P. A. Rooney received a cheque Monday for $25.00 from the Loyal

A basket social was given for the benefit of the Catholic church. The baskets were sold at auction and went from one to five dollars and seventy-five cents and netted the so-of the girls instead of signing her name put "Hello Boy", this fact was circulated and the basket was not put up. The young girl stayed until the baskets were sold and then went home. It is best not to try to be too smart, for one will usually get the worst of it as this young girl certainly did.

Er repair yer house, er buy a new door, Buy where ye c'n take a look at th' goods, (There's th' best to be had in this neck of the woods) Would ye buy a critter sight unseen,

Big Welcome Awaits the American Warships.

WILL ARRIVE ON FEBRUARY 22

Vessels After World Voyage Will Steam Into Hampton Roads on Washington's Birthday—Cruise Has Been of Great Value.

Old Point Comfort, Va., Feb. 14.—

Steaming slowly toward the historic shores over which they left just 14 months ago, the 15 battleships of the United States Atlantic fleet are now half way across the Atlantic, and on February 22 will complete its world voyage, adding another epoch to the history of Hampton roads.

On the return trip, Father of the fleet and the admiral will complete its demonstration of the efficiency of the American sailor, the marine power of the nation, and the desirability of world peace. The scene of the spectacle will be the identical roadstead over which the hardy little British vessels plowed their way through the first ironclads thundered in the battle that revolutionized naval warfare.

Vessels Travel 45,600 Miles.

During these months of record steaming the heavily armored fighting vessels have traveled approximately 45,000 miles, and are returning in conditions of excellent health and efficiency.
The cruise has been a variable expedition of the seven seas, and tasks heretofore deemed impossible for the modern ironclad have been accomplished with an ease bordering on the concupine.

The experiences gained on the expedition of unending benefit to the navy is indicated from the fact that probably one-half of the entire personnel of the naval establishment participated in the epoch-making trip.

Three of the 16 captains who sailed in command of vessels are returning home as rear admirals. Eight other officers are returning in command of the same ship on which they began the journey of the world.

From rear admiral down to mid-shipman the training has been such as no other naval cruiser ever afforded.
Among the enlisted men the training has been even more thorough and immaculate than before the start, and especially green in the ways of the deep, are coming home an integral part of a wonderful fleet efficiency and loyal believers in all that the American navy stands for.

Admiral Evans' Retirement.

To rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry, a strict disciplinarian, a man of few words but a master of many, a constant student of the higher arts of naval science, fell the task of directing the fleet on all but the first 14,000 miles of its journey. Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, now retired, took the fleet out of Hampton roads on December 15, 1907, and, although ill soon after, was soon confined to his cabin for the remainder of the trip.
He retained command until San Francisco was reached and the first stage of the long trip had been accomplished.

Death has twice invaded the ranks of the captains who sailed with the fleet, but in both instances the officers had been previously relieved from duty. E. M. Gandy, a young officer dearly loved by all, died suddenly soon after his return to the east, following relinquishment of command at San Francisco. Capt. Greenleaf A. Merriam, who took the Missouri to the Pacific coast, a capable man, also died within a comparatively short time after turning his vessel over to a successor.

Record Target Practice.

Drill and target practice filled the time spent on the fleet at Magdalena. It was a month of real work—a month of work enjoyed by all.
Record target practice is eagerly anticipated every year. It is a time that every sailor, no matter how new he may be in the service, gets a chance at the gunnery range. He has shown any kind of expertise in the "pinpoint" or "ring" which are continuous throughout the men-of-war in port and out. It is at record practice that the men attain the rank of "gun pointer" and get a white star and crossed circle on the blue sleeve if they make a certain mark. To be a gun pointer means extra pay, and the men are anxious to have the star attained, and there is prize money for all, if the ship's guns make whole marks a recording record. The record practice of last spring developed an accuracy and rapidity of fire never before attained.

WASHINGTON·LIFE·INCIDENTS

BY HERBERT F. JACKSON

WASHINGTON CROSSING THE DELAWARE, BY LEUTZ

THOUGH the pages of American history are adorned with the names of many great men, none are brighter or more brilliant than those described in letters of chased gold than those of Washington and Lincoln.

Students of history are divided in their judgment which of the two men is the greater. But it is not really important that this question be decided. Destiny planned a certain line of work for both men, and they did that work well. Their innate ability is only partly responsible for their success; it was their unselfishness and desire to win whatever they undertook, and their determination to succeed where others might have failed. If Lincoln deserves praise because necessarily spurred him on to greatness, Washington deserves as much credit because he became great without being driven by necessity. Destiny demanded a double role of Washington—he made him a soldier and a statesman, and performed both well. His traits as president were almost as great as those he encountered as commander-in-chief of the army. He was placed at the head of a new form of government, and did not have precedents to guide him in administrative matters. It was he who first taught him to think calmly and with judgment. He could once made up, to act without fear.

He was born on the banks of the Potomac river in a farmhouse; though the house was far better than a log cabin, it was not the mansion it is supposed to have been. It was a large, roomy place, with a deep sloping roof and a big gable chimney at either end. He was one of nine children. His father was rich in crops and land; though he had little real money. Most Virginians planted tobacco, and when money was scarce they traded this product for food and clothing. His early years were spent on the farm, with plenty of time for little schooling. These are just a few of his early days.

"Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience."

"Think before you speak."

"Whisper not in the company of others."

Lawrence, one of the half-brothers, had been sent to England to school, and the parents had planned the same for George, but the father died suddenly, and Mrs. Washington realized she could not afford to send him across the ocean. The boy had spent considerable time with his mother and talking to seamen had awakened a desire for the sea. These stories created a desire to earn a living as a sailor, and he suggested it to his mother. Mrs. Washington did not like the idea of having George leave home nor did she approve of his career. He was sent back to school to study surveying. When not studying he was training his company of boys to become soldiers, and he often got very impatient when they made mistakes.

Shortly after his brother Lawrence had married the daughter of Lord Fairfax a member of this family took a great interest in the boy. He had such a fancy for the lad he put him to surveying a large tract of land in the Shenandoah valley. Though the work was no easy task, he was so strong and enthusiastic he soon mastered it quite well. He did not go alone—a boy, George Flagg, went as his aid. They rather enjoyed the new experience of hunger, cold and facing Indian savagery. In later years George recalled his experience of roughing it in the Shenandoah valley with great pleasure. This work was suddenly discontinued by sickness in the family. Lawrence's half-brother was ill and the physicians sent him to New York. The sons went along to keep him company, only to be taken with smallpox. Although Lawrence started for home, he died after his return.

This was a great shock to George, for the brothers were exceedingly bold; but the sting of this loss was partly forgotten by a commission to go to the French who were building forts on English territory. He was made major at the age of 22 and sent on a perilous journey over a thousand miles. He had many narrow escapes in his journeys through mountains, flooding streams and through forests where Indians lay in hiding. After his interview with the French commander he was started for home. The journey back was worse than going, for the rivers were exceedingly rapid. French governor refused to heed English commands of the Redcoats to build forts, so George Washington was appointed to command soldiers to march against the French in the spring. This was the beginning of a war between the French and English, which lasted seven years. Gen Braddock was sent over from England and George was made a colonel and commanded the Virginia troops. Gen Braddock was a capable soldier, but he did not understand the art of fighting the Indians and refused to heed young Washington's advice. The general was shot in one of these engagements. With this, the Redcoats began to run, but Washington tried to call them back. All day he was in the midst of the fight. Four bullets went through his coat and two horses were shot under him.

The war at an end, Washington returned home. He was anxious to see his mother, whom he had not seen since childhood. Through Mr. Washington was not a brilliant orator, he had plenty of good judgment and common sense, and was always ready to give her son wise counsel. Proud though she was of her boy's energy and desire to serve his country she was careful not to spoil him by excessive praise. She loved to hear of the hazards of war, but she emphasized the dangers more than the boy's success.

Washington's long-fought campaigns had done much to impress himself, and he went to Williamsburg to consult a physician. On this trip he met Mrs. Martha Custis, widow of Daniel Parke Custis, one of the wealthiest planters in the colony. They were married some five months later. Very little is known of her except that she was petite, pretty and exceedingly devoted to her husband. She was very proud of his successes, and used all her efforts to make him a success. She was a woman of great beauty, and the author of Washington's first step upward to his marriage. This is certainly untrue, for he was on the road to success when he married her. Whenever Washington went on a long campaign his wife took up headquarters where she might be near him. The wintering grounds became a regular custom. She often accompanied him, and frequently had to put up with inconvenient headquarters. When Washington was chosen commander-in-chief of the army he did not accept the place with great eagerness, for he

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregular periods, terrible dragging pains, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach, and given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then felt as though new life had given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends"—Mrs. W. S. Young, 1120 Broadway St., St. Louis, Mo.

The most successful remedy for this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has also been found to be more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been unable to find relief from hysteria, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulence, indigestion, constipation, and dysmenorrhea, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, do not give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

PINE COUNTY WHEAT

The Wheat raised in Pine County is what is known among grain men as a mixture of timber and prairie wheat, and this wheat produces a Flour which is much superior to the flour made from Prairie wheat alone.

Flour made from Pine county wheat does not bake out a chalk-white loaf with no nourishment or life, but makes a large, cream-white loaf of bread as light as a feather and containing a sufficient amount of moisture to keep it fresh the required length of time.

This Flour is Absolutely Pure!

It contains no adulterations of any kind; it is put up in neat, strong packages, each of which contains Flour that is guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money refunded.

Ernest Holler was seen down this way not very long ago, and the fact that he is not very well acquainted, and darkness coming on, he got somewhat bewildered, but after tramping through the woods and snow until he was about played out, found his way to the house of his friends A. Sperling and family.

White Justices of the Peace are elected by the people to serve them by dealing out justice, and enforcing the law, rendering decisions according to law and the evidence; we do not see why they belong to the people in general. And if ownership papers are taken out of the hands of the former grantees, and put into the hands of corporations, or in any other particular, we do not see why they should not be required to file a statement setting forth to whom, and stating the price and the conditions of the sale.

(Communicated.)

Some crazy lunatic has filed a petition asking that the question be printed on the ballot this spring. Shall the sale of intoxicating liquors be licensed the coming year? to be voted on yes or no. Why don't someone get up a petition for a vote to be taken on whether the sale of opium, morphine or strichnine be licensed, or someone be licensed to keep a rabid dog and let him run loose seven days in the week and at all hours of the night? Won't someone take his boot and pound some horse sense into our fool brains.
