Pine City Will Celebrate.

If You Want To Celebrate The Nation's Birthday In An Appropriate Manner, Come To Pine City On July 5th. The Committee In Charge Has Spared No Expense To Make This One Of The Best Celebrations Ever Held In This Part Of The State.

Pine City has made arrangements to celebrate the Nation's birthday in a grander style than ever before attempted in this part of the state. The committee having charge have arranged a program of sports that will occupy the day from the time of the parade at 9:30 a. m. until the end of the fireman's ball at 3:00 a. m. Tuesday morning.

Rev. Father Cleary, of Minneapolis, has been engaged as Orator of the Day and all those who have ever heard Father Cleary will be present to hear him again and those who have not heard this eloquent divine should not fail to hear him at this time.

The Central Band and Orchestra, of St. Paul, has been engaged to furnish the music all day and for the dance in the evening. This is one of the best bands and orchestras in the twin cities and the music which they will furnish is of a high grade.

The sports, for which liberal prizes will be given, will consist of foot-racing, horse-racing, jumping, tug-of-war, base ball, ladies' foot-races, bicycle races, catching the greased pig and other sports too numerous to mention. The sports will be pulled in every part of the business portion of the village, so that all will have a chance to witness them. The sports of the day will

INSTRUCTIONS FOR TRANS-PLANTING TOBACCO PLANTS.

THE SOIL.

The selection of soil suited to the growth of tobacco is very important. Upon the character and fertility of the soil depends to a large extent the value of the crop produced. In a general way the sandy and sandy loam soil rich in humus, is the best suited for tobacco. Minnesota has a number of sections in which sandy soils, which may be suited to tobacco culture, prevail. It is vitally important that the soil contain a goodly amount of available plant food. It is not essential that the land be in a high state of fertility at the time (June) for if the matter is at once attended to composted or rotten manure can be supplied to the land and plowed under previous to the trans planting. Spring plowed soils should be worked down to a firm condition again before the young plants are transplanted.

MANURE AND FERTILIZING.

Fresh manure should not be applied in the spring. It should be applied and plowed under in the fall. Composted manure should be applied at the rate of 12 or 15 loads per acre and plowed under fairly deep (five or six inches). Commercial fertilizers are used to a good advantage by those who understand them. Much damage may result from an improper use of fertilizer. Some kinds are detrimental to the quality and production of the tobacco. Pure nitrate of soda, desiccated bone meal (phosphate) and sulphate of potash are recommended. But fertilizers containing chlorine are detrimental to the crop. In applying the fertilizer on a small area, it may be a saving to "dust" a small amount close to each tobacco plant, or to scatter it along in the row. On larger areas fertilizers are usually spread by means of the attachments to the grain drill, but they may be spread by hand. If applied after the plants have been set out, application by hand is imperative and care must be taken not to allow any to get on the plants for it will injure them. If applied before the plants are set out the fertilizers can be broadcast and harrowed in. Nitrate of soda at the rate of 100 or 200 pounds per acre is recommended. Phosphate fertilizer in the shape of desiccated or steamed bone meal at the rate of 200 or 400 pounds per acre is recommended. For potash fertilizer wood ashes at the rate of one wagon box full per acre will be found beneficial.

SETTING OUT PLANTS.

In handling the plants during the operation connected with trans-planting, one must observe a few points closely. The plants should be from four to six inches in height for transplanting. Before pulling the plants the seed bed must be thoroughly soaked with water. This must be done some two or three hours before the actual pulling to allow the soil to become thoroughly saturated at least two inches in depth. Pull the largest and best plants carefully, without bending or injuring them in any way and place them in a basket or box, keeping a cover on this basket or box to exclude the sun's rays and wind. Do not drop the plants ahead of the man who sets them out as the roots are delicate and the plant must have every advantage to succeed and render a profitable crop. Too deep setting is injurious. Set the plants 2 feet apart in the rows and leave the row 3 to 3 1/2 feet apart. If the area to be set out is small, transplanting by hand will be found as convenient as a machine. For hand planting a dibble is used for making the hole and pressing the dirt firmly about the roots. A dibble is usually made out of wood and is six to eight inches long one to one half inches thru and pointed on one end. For protection against crumshoppers and against damage by wind hail, down rows of corn around the outside of the patch is necessary. In placing the plants in the soil,

You bet. When it comes to furnishing the best Building Material, at the lowest prices—you'll find us occupying a front row seat every time. And it's a continuous performance, too. The man who once buys lumber and building material here, is usually never satisfied with any other place. He may find grades as good as ours some other place. And he might find as low prices elsewhere. But he won't find as good grades as ours, at as low prices as we ask for that grade. No sir! Not for a minute. # July Fourth 1776

By EDWARD B. CLARK

WASHINGTON — There was unveiled in the nation's capital recently a statue of the Rev. John Witherspoon, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. More and more attention is being given throughout the country to the memories of the men who signed the liberty document. Not long ago there was held in Washington a convention of the descendants of the signers. It is expected that as the result of the labors of this hereditary organization there will be gathered together for preservation in one safe place all the things that are attainable which had intimate association with the men who on the 4th of July, 1776, took their lives and their pens in hand.

In the year 1776 lived a woman who was fond of giving curtain lectures to her husband. She was the original Mrs. Candide, though her name was Mrs. Dickenson, the wife of John Dickenson of Pennsylvania. "Farmer" had done much to arouse a spirit of liberty among the people. One night several weeks before the meeting of the continental congress, of which Dickenson was a member, his spouse, speaking from beneath the shadow of her nightcap, said: "John, if you have anything to do with this independence business you'll be hanged, and leave a most excellent widow." John Dickenson spoke against the resolution declaring the colonies to be free and independent.

The great independence debate was held within closed doors, and no record of the speeches was kept because it was felt that in case of form, were never preserved. During a part of the proceedings Benjamin Franklin presided. In a letter written 20 years after the debate one of the delegates said that when Benjamin Franklin, after the signing, said: "Now, we must all hang together or we'll all hang separately." Harrison, who had a ready wit, looking at his ample proportions, said: "If they drop us off at a rope's end some of our lightweights will be kicking and suffering long after I'm done for."

During the time of the adjournment, the committee which had been appointed to prepare the declaration of independence chose Jefferson, the youngest of their members, to write the document on the ground that he was "the best penman" in the lot. Now, the word penman in those days was sometimes used to denote a man who expressed himself well on paper, and not necessarily a man who wrote a good hand. The English of the declaration perhaps shows that the word was used with the former significance, though some of Jefferson's detractors have insisted that Tom Paine wrote the famous document.

The declaration of Independence was read paragraph by paragraph to the assembled members. As a matter of fact, the most brilliant speakers were opposed to the resolution. Among those so opposed were Dickenson, Robert R. Livingston, James Wilson and Edward Rutledge. It leaked out afterward that most of these men made speeches opposing the severing of the British bonds. Of three of those who spoke in favor of independence it was afterward said: "Jefferson was no speaker; George Wyeth was sensible, but not clear, and Witherspoon was clear, but heavy."

It is a well-known fact that the declaring of the colonies independent was not thought of seriously before the convening of the memorable congress of the spring of 1776. Washington was bitterly opposed to any such declaration until it became a military and civil necessity. Patrick Henry was perhaps the only outspoken advocate of the year when the cutting was at last accomplished, though Benjamin Franklin and Timothy Dwight thought, and sometimes said, that the yoke should be removed. Henry, by the way, in one of his speeches, undoubtedly gave the keynote to which Robert Emmet afterward attained the last sentence of his speech when condemned to die. As early as 1773 Patrick Henry declared that the colonies should strike for independence, and prophesied that France would not be backward in coming to their aid. The last words of his speech were almost literally a part of the concluding words of Robert Emmet's speech: "Then our country shall take her place among the nations of the earth."

The original declaration of Independence was a local affair. Mecklenburg county, North Carolina, at a public meeting held in the town of Charlotte, in August, 1776, declared that they threw off forever their allegiance to the British crown. It was not long after this that North Carolina instructed its delegates to the continental congress to vote "first, that and secondly" for the independence of the united colonies. It must be said that many historians doubt the authenticity of the Mecklenburg declaration.

The congress that was to declare America free convened in Philadelphia, and in a general way discussed the matter of throwing off the yoke. Richard Henry Lee of Virginia introduced this resolution: "Moved, That these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states, and that all political connection between us and Great Britain, and ought to be, dissolved."

John Adams of Massachusetts seconded the order, but the names of both mover and second mover were omitted from the record, because it was the belief that if the British authorities got hold of them as prisoners they would stretch them without a trial. Before the discussion of the resolution congress adjourned and came together again in June, when began the debate, perhaps the most momentous in history, the details of which, save in detached places of resistance to tyranny, spoke forcibly against the adoption of the declaration. It may be that his wife's, "John, you'll be hanged," was still on his mind. He was one of the best speakers in the congress, and his friends of liberty feared the effect of his arguments. The gist of what he said was years afterwards made public, and while Dickenson feared simply that the time had not yet come for the declaring of the country's independence, and was really a patriot at heart, his memory has suffered for the stand he then took.

When Daniel Webster delivered his panegyric of Thomas Jefferson and John Adams in the continental congress when the Declaration of Independence was under discussion. He knew the thread of Dickinson's discourse as it had been imputed to him, and though Webster mentioned no name, his amplification of Dickinson's words will probably stand forever as containing the essence of the opposition of the colonial legislator to the taking of a firm stand for his country's freedom.

Dickenson's speech, as it has come down, runs in part as follows: "Let us pause. This step, once taken, cannot be retraced. This resolution, once passed, will cut off all hope of reconciliation. If success attend the arms of England we shall then be no longer colonies, with charters and with privileges; these will all be forfeited by this act, and we shall be in the condition of other conquered people—at the mercy of the conquerors. For ourselves, we may be ready to run the hazard, but we are ready to carry the country to that length? Is success probable as to justify us? Where is the military, where the naval power, by which we are to resist the whole strength of the arms of England, for she will exert that strength to the utmost? Can we rely on the constancy and perseverance of the people or will they not act as the people of other countries have acted, and wearied with a long war, submit in the end to a worse oppression? While we stand on our old ground and insist on redress of grievances we know we are right, and are not answerable for consequences. Nothing, then, can be imputed to us. But if we now change our object, carry our pretensions farther and set up for absolute independence, we shall lose the sympathy of mankind. We shall no longer be defending what we possess, and which we have solemnly and uniformly disclaimed an intention of pursuing from the very outset of the troubles. Abandoning thus our old grounds of resistance only to arbitrary acts of oppression, the nations will believe the whole to have been mere pretense, and they will look on us not as injured, but as ambitious subjects. "I shudder before this responsibility. It will be on us if, relinquishing the ground on which we have stood so long, and stood so safely, we now proclaim independence and carry on war for that object, while these cities burn, these pleasant fields written and bleached with the bones of their owners, and these streams run blood. It will be upon us; it will be upon us if, failing to maintain this unreasonable and ill-udged by military power, shall be established over our posterity, when we ourselves, given up by an exhausted, a harassed and misled people, shall have expiated our rashness and atoned for our presumption on the scaffold."

First make a hole the proper depth with the dibble, then hold the plant loosely in the fingers the root end projecting beyond the finger tips just a little farther than the depth to which the plant is to be set. Now put the roots in to be set. In the hole, the points slanting towards the roots of the plant, then by drawing the hand over the dirt up against the roots and stem of the plant. Now place one foot a few inches from the plant and by pressing downward and towards the plant complete the firming the soil. If a pit or so of water could be added to each plant after it is set, the assurance of its growth would be guaranteed.

The time of season for transplanting tobacco in Minnesota ranges from June 1st to July 10th. A crop may be obtained if the planting is done as late as July 15th. Earliest planting is to be recommended. Better results will be obtained if the transplanting is done just before or after a rain. Without rain the afternoon as this gives the plants a chance to recuperate before the sun's rays become intense. Cultivation may begin as soon as the plants get a firm hold in the soil.
