she had been a blithe young girl just budding into magnificent womanhood, the belle and pet of the village, and people generally had voted Henry Fraser the most fortunate of young men when it was said that Jennie Morris was to be his wife. Twenty years ago, to have seen the time seemed to the woman living alone now in the village where once she had reigned as queen. Parents gone to their long rest ten years before, leaving her but a sufficient competence to keep her from the door. She was still lilted by the village folk, for she played the role of Good Samaritan in every needful hour. Every day in the year saw one she was at the back and call of any who needed her help. But St. Valentine's day was her own; her own to spend alone, with the greatest sorrow of her life, for it was on St. Valentine's day 20 years before that she had driven Henry Fraser from her home, a victim of foolish pettiness. For 20 days of each year she cast this sorrow from her that she might be of help to others, but on this one day she brought it all back to her only that she might cherish the love she had spurned so foolishly.

When the remains of her simple breakfast had been cleared away she went to the drawer of the little secretary and took from it the memoranda of her courtship, of the happy days when she was the affianced bride of Henry Fraser. Among them was the golden circle he had placed upon her finger when she had said "yes" to his wedding. She had never returned it, as for years after she had driven him from her she did not know where to send it. Then when she brought a name mentioned as a prominent business man of an eastern city the little circle with its modest setting had become too dear to her to part with, and besides he had probably forgotten its existence. Then, too, there was the valentine. It was the first and last one he had sent her after their engagement, and it was because of this same valentine that she had spurned the love he offered. It was but a pretty verse, a love message written on a plain sheet of note paper, and signed

Henry called that evening and she deliberately crumpled his love message into a ball and threw it into his face. In vain did he attempt to explain that he was making every effort to save for their home. She would not be pacified. If she was not worth as good as other girls received, she would have none of him, and he could leave and never return.

And he did leave. Left the village on the night train, and she had never seen him again. Her mother found the crumpled bit of paper on the floor where it had fallen, and realizing its full significance had carefully laid it away. Within a week the willful girl was lamenting her loss, but Henry Fraser was gone, gone she knew not where, nor for 16 years did she so much as hear of him. Then one day in reading the city paper she attracted the attention of commercial centers throughout the country. There could be no mistake for it told of his having been born and reared in this same village.

Jennie Morris sat until well towards noon recounting the memories of the happy days before that fatal quarrel, and was awakened from her reveries by the tinkle of the bell at the door. She opened the door and there stood a young man in a well-tailored suit, and she recognized him as the man who had driven her from her home. He was looking at her with a look of surprise, and she was looking at him with a look of surprise. "What a coincidence," she said, "that you should be here on this day."

When she answered it one of the village children handed her an envelope. It was plain white and bore nothing but a sufficient competence to keep her from the door. She was still lilted by the village folk, for she played the role of Good Samaritan in every needful hour. Every day in the year saw one she was at the back and call of any who needed her help. But St. Valentine's day was her own; her own to spend alone, with the greatest sorrow of her life, for it was on St. Valentine's day 20 years before that she had driven Henry Fraser from her home, a victim of foolish pettiness. with his name. How angry she had been when it came, how she had exposed one of those silk and lace affairs exposed for sale in the village store. She could still remember the one she had particularly admired and expected. It was much the finest thing of the kind in the village that year, and her disappointment was but heightened when Lucy Edwards came in bearing the coveted bit of sentiment.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Here was a noble product of the soil. Growing up on the prairie of the west; Inured to poverty; inured to toil; The charity of heaven in his breast; A soul whose duty ever onward pressed; Beyond the date of calumny and hate; That stood in every crisis for the state; Till earth had linked his memory with her spirit.

As statesman, president, and master of his fate. He pierced the scenes with a prophet's eye. Humanity was what he sought to free. He passed the letter of the statute by. To give the spirit of its utmost best. His life was given, both in word and deed. From justice and passion wholly free; Of liberty he passed a pregnant seed. For millions and for millions yet to be, Himself the bondman's knight of Nature's sold.

A tribune of the people, so he sprang And seized the reins of power and high place. While through the world his challenge grandly rang. And shook Oppression's temple in its base. His was the motto of the free race. On whom the seal of sterling merit sat; The buckle of the nation's honorably face. That shallow wit had laughed their arrows— Ball-spitter, orator, and greatest democrat. Along the wide horizon of the years. A deep, sonorous echo of his name. Telling, thunder-like, and future History bears. An answering echo from the halls of fame. We see the tall, the gaunt, the stately frame. We mark the will to dare, the mind to plan; We find the quiet resolve, the lofty aim. And while his rugged virtues were so clear, We stand amazed, while we cry: "What a man!"

And upward to the portals of the stars, And past the constancies of the Seven Stars. Beyond the smoky banners of our wars, Borne outward on the plumes of the breeze. His fame is sung in diverse master keys, And shrined in bronze, or heralded in rhyme. Past mountain tops, and past the Pict-lands, Far-sounding, still, with notes sublime. Loud-brought by the mighty trumpet-tone of Time.—Ernest McGaffey, in St. Paul Globe.

POCKET HIS CASH DRAWER.

Abraham Lincoln Carried Postal Funds with Him When Postmaster of Salem, Ill.

Senator Culom, of Illinois, who was an intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln, tells the following story of the early times in Illinois when Lincoln was the postmaster of the town of Salem:

"The cash drawer of the post office there," said Senator Culom, "was Lincoln's vest pocket. It was a cash coin's vest pocket, but it was a cash coin's vest pocket."

Where Lincoln Married.
Old House at Springfield Has Been Remodeled Into a Beautiful Modern Home.

The old Edwards home in South Second street, Springfield, Ill., where Abraham Lincoln and Mary Todd were married, which was later converted into St. Agatha's school under the direction of the Episcopal church, has been made into one of the most beautiful homes in Springfield.

The old residence has witnessed some very interesting events during its life. The old house as it was had many nooks and corners, its old-fashioned stoniness added to the charm of romance and many were the stories told by schoolgirls of how Lincoln was married in this room and died in another.

The front parlor, where Lincoln was married, has been changed, in that one large massive window replaces the former low French windows, of which there were two. A new front door has been put in, which is a pity, as the old one of heavy oak seemed a part of the house and had swung open to admit some of the most illustrious men and women of the state and country.

A LINCOLN ANECDOTE.

Little Girl Refused to Kiss Him to Gratify Her Heart's Fondest Wish.

The heroine of the following anecdote about Lincoln is now an old lady, but she declares that when she recalls the way in which she met the advances of the man who afterward became her hero it still brings her the blush of shame to her cheek.

"Who has not at some time longed for the unattainable—the thing just out of reach—because for that very reason, perhaps, seems to him the most desirable object the world holds? Had Lincoln been to me what Great Britain was to Napoleon, but, to my despair, the little ticket pinned to its center read '20 cents—just 20 cents in excess of my entire bank account.'"

"Week after week, when I went with my mother to the store to exchange butter and eggs for sugar and other commodities which the farm did not yield, the coveted prize lay tantalizingly before my eyes. As time went on the brilliancy of the red rose which adorned its center began to fade, its specks here and there sully the purity of the lilies, but never for a moment did my affections waver. Through what I almost believed to be night, they still hung round the wreath of that cushion."

"Lincoln's fellow-clerk, a fresh-complected young fellow, who with his check and dried looks seemed to me a perfect Adonis, and who, if the truth were known, shared my heart with the rose, always insisted that I get a kiss for my to-day, little girl! Whereupon I would be seized with a paroxysm of shyness and take refuge behind my mother's skirts."

"One evening, after the red-checked youth had proffered his request in vain for about the hundredth time, a tall, ungainly young man came forward, and as he handed my mother her mail said: 'Perhaps, little girl, you will kiss me.' 'I shook my head most emphatically. 'Come now, if you'll let me have a kiss I'll give you anything there is in the store,' he bribed, and, stooping from his great height, he lifted me to the counter, where my face was on a level with his eyes."

"Anything in the store! I glanced at the desire of my heart and my resolution weakened. 'Would—would you give me that bead pluncation?' I whispered. 'He smiled and nodded assent. 'I looked at my suit—oh, but he knew that then. No, I shook my head, the price was too high. Then, as I glanced my eyes toward Adonis, he said, 'I might be him, it occurred to me that I might strike a bargain more to my taste.'"

"I drew a long breath and took my courage in both hands. 'If you'll give that cushion, I'll—I'll kiss the pretty one for you!'—N. Y. Times.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

St. Peter—Nicollot's richest past deposits, regarded as the richest in Minnesota, are to be exploited by the United States Fuel company, with headquarters in Chicago. Officers of the Northwestern Fuel company, which is soon to begin developing the beds near Norwood, are also interested in the venture, and the prospect is extending $50,000 in purchasing lands and erecting a factory near Oshtemo, a small station on North-Western road, seven miles west of St. Peter. Peat is found in various parts of Nicollet county, but the most extensive deposits are in the vicinity of Timber, Oak Leaf, Goose and Middle lakes, all of which are within easy reach of Oshtemo. Many of the bogs cover large areas and the peat in them varies from seven to twelve feet in depth. Analysis shows that the deposits are of fine quality and experts claim that the supply is practically inexhaustible.

Mad Dogs.—As a result of an epidemic of mad dogs, the mayor issued instructions that all canines found unlicensed and running at large should be killed. Up to date forty-four dogs have been shot, and the city marshal on Jan. 9 Axel Ambers, a farmer living near Cormorant drove to town and one of his horses was bitten by a dog. The dog was afterwards killed. It is reported that the horse developed symptoms of hydrophobia and was subsequently killed. Some owners of valuable dogs have strenuously objected to the action of the authorities in killing unlicensed dogs, and the claim was made that there was no legal authority to kill licensed animals. This question was referred to the state live stock and sanitary board, which, through S. H. Ward, has replied that the authority of the local board is ample.

Saloonkeepers' Fault.—Winnona.—The criminal calendar for the January term of the district court here has been completed, and there was only one acquittal of the ten prisoners arraigned. Victor Malawick entered a plea of guilty to assault and battery on a woman, for stabbing F. Geisel, and he was sentenced to an indeterminate sentence in the reformatory at St. Cloud. Judge Snow was sentenced to the reformatory at St. Cloud, who said he was drunk at the time of the stabbing, stated in effect that the real offenders were the saloonkeepers who sold the liquor, and that if something is not done to enforce the law he will take the matters into his own hands, and see that the next grand jury is instructed to make a careful investigation.

Accidentally Shot.—Mendota.—Carl Guisong, a farmer, was accidentally shot by his twelve-year-old son Willis. The bones in the right ankle were so badly shattered that the physicians at the hospital say that it will be necessary to amputate the foot. The boy intended to go to the hunting after dinner. He went upstairs to get his father's shotgun and took it into the kitchen. He had who shot the gun, and placed a shell in the chamber as he was about to leave the house. His mother and father were sitting beside a stove. He started to examine the gun, and as he did so he was hit by the charge. The shot penetrated the bottom of his mother's skirt and the charge lodged in the lower part of his father's right ankle.

Silk Mill.—Brainerd.—C. H. Paine is authority for the statement that a silk mill is to be established near Brainerd. Mr. Paine says a Chicago man has just completed the purchase of eighty acres of land of land near there and will at once begin the construction of a mill. He says the mill will be built at Smiley in order to avoid labor troubles, which in the larger cities have interfered more or less with the operation of the plant. It is said that fifty girls will be employed.

News Notes.—St. Paul.—The railroad rate hearing was adjourned to March 26. Minneapolis.—Harry A. Kennedy, of 3504 Fourth avenue S., and one of the best-known mining engineers in the country, was instantly crushed to death, 1,500 feet below the surface, in the Plymouth mine at Battle, Mont.

Two Harbors.—A Scandinavian named Nels Erickson, about 40 years of age, died from injuries sustained while at work for the Drake & Stratton company at Albion, in northern St. Louis county.

South St. Paul.—Barney Regan, weighmaster for the Western Weighing association, and his family were nearly suffocated by coal gas at their residence. Mrs. Regan is still in a precarious condition.

St. Paul.—The supreme court has decided that the municipal court of Minneapolis has jurisdiction to try cases arising anywhere in Hennepin county which are within the jurisdiction of the justice court. Minneapolis.—H. E. Cobb's residence in the Linden Hill district, was ransacked from top to bottom by burglars, who obtained only some small change for their trouble. ### Amalgamated Gas (Continued).

The guy Addicks was a smooth old pinner. He made me take a table of hot fat that had just pulled his face out of a pot of fifty-cent butter to cool it off in five dollars' worth of ice cream. He had lamps like dark lanterns working overtime and was as cheery as a man with a permit to spit in the street. He fubbed around for a few minutes and then set through the smoke:

"Well, Sir Thomas, why am I honored this evening? You have handed me the 'Financial Pontoonist' in its old and ancient form, and I am not Cotton-Tongued Thirsty to butt into a Punk Force."

"You got no kick coming," sez Lawson. "Didn't I help you milk the Public Cow and hand Rogers the Poisoned Coffee on that Bay State tax?"

"Look here," sez the Boss, "do you want to cut in with me and give the Scrambled Oil Dyspeptic a new brand of Sponch Ache?"

"Can't be done, eh? You're as wrong as a wart on a leading lady's nose. And I put this in your paper, Addicks, while it's happening we won't do a thing but Shake Down the shoe-string speculators all over the country for a bundle of

"Stop peddling chestnuts," chirped Addicks, "and come to the Center."

"Look here," sez the Boss, "do you want to cut in with me and give the Scrambled Oil Dyspeptic a new brand of Sponch Ache?"

"On the level, Tommy, have you quit the Oil Crowd for good?"

"You can't make a dime from the Oil Bunch. Sure yes, I'm their green-greaser all right. It was this way: I beat you to them on the Gas Proposition. We were as tickled as a pig at a summer baby. Of course, Rogers held out on me when the Amalgamated Copper Lambchops were divided, but I expected that. It was a case dog eat dog, and he had the longest teeth."

"I gave him a moving picture talk of how it tasted to get the Short End of a thirty-five million dollar killing, and he was the Particular Guy what had flamed the suckers into buying mines for $75,000,000 which only cost $400,000. But the real cause of our Roasting Split was their getting next to me tripping in a cold deck in the shape of Tricky Copper."

"That's a little too nice for me, and their sucker-stretching blend. I'm for straight through-scratching red liquor and what's more, I've got to be Head First in the Park when they play root-the-hickory-nuts with any Herd Ring-around-the-rosey is right-ly right when I'm the rosey, but sixty-six when otherwise."

"Kansas is playing a Dead March under the Oil Gang's window and Terrible Teddy is giving a correct imitation of a hungry tomcat in a Virgin Rationary."

"It's our move. You see as Jimmie Britt when he sang Dreamland to young Corbett."

Addicks set something about not being able to trust the Boss and began to talk like a sea lion barking for Breakfast Food.

"That was me out to Sell Papers, and I fast-frightened a few swift bundles of my Warrant Stunt, but it didn't make a hit. After I had shook meself silly and breathed so heavy that I felt as winded as a church organ after mass, I took a tumble to meself and just listened."

"Mister Addicks signed up for the season to do the Rubber Grove Works and the Boss then showed down on his plan, and sez:

"Addie, it's this way. I don't have to put you wise on Your part in the Con, because you're a G. A. R. when it comes to Panhandling, so here goes for mine. But first let me rattle the Bones on the past for a sip or two."

"They was drinking French bubbles something fierce."

"Of course you've read Nobody's Magazine. Well, I used to have an Organ of my Own and I told the Public so I give the publisher the having-a-go of the Gethere Brotherhood and sang a lease hilly about increased Circulation. They were all so right, till I drew a copper-colored sketch of a Solid Gold Backstop to catch passes, returned copies and dissolved the contracting. And you know me, Addie. I haven't pressed me own pants for many years."

"I imported a crate of Superheated Words from Hot-air Land, and got a couple of war correspondents who were stuck on Open-face Check Book to help me shuffle them. The first great of Unnatural gas that I shot through the meter made the Public sit up all night."

"I was the realist thing since George Wash."

"I called names made threats and crowded Lumberjacks in the pockets of the System's Standard Co."

"I have given them Pre-Insinuations ever since."

"I have told how the enemy would

"The thing went bully till the February number, and no questions asked, but I fell down hard on that issue."

"The big Winland made by copying my own tips to the Public on Amalgamated made me overcomed and I missed a right at Rogers for little old Wall Street's Greasy Jaw."

"I had to make good to the magazine for about 400,000 unsold copies, and I learned no a lesson much at all, plenty."

"I got the public with me again on the next issue by serving another round of fake Nursery Talk between me and Rogers."

"Next to the Real Thing—which I'll never give 'em because I don't own one and because it isn't necessary to me game—the People love to hear me tell what Rogers said when he tried to buy me honor, and how I said, looking a Straight Flush into his deep, sea-green lamp: 'Villain, take back your greasy pipe-line gold; I had rather a thousand times be a dog than a grammar in times. Hellish Boston than to be your playing in New York and fill Your Can with My Oil.'"

"What about your Remedy?"

"My Remedy? Why, Addie, you make me think your head is a Punk Force."

"I never had one Doctor Bunyan has a corner on the remedy market ever since Holy Moses Played Marble, and if I can only hear the public's ears unglued as long as he has held up his finger without changing hands, I will be satisfied way down to the Grass Plot."

"I am for stringing the Dear Public like a Fat Pig to a Fair, and I go bank roll and made Rogers and his pals understand what 'getting Even' means when set to Little German-band music by the name of the Organ of Joy; and it's up to me to encourage the Public Dope Pipe."

CULTIVATE RIGHT POSTURE

Never Sit with Shoulders Contracted and Lungs Drawn In, for It is a Dangerous Habit.

To keep the lungs in good condition and to insure full power for the voice, one should never sit in that attitude so frequently adopted by girls and women, particularly when they desire to appear comely, of stooping over with the shoulders contracted and the chest drawn in. It will result in harm befalling both the voice and the general health of the individual.

Permitting the head to droop a little while talking is also bad for the vocal chords, and in this connection it may as well be observed that anyone who wants his voice to sound sweet and in good tone should never wear anything which presses tightly against the neck, or which is so high that one cannot bend it slightly without a sense of choking or suffocation. High collars, neckties or stocks, therefore, ought to be discarded. Smoking and not drinking will also have a pernicious effect on the vocal chords.

As a final admonition, let it be understood that no breathing exercises ought to be indulged in for at least two hours after eating a meal. The action of the diaphragm will result in sickness at the stomach, and will also retard the action of digestion. Exercises before meals is better, and no time should the diaphragm be too much contracted or the sensation of sickness at the stomach, due to its pressing down upon it, will be experienced.

Among the very best measures is the Turkish or Russian bath. Anything to induce free perspiration is of great use in clearing the skin if the pores have been clogged. The most careful care is needed that they are kept free from dust or the deposits of perspiration. The face should be washed every day in tepid water, and dried with a very soft linen cloth. Nothing is more injurious to a delicate skin than the rubbing and scratching with coarse towels, and women should be especially careful.

An authority on complexion says that a paste made of rye flour and linsed meal is one of the very best applications for clearing the complexion. It must be made thick, and applied as a mask, and worn for 14 hours without removing. It worn every night for ten nights there will be wonderful change in the appearance. One can well afford to make extra long nights for the sake of securing a good complexion. When the paste is removed the face must be well washed with tepid water, and very gently rubbed with a little cold cream, which is excellent when made as follows: 500 grammes; oil of sweet almonds, 500 grammes; rose water, 50 grammes; Put the wax and spermaceti into a vessel placed in a kettle of boiling water, stir them gently until melted. Pour the mixture into a marble mortar, and allow it to become cool. Then stir it gently for an hour, add six drops of essence of roses, and beat the mass until it is perfectly smooth and white. Apply to the face after bathing or exposure to the sun, this cream has a very soothing and healing effect.

Bleuette of Elder Day.

An old manual of etiquette shows that the people of bygone days were not so different from those of the present, for the treatise thinks it necessary to state that one should never ask a friend where he has been, or the utmost fathering of his coat. To this rule, however, an astonishing exception is made. One might ask these things, it seems, if thought it manly to dress exactly alike, it was considered a compliment to copy a friend's gown. Another interesting statement of this proverbial nature is that to lady boys worse than when "gnawing a bone."

Twenty of Water.

Dark circles under the eyes are nearly always significant of some internal derangement, particularly liver or kidney trouble. If these are very pronounced, it would be wise to consult a reliable physician. By drinking two or three quarts of water a day the trouble can usually be corrected, and under any circumstances this will be good for your health.

NEAT SHIRTSWAIST.

Time to Be Thinking of New Shirts—This a Model to Recommend Highly.

An excellent tailored shirtwaist model pictured in cameo attire is made over a fitted tunic and closes at the center front. Broad neck and cuffs add to the attractiveness of the garment, forming a simulated vest in front. The neck is finished with a high standing collar and shaped strap. The sleeve is a regular leg-of-mutton model, fitting closely from the elbow, and decorated with a shaped strap at the wrist to match the neck trimming. Taffetas and the very best silk will make up well for extra occasions, and for general wear, mohair, brilliantine French flannel, the new wash flannel and winter shirtings are suggested. Size 36 requires 5 1/2 yards of 21-inch silk, or 3 1/4 yards of 36-inch material.

Here are a few good nuts to crack. Write the conundrums on small bits of paper, and insert them in English walnut shells; glue the halves together, and mix with real nuts.

When is a doctor most annoyed? When he is out of patients. Because he is grass like a house? Because the cat'll eat it. (Cattle eat it.)

Why is the first chicken of a brood like the main mast of a ship? Because it's a little ahead of the main hatch.

For Ecce.

For a child who is afflicted with eczema you will find nothing more soothing and healing than this cosmetic jelly, which is inexpensive and most easily made. Seven ounces of rose-water, and 30 grains of gum tragacanth, let set over night, strain thoroughly through fine muslin and add one-half ounce of alcohol and one-half ounce of glycerin and a pinch of borax to the mixture. You can use it on the entire body of the child, and when the skin is rough or the little face smarting from the wind it will found the greatest comfort. You can use it on your self, too, to keep your hands from chapping.

Girl with Green Eyes.

Woman with queer, yellow eyes, with a little brown in them like cat's eyes, should wear green. It makes the eyes look green and this is quite fetching. The green of a dress (woman) need not be perfect as to disposition, but she is good to look at.

TO CURE A RED NOSE.

One of the First Things to Do Is Improve the Circulation and Strengthen System.

One of the ills to which some flesh is heir is a red nose, and women who have no alcoholic tendencies may be afflicted with it. As a matter of fact it is largely a result of poor circulation and a general low condition of the system, so that the things to do to get rid of the color are to strengthen the physical state and improve the circulation. The latter is done locally, by massage and lotions, while diet and certain foods will have much to do toward changing the course of the blood. Inflammation and dilation of the nose always indicate an unhealthy internal condition.

So many internal difficulties may cause this disfigurement that it is necessary, first, to find its origin. Poor circulation, digestive troubles, chronic diseases—all these will inflame the nose. So, too, will tight clothing or morbid emotions caused by sensational bad literature. Habitual cold feet, a suffering great toe, pressed by ill-fitting shoes, is responsible for a nose with swollen veins. It is well known that too much alcohol will produce congestion, and too rich food is similarly unpleasant in its results.

Acidity of the stomach may be an inducing cause of the trouble, and when one has this form of indigestion an excellent treatment is to drink a cup of hot water after each meal. Heat of the eye, of course, has immediate effect, both reddening, so that a person with a red nose should use only water on the face, taking care that no really hot or cold water touches it.

WESTERN-CANADA'S MARVELOUS RETURNS.

The increase in the crop returns of the Canadian West, in the past seven years, has approached the marvelous, and there is no reason to believe that a corresponding increase will not result for many years to come. The increase has been particularly noticeable in what was formerly known as the Northwest Territories, but which, on September 1, 1905, became the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

From the official returns we find the following results in the acreage sown to wheat, oats and barley in the years mentioned, and a more favorable showing cannot be pointed to in any other country during a like period.

Wheat. Oats. Barley.

1898... 307,580 95,977 14,278

1899... 412,864 175,439 17,044

1900... 594,697 229,439 24,702

1901... 625,738 210,267 36,448

1902... 817,524 409,662 68,974

1903... 965,549 523,624 98,154

The yield has been uniformly good every year except 1900, when there appeared to be a general slump all along the line. This, however, was more than compensated for in the following year, when the bumper crop in wheat, oats and barley put the returns of all previous years completely in the shade and gave an impetus to settlement in the west which has prevailed to the present, as the following table by unobtainable will show.

During the year 1904 Spain exported more than $15,000,000 worth of rice. Teak wood is second in value. According to a recent report from Tokyo, there are 1,786 wholesalers and 23,441 retail tobacco dealers in Japan.

Prof. T. J. See, of Washington, has determined the height of the atmosphere by a new system, which consists in noting the time of sunset and that of the complete disappearance of the blue of the sky.

With a tensile strength often exceeding 500,000 pounds per square inch, steel wire seems to be the strongest material known, and it possesses the additional valuable property of a very high elastic limit.

The story is told of a girl whose sweetheart said to her one evening: "Were you aware that I passed your house last night?" She gave him a glance full of reproach. "Of course I was," she said. "Do you think I would not know your step?" But at this she grew grave and distrustful, for he had passed in a cab.

A ventriloquist gave as his reason for desiring to get out of Grand jury service the physical disability. "What is the nature of your infirmity?" asked the judge. A few years ago George F. Haley, of Bliddeford, was trying his first criminal case before the supreme judicial court of Maine, with chief Justice John A. Peters on the bench. "Go on, sir, go on," said the chief justice; "you're giving them fits!"

OVER SEA HABIT.

Difference on This Side The Water. The persistent effect upon the heart of caffeine in coffee cannot but result in the gravest conditions, in time. Each attack of the drug (and that means each cup of coffee) weakens the organ a little more, and the end is almost a matter of mathematical demonstration. A lady writes from a Western state: "I am of German descent and it was nature that I should learn at a very early age to drink coffee. Until I was 23 years old I drank scarcely anything else at my meals. "A few years ago I began to be affected by a steadily increasing nervousness, which eventually developed into a distressing heart trouble that made me very weak and miserable. Then, some three years ago, was added asthma in its worst form. My sufferings from these things can be better imagined than described. "During all this time my husband realized more fully than I did that coffee was injurious to me, and made every effort to make me give it up. "Finally it was decided a few months ago to quit the use of coffee absolutely, and to adopt Postum Food Coffee as our hot table drink. I had no little idea that it would help me, but consented to try it to please my husband. I prepared it very carefully, exactly according to directions, and was delighted with its delicious flavor and refreshing qualities. "Just so soon as the poison from the coffee had time to get out of my system the nutritive value of the Postum began to build me up, and I am now fully recovered from all my nervousness, heart trouble and asthma. I gladly acknowledge the new coffee, for the first time in years, I enjoy perfect health, and that I owe it all to Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

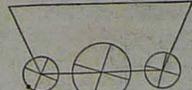

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in Postum Food Coffee contains no drugs of any description whatsoever.

AS TO SILAGE HANDLING.

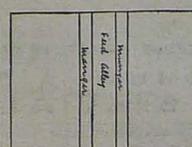

Convenient Truck Which Any Farmer Can Make—Proper Location of Silos.

One great feature in the feeding of silage is to have the silo handy to the feeding floor, and in building the silo sufficient thought should be given to this as it takes time to feed silage, and although perhaps but a small amount daily during the whole feeding season, it amounts to considerable silage if you have good feeding alleys and a good many cows to feed the wheel truck is certainly the handiest, but the man who has a feeding fork must use trains or some little cows will get 30 to 40 pounds, and the large ones perhaps only 15 to 20. Bushel baskets are commonly used, and when one has too many cows work well, as it is easy to see that the cow gets the right amount; they are not too heavy to handle easily. For our use, explains a writer in the Rural New Yorker, we have a truck holding about 20 bushels, like sketch in first illustration, mounted on two large wheels in center and smaller one at each end. The center wheels are not as large as we wish they were, and the truck doesn't run level. If you are building one get the center wheels plenty large enough. The truck is wider and longer at the top than at the bottom, so that wheels do not project one side or end.

One of the best planned silos for handy feeding we saw this summer on the farm of D. Fairchild, Fairchild feeds silage practically the year around; two of the silos are nine feet in diameter and the other 16 feet. They are all on the same point right at the feeding floor. A ground plan sketch of silos and barn floor is shown in our second illustration. There is shed roof over the silo which is cheaper and better than a roof over each silo.

HAECOR ON COW CARE.

Handling of the Heifer When the First Calving Takes Much of Great Importance.

When a cow comes fresh in milk every effort should be made to have her start her lactation with a large flow of milk. To this end she should be brought to a high physical tone by good and kindly care and proper feed, says T. L. Haecor, of Minnesota. Oats are a good milk stimulant, so she should be fed a few days on oats which has been softened with hot water an hour before feeding. A mixture of bran and oats, cooked paste, would also be good. The calf should be removed the first day, so she will quickly forget it and transfer her affections to her feeder and milker. Those things should be done which will make her comfortable and contented. All notions that a cow needs exercise and a daily exposure to discomfort to make her hardy should be abandoned. Feed her quiet and comfortable. Feed and milk regularly, and in this way the flow can be held at the maximum for a few months. If these few hints are followed, you will be in a fair way to become a successful dairyman.

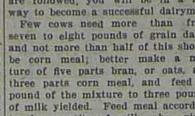

Few cows need more than from seven to eight pounds of grain daily, and not more than half of this should be corn meal; better make a mixture of the parts bran or oat and three parts corn meal, and feed a pound of the mixture to three pounds of the milk yielded. Feed meal according to the quantity of milk the gives. Alfalfa and fodder corn are ideal roughage for cows, but prairie hay is also good. Too much has been said about balance rations and too little about kindness and regularity, declares the Prairie Farmer; too much about dairy-bred cows and too little about dairy-bred men. First learn how properly to care for a scrub cow, and you have thoroughly learned what will be time enough to think of getting a better cow. Serve your dairy apprenticeship with the scrub cow; then you will not make a failure when you employ the dairy grade of pure bred.

COW TALK.

A dairy cow should give milk for at least 300 days in every 12 months. Do not send the cows out into the pasture till the grass has obtained a good start.

A pinch of salt after each feed will make the cows lick the mangers to the very corners.

Most of the profit hinges on the comfort of the cow, provided you have a good cow to start with.

A moderate temperature in the cow stable promotes comfort, if not obtained at the expense of good air.

The heifer having her first calf should be carefully handled, as it is at this time her habits of milking and feeding are established.

Many cows that are good feeders now will come out in the spring so poor that they will have to stand twice in one place to make a shadow, all because of shortage of winter feed.

Dispositions of Cows. Cows differ as much in their disposition as human beings. An experimenter that has handled a large number of cows will have run across the stubborn cow, the affectionate cow, the motherly cow, and even the bossy cow. Some of these qualities are good and some are bad. A man should try to eliminate the bad qualities and encourage the development of the good ones in the selection of the cows for the continuation of his herd.

Treat the Heifer Right. The heifer calf that is kept in a clean dry place until she becomes a cow will not lie in filth if she can help it. Also, if she is provided with clean water and not allowed to drink out of a mud puddle she will not drink filthy water.

Oats for Sheep. Oats for sheep are excellent, particularly lambs and ewes being prepared for market. Fed in conjunction with corn, the sheep gain in flesh rapidly.—Orange Judd Farmer.

BABY COVERED WITH SORES.

Would Scratch and Tear the Flesh From Her Head Were Tied—"World Have Died But for Ointment."

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have sores come out on his face, neck, chest, arms, legs, and all over his body. They were very sore. Then they began to come on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one on his chest, worse than the others. They called and scratched. Still he grew worse. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad and had to be held in his arms at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He could not walk. I tried Dr. Cutler's Ointment, but it did not cure him and got a cake of the Soap and a box of the Ointment, and at the end of about two months the sores were all well. He has never had any more of any kind since. He is now strong and healthy, and I can sincerely say that only for your most wonderful remedy my precious child would have died from those terrible sores. Mrs. Robert Sheldon, W. T. D. No. 1, Woodville, Conn., April 23, 1905."

FOR THE FARMER

Bulletin by Sup. A. J. Meekins of the N. E. Experiment Station
Featured weekly in The Pioneer

MEADOW AND PASTURE

The one thing which, above all others, that recommends Northern Minnesota as a farming section is the adaptability to growing feed for live stock, and especially clover. Clover grows naturally, as may be seen along the railroads, and through the trails in the woods. Where the ground is broken clover eventually comes. When properly cultivated it produces from two to three tons per acre at a single cutting. One and one-half tons is not an uncommo yield for the second cutting. It makes permanent pasture when not fed down too close, as it re-seeds itself.

Clover, being a plant which builds up the soil fertility, and as a feed for live stock, is one of the most valuable, a country capable of growing it should need no other recommendation.

From fifteen to twenty acres of clover is grown on the Experiment Farm every year. It is most generally sown with oats, and while oats is considered a poor nurse crop, no trouble whatever is experienced in getting a catch. The field system practiced is to cut two crops the first year, one crop the second year and pasture the second growth and plow up, using the field the following year for fodder corn or potatoes. It is found to be most profitable to not use an upland meadow more than two years. By rotating clover with the other farm crops much better results are obtained.

Timothy is also grown in connection with clover for meadow. Clover and timothy have been found to be the two reliable and best adapted tame grasses for meadow for this section of the state. Bromus is being grown, and this past year alfalfa made a splendid showing; but, as yet, nothing definite can be said in regard to their usefulness for this section.

On low ground alsike clover and red top have given the best results for permanent meadow.

For summer pastures the cut-over lands give very good results. Kentucky blue grass and white clover very readily take hold in the pasture when the wild nature of the sod is all subdued.

The only means of realizing profit from the cut over lands before they are gotten under cultivation is through pasturing. Steers come in from these pastures in the fall fit for the block, while the dairy cows bring in a nice little profit at each milking.

Furthermore, the pasturing of this land tends to prepare it for cultivation. The sod is broken to a certain extent and much of its wild nature is removed.

As a substitute to the wild pasture the tame meadow may be pastured to good advantage previous to breaking up. A. J. M.
