may pass through some good timber, be gush."

Doe: "Do you hear, brutes, I am off, shall I now?"

"I, I, I," came from four quavering, fevered lungs.

So we dashed, out into the darkness of the night. We ran like mad men with the thought of vengeance. Now faint overtones of the miners' voices were heard, only by coming in contact with a shanty farm, even and amid the constant mosquito, we still forged courageously in the direction from whence came the plaintive, soul rocking an apes.

Across the black, towering, wavy-penned ridges, on the top of a rugged chain of cliffs, loomed a dense incriminating barrier of tall pine trees in whose dark forbidding recesses the screams seemed permanently housed.

HELD BACK BY THE WATERS.

The mad rush of the waters of Rush Creek were between us and the unfortunate woman. It took but a moment's contemplation that God, man's bravest regent—and,

In we plunged boldly;

Not fearing to die.

The rough river ran.

Across the brink of it,

Picture it, think of it.

Desolate.

Lies the body of it.

Then if you can.

We reached the opposite shore.

Up the tall cliff we waded our way, the hot heads of sweat standing out on Doc's face like balls on a golf link.

Doe: "On with the charge, men!"

Mac: "I guess it will be charge."

I just lost in the charge! I had fallen!

It was a bad fall.

Kibbie: "Did I hear you say something about Red Raven, Mac?"

Frank McG.: "This is no time for pleasantries or luxuries you nimrods play. Hold your strength, I say."

Reading the tenor of his voice, we exchanged a glance boldy on.

Into the deep recesses of the forest we single filed. Frank McG. in the lead. The tall heavy growth of the trees now shut out the light of the moon. But Moses still led the chilidren, seed, and there never was an Egypt darker than this, unbrokeable wilderness.

We stopped a moment to catch our breath, when by the great Horn Spoon and Caesar's Ghost! Directly over our heads we heard again the miserable screams.

Taking out my pocket knife I said "Take out of my pocket a knife of Thomas." "Wild Animals I know."

"I tore out my leaf and fit it with a sulphur match that Mac happened to have for emergency or some other purpose.

I held it high above my head that we might see her better.

"Look out! My father's cats—"

Levi: "My father's cats—"

Doc: "I am an American citizen of the full age of 21 years and the laws of the land can insist upon the truth."

But there they were—three huge screech owls holding their mighty council—only this and nothing more!

THE DIALOGUE.

Frank McG.: "Doc, it behoves you to get their teeth by fair or by foul means."

Doe: "When does the boat leave?"

Mac: "Pretty fine looking timber anyhow follows."

Moss: "The light is out."

Kibbie: "I was reading today that Lillian Russell has invented a new claret punch."

"Kim."

VILLAGE FATHERS MEET

Big Brist of Business Transacted at Last Session, and Many Bills Acted Upon Favorably.

At the J. Bennett Smith property things are moving along in the even tenor of their way, and while there is nothing new to report regarding what might be new to expect in either the near or the remote future it is none-the-less true that the mine as a whole is holding up to the average—that is to say, more or less copper bearing rock is encountered each foot as the shaft proceeds into the bowels of the earth.

The writer met J. H. Mullen out in the vicinity of the St. Croix Monday looking for a lead of lead or some other mineral. The freakishness of the English language is responsible for the above, but thank goodness we're Saxons.

It is surprising why more attention is not paid to the iron ore deposits over in the Big Bend country. There are two deposits of red hematite outcropping the surface in that vicinity whose characteristics are not a whit dissimilar to the ores mined with such wonderful success on the old hard ore ranges in the Michigan peninsula. Possibly, the remoteness of these ores from transportation is one reason why they are not being produced to produce immense wealth for the body politic providing they are democratic in principle as well as theory.

If there is anything that causes a retrogression in the mining business of Pine County it is the seeming selfishness of land owners whenever the question of mineral right is suggested.

It is an uncontrollable fact that in the twenty five years that mining has been carried on in this country, no individual, corporation or association has as yet uncovered a single lode, vein, or fissure that could be made to pay if worked.

The truth of this statement is obvious. And yet the moment anyone suggests the question of mineral right to owners of land worth no more than five dollars per acre he immediately begins to stuff his property and himself with yeast cakes until the price reaches $25 per acre.

Time alone will see these wild old acres reeking in idleness, and bleach like Cabot's carcass in the desert as a lazy and grumpy old Wyoming. Their owners, by vested right, will hold on to them till great death shall separate them, then 100 feet of resting place.

Then watch the kids with their fingers in the pie.

U. M. Meyer of Detroit, Mich., was at the office of Cull & Elftman, Mining Engineers, Minneapolis, on Monday in the interest of parties anxious to learn something with regard to the copper deposits of Pine County.

Mr. Kibbie himself, has a pretty deal on with some natives in old Boston. A crowd of the Aristocracy are expected here shortly and this bit of information is advanced as a warning only to those who contemplate putting in a copy of cod fish for Lent.

OUTING AT POKEGAMA.

The season of summer travel is now fairly opened at Pokegama, and the steamboat and various passenger launches daily convey crowds of happy passengers to the various health and pleasure resorts on the green shores of that beautiful lake. Among the visitors at the lake during the past week we note the following:

At WILKE'S ISLAND HOTEL—Chas. Gerber and family, Mr. Forstra and wife, Dr. Hull and wife, J. R. Brown and family, Miss Belle Krantz, Wm. O'Farrell and wife, B. Northrup and wife, Chas. Johnson, Mrs. B. Northrup, Mrs. Edna Shireman, W. D. Dickie, Frank Dickie, St. Louis, Mo., and Mrs. Bomback, Katherine Bomback, Kansas City; E. P. Madison, Stillwater.

At THE INN—Miss Ella Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Shupe and child, Miss Ella Shupe, Mr. and Mrs. George Miller, Mr. Ed Mosher, Mrs. Miller and daughter, Miss Sherman, Stillwater; Mr. Bowerman and sister, Lincoln, Neb.; Mrs. E. N. Richards, Excelsior.

Again came the screams, expanding into themselves that now sounded like the agonized wailings of unfortunate souls in purgatory.

Doc: "We gonna make up, Alas where is the master? Who's got him fastened?"

Kibbie: "Be calm, gentlemen, be calm; is there any of the slaves left?"

The Underpaid Professor.

I am as ready as anyone to prescribe temporarily for the scholar in the public. He reads his share living and high interests, but without further approach to high living, it is timely for the scholar and the public to indulge in some plain thinking, says a writer in Scribner's. The simple life is a very worthy ideal, which it required no genius to enunciate. But I know of nothing that simplifies life so effectively as the possession of a little ready money. I know of nothing that so complicates matters as the everlasting balancing of accounts that will not balance and the insistent intrusion of petty dimes and cents. All this distracts and devaluates, and in very truth interferes with the rational ordering of one's life by accepted standards. The unanimity with which it is conceded that the professor is woefully underpaid is most alarming, as the failure of the magnanimous admission to lead to any practical measure for relief is pathetic. If I am to maintain both my household and my self-respect, I have indeed a hard row to hoe; and while parading as an avocation may be a very beneficial exercise, I cannot be a laborer in the fields and a professor at the same time.

Perhaps the largest and most valuable of literary treasures the world has lost was the Alexandrian library. This collection, the most remarkable of the ancient world, is said to have contained in its most flourishing period 400,000 or, according to others, 700,000 manuscripts. Its royal founder collected from all nations their choicest composition. We are told that one of his successors went so far as to refuse to supply the Athenians with wheat until they had given him the original manuscripts of Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides. When Julius Caesar laid siege to the city the greater portion of this library was destroyed by fire. It was later replaced by the collection presented to Queen Cleopatra by Marc Antony. But it was not destined to endure long. When the Emperor Theodosius the Great in 391 A. D. ordered the destruction of all heathen temples within the Roman empire, the Christians, led by the archbishop Theophilus, did not spare that of Jupiter, in which were kept the literary treasures. From this general destruction about 4,000 manuscripts escaped, only to be burned in 640 by Saracens under the Caliph Omar.

Polar exploration has made more progress within the past 25 years than in any other similar period. This was well illustrated last month when Commander Robert E. Peary, of the American navy, Col. David L. Bradford, of the American army, and the duke of the Abruzzi, of the Italian navy, met at a dinner in New York in honor of the duke. Each of the three men held the record for penetration farthest north. Col. Bradford, with the party in search of the Greely expedition, reached 82 degrees, 24 minutes, north latitude in 1882. He held this record till Nansen passed it in 1895, reaching 86 degrees, 12 6/10 minutes. The duke of the Abruzzi in 1900, or the party sent out by him, beat this by about 20 minutes, and Peary last year surpassed them all, touching 87 degrees and six minutes. In the 25 years since Col. Bradford's achievement the explorers have gone almost three and one-half degrees nearer to the pole, or at the rate of about ten miles a year. There remain about 200 miles to go.

Few things are more difficult to assess, in terms of money, than a work of art. America puts a tariff on the products of the genius of Velasquez, Rembrandt and others, and the appraisers have often been troubled to know how to price the priceless works of the masters. Conversely, lovers of art have been unable to make a just estimate assessment of pictures with their undoubted money value, and dealers have taken advantage of the inexperience of Youth's Companion. They have induced importers to pay at fictitious high prices, and have then shown the customs receipt as proof of the high value of the pictures. Action has been taken by the customs authorities to stop this kind of fraud. The case presents a legal difficulty, for the law is directed against undervaluation, not overvaluation.

Quit trying to exploit your old families. A Mexican grandpa has sold his son a farm and thirty-first birthday gift. He also has a daughter, now living the country stark and her granddaughters in the scriptural affliction brought by a spouse. And Texas is right next to Mexico.

LIVES CRUSHED OUT BY FALLING WALLS.

SHOPPERS ARE ENTOMBED BY COLLAPSE OF THREE-STORY BUILDING.

Nine Are Known To Be Dead—Victims Covered By Ruins, But Uninjured; Ask For Food—Rescues at Work All Night.

London, Ont., July 17.—Nine persons are known to have been killed, seven are missing, and four are seriously injured as the result of the collapse of a building on Dundas street yesterday.

Crystal hall, a three story brick building on Dundas street and one of the landmarks of London, collapsed yesterday afternoon. The outer walls fell upon Brewster's 5 and 10 cent store, a low structure adjoining on the east, completely burying it.

The stores of Hamilton, Long & Co. and W. J. Reid & Co. on the first floor of Crystal hall were filled with wrecks.

Customers Fill Stores.

The crash came shortly after 5 o'clock when all three stories were filled with customers. It seemed that the front wall of Crystal hall fell out into the street. An instant later the east wall gave way.

As the wall fell in Dundas street passing pedestrians had narrow escape.

Two women walking on the sidewalk heard the crash and started to run. One of them was caught in the wreckage, while the other escaped. A woman with two children narrowly escaped.

The fire and police department, with all the ambulances and physicians that could be mustered, at once began the work of rescue. On account of the great confusion at the scene it was impossible to account for all those believed to have been in the building when it collapsed.

Girl's Axe Entombed.

Cries were heard from the wreckage in the Brewster store and a rescue party located three girls in an adjoining cellar. They said that they were unaccounted for. Five other girls can be accounted for but were too frightened to say if any of their number is injured.

Frank Reid, manager of the Reid store, says all his staff escaped. Six men who were at work on the building are unaccounted for. The pile of ruins seems impregnable and though the rescuers worked with frenzy they will be slow in releasing any who may be in the thick of it.

Shortly after 5 o'clock George Flattalen was taken out, slightly injured. The body of Archie McCullum, a photographer, was taken out later. W. T. Hamilton was taken out, terribly injured.

His Baby Is Alive.

A woman was located in the rear of the Hamilton store. She had a baby in her arms, but neither was injured. All efforts to release them have been futile.

John Laney was taken out of the ruins with fractured skull and internal injuries. It is thought he cannot live.

The rescue party worked on the ruins all night. All the imprisoned ones who could be communicated with have been released. Many who were thought to have been seriously injured are only slightly hurt.

ATTEMPT TO KILL FRENCH PRESIDENT

NAVAL RESERVIST FIRES TWO SHOTS POINT BLANK AT M. FALIERES.

Neither Takes Effect—Assassin, Who Seeks Chief Magistrate's Life As He Returns from Longchamps Review, Is Thought Crazy.

Paris, July 15.—The national fest Sunday was marred by a dastardly attempt on the life of President Falierres by Leon Maille, a naval reservist of Havre, who, it is believed, is suffering from the mania of persecution. Maille fired two shots at the president, but did not hit him. He was captured and placed under arrest.

On account of the activity of the anti-militarists, who tried to organize a demonstration against the army throughout France Sunday, exceptional precautions were taken to safeguard President Falierres. The attempt on his life occurred on the anniversary of the battle of Malakof, while the president was returning to the palace from Longchamps, where he had reviewed the garrison of Paris in the presence of 250,000 enthusiastic people.

Assassin Fired Twice.

Premier Clemenceau and M. Laneau, the president's secretary, were with the president in his landau, which was escort by a squadron of cuirassiers. The carriage had safely emerged from the Bois de Boulogne, where the anti-militarists had attempted to intercept the president with the aid of a barricade.

Maille, who had been following the shooting of the soldiers and was descending the broad Champs-Elysees amid the acclamations of the crowds thronging the sidewalks, who were shouting " vive Falierres," " vive L'Armee," when at the corner of Lesseps and the boulevard de la Madeleine, turned and hurried to the side of M. Falierres. Finding that nobody had been injured, by the president's orders the carriage passed on.

The damage probably will be confined to the fenders of the landau of the president's house in the bottoms here and the driving out of smelters.

Des Moines, Ia., July 16.—Late Monday evening the official measurements of the Des Moines river showed that the flood had reached its height and was slowly receding. There was much damage, and of the 50 or 40 families forced out of their homes, two or three had narrow escapes.

Miraculously no one was hit. President Falierres was cool and collected when the cortège stopped. The diplomats who were following the president's landau and who had been following the crowd hurried to the side of M. Falierres. Finding that nobody had been injured, by the president's orders the cortège passed on.

Meantime two policemen seized Maille, who made no resistance, but the police with difficulty prevented the irate crowd from lynching the assassin. The crowd of reserves came up and conducted him to the station.

Thead. Maille refused to give any reason for his act, saying:

"The revelations I have are so grave and serious that I must remain silent. I am a member of the anti-militarist party to the chieftain of state. It is a matter between the government and me. I am the victim of many villainies."

Thought to Be Crazy.

Some of the witnesses of the shooting said that Maille fired twice. The crowd gathered around the assassin and that he was perfectly sane in the recent peasant's strike and that his mind had been unhinged by fancied grievances. It is believed also that he sides in the revolutionary agitation of the General Federation of Labor and the anti-militarists. There are no signs to suggest a plot, as Maille is armed with the fuel company's agents and asks for an injunction to prevent such seizures.

The fatally injured are: Bugagamaster McDowell, Marion, Okla.; the fireman; Paul Goff, Kenton, Okla., and Frank Everhart, 18, Kenton, Okla. It is thought that a split rail caused the wreck.

TERRIBLE DISASTER ON THE BATTLESHIP GEORGIA IN CAPE COD BAY.

Thirteen Men Are Severely Injured—Two Bags of Powder Explode in Turret, Horribly Burning the Entire Gun Crew.

Boston, July 16.—With six of her officers and crew dead and a score either dying or suffering from terrible burns received in an explosion of powder in the after superimposed turret, the battleship Georgia steamed slowly up Boston harbor from the target practice grounds in Cape Cod bay late Monday and landed the dead and injured men at the Charlestown navy yard. Two of the injured died in the hospital.

With the arrival of the Georgia there became known the details of the most terrible naval catastrophe that had ever taken place along the coast of New England.

The accident occurred shortly before noon, while the Georgia's crew were at target practice of Bunker Hill, in Cape Cod bay. In some manner, as yet unexplained, two bags of powder became ignited and exploded, killing eight men and severely wounding the remaining 13. The gun crew, consisting of three officers and 15 men, were enveloped in fire and received horrible burns, one officer and six men dying before the ship reached port.

Names of the Dead.

The names of the dead are: Lieut. Commander Joseph Brooklyn, N. Y.; Paulker Goldsmith, midshipman, Kentucky; William J. Thatcher, chief turret captain, Wilmington, Del.; William Joseph Burke, seaman, Quincy, Mass.; George H. Hamilton, ordinary seaman, South Framingham, Mass.; George E. Miller, ordinary seaman, George E. Miller, ordinary seaman, Brooklyn, N. Y.; William M. Thomas, Newport, R. I.; William F. Fair, ordinary seaman, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Blast Was Terrible.

The explosion occurred in the after superimposed turret, where the men under command of Lieut. Commander Joseph Brooklyn, second in command of the gun crew, were engaged in target practice. The gun crew, consisting of three officers and 15 men, were enveloped in fire and received horrible burns, one officer and six men dying before the ship reached port.

PINE CITY MINN. July 19, 1907

ALL MUST honor the honest speech of a morally brave man when he openly advocates a cause which he knows to be unpopular. The coward may follow in the lead of the demagogue and can easily lift up his hand and his voice to assist the man who is leading the howling mob. It is always easy to make one in a crowd but it takes more stamana to stand face to face with the mob and to lift up your voice in favor of truth and virtue. James M. Beck, former Assistant U. S. Attorney General in his address before the law school of New York at commencement this year showed himself to be a man of far seeing qualities, and one who is not afraid to denounce treachery when he sees it. In his address he shows up the trend of the times in no uncertain tones. His denunciation of the manner in which public legislative bodies are controlled by public clamor sounds a note of warning that should be heeded. In speaking of the existing conditions he says:

"We have seen, both at Washington and Albany, legislators vote under the lash of public clamor for laws which are revolutionary experiments in state socialism. Never before in our public life was there so little real manhood. Legislatures exist only as a matter of form. They register almost without question the demands—often ill-considered—of an imaginary public opinion, often artificially engendered by cunning demagogues." The time has come when even the courts are to a large extent controlled by the clause of the multitude. The lawyer of today fears the public more than he does any other lawyer. Give me a popular cause, said an eminent jurist recently, and I can win it every time before a jury. It is this running after the popular cause that has made such men as Bryan and LaFollette. These men lack the moral stamana to stand up before the people and tell them of the dangers they are drifting toward, but for their own purpose, and for the sake of their own popularity feed fuel to the flame which is threatening our public institutions. Much of LaFollette's address on representative government with which he is misleading public audiences at Chautauqua is a tirade against such men as have been elected to congress and the U. S. senate, who have dared to stand up and vote as they believed it to be their duty to vote against measures introduced by the demagogue for political purposes, in which they saw that there was danger to the fabric of our government. The legislator or the public official who will sacrifice his best judgment to the demand of public clamor is unfit to occupy the position of lawmaker. No better definition of the right relation between the representative and his constituency has ever been given than that of Burke when he said: "Their wishes ought to have great weight with him." * * * But his unbiased judgment, his mature judgment, his enlightened conscience, he ought not to sacrifice to you, to any man, or to any set of men living. These he does not derive from your pleasure; nor from the law and the constitution. Your representative owes you, not his industry only, but his judgment; and he betrays, instead of serving you, if he always sacrifices it to your opinion."

GOVERNOR HUGHES of New York, has shown the public that he is a man of iron nerve that his friends claimed he was. He has lost popularity but has gained in the estimation of the thinking people of New York and of the United States in the many way in which he vetoed the two-cent railroad fare bill. We do not know that the roads of New York cannot afford to carry passengers at two cents per mile but are willing to take the opinion of Governor Hughes or any other man who has the manhood to stand up for his convictions after a careful investigation, when he knows he is running counter to public sentiment.

Doan's Kidney Pills relieve back-ache
Cure every kidney ill.

Philip Jacob, wood carver, of 747 Fifth Street, Milwaukee, Wis., says: "I have had no cause to change my good opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills that I formed in 1898 when they cured me of kidney complaint. That cure has remained permanent. While I have never confined myself to my bed from the trouble I was not very far from home for a while I did not know what was the trouble, but finally I concluded that it was bladder and bladder trouble. There was a soreness in the small of my back and considerable pain. I let it run on for a time, thinking that it would get better, but found that I had to do something. I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at a drug store and I noticed in a few days that there was a great change for the better, and in a short time I was thoroughly cured. I have not felt any pain or soreness since that time. I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

The base ball team, accompanied by several of the fans from this place, went to North Branch last Sunday and suffered defeat, the score being two and three. Those who witnessed the game say it was a good fast one, and that our boys were better in every way, except in batting. It is about time they found out that it is impossible to win games unless hits are made, and that is the weak point in our ball team this year. They play a good fielding and base running game, and are full of snap and ginger, but are woefully weak when at bat.

THINK MORE - SPEND LESS

Why is it that the average man is worth so much less in money and property than we have a right to expect him to be? It isn't because he doesn't make the money, for the average man is industrious and has earned from $10,000 to $30,000 in the past ten years. It is because he doesn't give much serious thought either to his income or his outgo. Serious thought would teach him the true value of a dollar; then he would spend carefully and save steadily. That system soon places any man ahead of his fellows.

The Rebellion of Jackie

By Susie Bouchelle Wight

(Copyright, by Joseph H. Bowles)

"What a perfectly exquisite child!" exclaimed a passerby to her companion; after a glance at little Jackie. Jackie's mother fidgeted with compunction, and looked admiringly at the vision at her feet—a vision of golden curly hair, blue eyes, and the most dazzling bilious rose cheeks—a small boy, clad from top to toe in spotless white. He was a pretty boy. She knew there was no denying that, and she did not mind it. But herself, the memory of that infernally bad boy who was dawdling in the great brown eyes. A look new and strange, it would have seemed to her, for she was all a flutter with maternal vanity.

Mrs. Perham sighed.

"How fortunate you're Matthe," she said. "Jack is such a perfect gentleman. I wish all the lovely dressing you can think up for him, but my James—" She sighed again, and Jackie's mother laughed, for the mere mention of James the unspeakable, usually provoked smiles of pleasure.

"You know, Mrs. Matthe—I assume you are anything but funny to be the mother of a freckled little tough, that will not stay clean two minutes after he is dressed."

Jackie's mother laughed again. "Oh, James is all right only a pity that he looks like the Perhams—such a tall, thin, fair-faced fellow! I do believe, though, Jessie Bear, that if you would pursue a different course with him, you could mold him as much to your liking as Jack is to mine. No matter if he does rebel at blemishes and such, I suppose they ought to wear as a matter of course, you ought to make him understand that your will is to be his law about his dress for a good many years to come yet."

"How can I? I told him only last week that if he would wear a sweet little blue sailor suit, sit in the Fountain of Jules' celebration I would give him a dollar—now what do you suppose Jim said to that? Why, he simply looked up from his paper and said, 'Show her up on it, son, and get you down and then I'll give you another to cover and roll him in a mudpuddle with that suit on.'

"Jessie Perham! You don't mean to say that Jim Perham set your authority at naught in that way?"

"Oh, he didn't mean to be at naught—but he is always saying that he doesn't care for people trying to put on city airs—" Mrs. Perham stopped suddenly and bit her lip at a recollection of the connection in which he had said that, but Jackie's mother did not seem to feel him a show-off. "He is a good boy, after all, and I always have the backbone to undertake the quelling of the two of them."

"There's where you and I differ!" said her sister. "Now listen to me. Go right on and make your men men for the world to see when the time comes let him choose between wearing it and staying at home all day, and you will see that he will come to terms; then, when he has worn it there will be no more trouble. Don't say a word to Jim about it, and above all do not make him feel that you are fine and positive and you will see that you will carry your point readily. He really would be a striking hand-some boy if he were well dressed, and whether you will believe me or not, his freckles and his snagged teeth look great deal worse to you than they do to me, I assure you."

They left the room and Jackie, aged seven, looked out of the window across the street at his cousin James, turing a handspring in the dust of a vacant lot, and then down at his own immaculateness, with envy and rebellion in his soul.

The Fife came. It was in the south where a sound of firearms did not smite the morning air. Early in the morning the people began to gather from all the country round, for Olday was to do itself proud this day, and was keeping open house.

Jackie's mother, flushed and charming in white and lavender, the first to arrive, was followed by her own's seeds for a long time came down the street, leading a lovely child by the hand. He was all in white, except for a tiny bow of blue ribbon, which peeped out from under the broad-rolling brim of a cap which sat on the low, wide neck which tied back the long front locks, which were saving for subsequent use. His little shoes were white, too, so he had to walk circumspectly, to avoid mud and dusty spots.

They paused a moment at the gate for Mrs. Perham, who came down the walk, drawing on her long white silk mitts.

"Why, Jessie, where is James?" said Jackie's mother.

"James is in bed," replied Mrs. Perham, firmly. "I have looked up all his other clothes, and laid out all his suit and the tan shoes, and he can either wear them or spend the day in bed."

"That's right—he firm and positive, and you will carry your point, as I have always told you—but what about Jim?"

"Oh, Jim! I'll tell you later about him. He had to sail only immediately after breakfast—you know he is chairman of the committee on tables, so he doesn't know a thing about the unpleasantries," she concluded as the

HOSPITALITY OF TO-DAY.

Very Businesslike Indeed Is the Modern Hostess.

In these days it would seem that the word hospitality has assumed a new and strange significance, or rather suffered a transformation, so that it floats along on the streams of somewhat ease and take it for granted that mere forms and ceremonies, social bargaining, lavish display, and elaborate entertainments stand for true hospitality. When we are at the hotel, however, according to the best authorities, the true meaning of the reception and entertainment of guests with outward, and with kind and generous liberality; also that to be hospitable is to be sociable, neighborly, given to bounty, generous, large-hearted.

There is something that pleases our imagination when we read about the hospitality in the olden times, when life was simple and when a delightful leisure existed which does not belong to modern times. An angel of hospitality, we may suppose, was the heroine in the story of her visit at a friend's house, was in doubt whether she should continue her stay, and the painful consideration made her eager to be rid of such a weight on her mind. She resolved to speak to the hostess, propose going away, and the master of the house, by the manner in which she was received, was greatly pleased. As James' mother gets the pleasure of doing all this, there would be the satisfaction of wearing tattered clothes in consequence, and oh, sweet hope, perhaps in the melee the blue ribbon would be loosened and fall from his waist.

James lay sprawled out in the middle of the bed, with his feet propped up on the pillow, a neat array of holiday garments lying on a chair by his side. "I am sorry, but I am not the sweetest thing I don't see how it will be possible for James to persist in his naughtiness after he sees him," Jackie faced obediently about, and made a wry face which would curl the blood of a Goop, for he had overheard his Aunt Jessie say, "I am not the sweetest thing I don't see how it will be possible for James to persist in his naughtiness after he sees him."

Jackie felt very doubtful about his mission, for he knew that James did not approve of himself or anyone but the unadorned and plainminded wife he had been destined out made him wildly restless, and he longed for something to break the monotony of his perfect propriety, and even felt equal to the fistcuff which he half expected. As James' mother gets the pleasure of doing all this, there would be the satisfaction of wearing tattered clothes in consequence, and oh, sweet hope, perhaps in the melee the blue ribbon would be loosened and fall from his waist.

"James lay sprawled out in the middle of the bed, with his feet propped up on the pillow, a neat array of holiday garments lying on a chair by his side. "I am sorry, but I am not the sweetest thing I don't see how it will be possible for James to persist in his naughtiness after he sees him," Jackie faced obediently about, and made a wry face which would curl the blood of a Goop, for he had overheard his Aunt Jessie say, "I am not the sweetest thing I don't see how it will be possible for James to persist in his naughtiness after he sees him."

"Show me back," said Jackie, "to help you put on your little clothes."

"Show me back," said Jackie, "to help you put on your little clothes." With a bounce he landed on the floor, and snatched from the wall a long-diseased Astrakhan cap.

"Come on, little gal-boy!" he called.

"I'll take care of you and we'll go right to the pavilion and hear the band play."

"Panited Jack, as he raced along at the head of the band, and watched the pink nightshirt flopping.

"Oh, you come on, little trifl-breeches!" was all the answer he received, and then he made grab for them, just as the gate clangled behind them. He planted one small fist plump in the back of his cousin's neck and then both stopped and square off. James gave Jack another of those fierce looks, and then hopped a little, as he began to bear in, purr a little thing like "you," he said, and then he had to dodge Jackie's fist again. "Say Jack!" he said, as a sudden thought struck him. "I dare you to roll me in the road!"

When ironing colored clothes see to it that the irons are not too hot. Excessive heat will fade the colors.

When too much salt accidentally has been used, the effect may be counteracted by adding a tablespoonful of vinegar and a tablespoonful of sugar.

If the clothes line becomes kinked or twisted when it is being taken down wind the line toward you instead of away from you, and it will wind smoothly.

If four sticks are to be washed, turn them wrong side out and put in cold water. Wash and rinse in cold water. The use of hot water for this purpose will make the four sticky and hard to wash out.

To remove net curtain stretch out on a sheet after starching. Pin just to the ruffles and leave until dry. Take up and iron only the ruffles, dampening as you go along. This will leave the curtain perfectly straight.

Maryland Chicken.

Join a small chicken, roll in seasoned flour, then egg and crumb the joints, says Good Housekeeping. Lay in a dripping pan and on each joint lay a thin slice of fat bacon. Bake 20 minutes in a very hot oven, removing the bacon in a plate when done.

Turn the joints. Arrange the joints with the bacon, chicken the fat in the pan with two level tablespoons of flour, add one cup of thin cream, and when thoroughly blended strain over the meat.

Sardine Salad.

This is a delicious luncheon or tea dish. Remove the skin and bones from six big sardines and cut into tiny pieces. Place these in a saucer with a few drops of lemon juice.

Add one cup of his firm apple cut into strips, and three cold boiled potatoes cut into dice. If you like the flavor, add half a teaspoon of finely chopped chives, and then four table-spoons of French dressing. Serve with a team carafe.

To Clean Leather.

Clean leather upholstery wash the leather with warm water to which is added a little good vinegar.

Use absolutely clean water to remove the polish, then the whites of two eggs with a teaspoonful of turpentine and egg white.

This should be whisked briskly, then rubbed into the dry leather with a piece of clean flannel and dried off with a piece of clean linen cloth.

Japanese Lawn Party. One of the Best of Entertainments Appropriate for Season.

The request continues to come for lawn party suggestions, and nothing could be prettier than the party described below. It is practical for either a private entertainment or a church affair. Each year our dear friends, the Japanese, have some new designs for decorations, and these are always delightful when artistically arranged, besides they are the cheapest articles obtainable. Use lanterns of all sizes and shapes hung by stout string or wires in geometrical designs.

For the booths and when dressing,

Lay your goods on a fire-gored skirt pattern and cut out, letting the length end just above the knee. Fit close to the hips and lay for two pints, finishing off with a hook and eye. Make a belt of bamboo sticks, when combined the blouse and top of the skirt will make required skirt length. After gathering the blouse in a seam on the right side, then sew the ruffle edge and the top of the skirt in a seam on the right side, then sew the top of the skirt over the blouse and ruffle. Finish the bottom of the skirt in one, two, or three narrow ruffles.
