GIRL KIDNAPPED

Sunday Evening, in The Town of Royalton, Miss Theresa Pranghofer, A 16 Year Old Girl Was Kidnaped And Taken To Minneapolis.

Last Sunday afternoon Frank Pangerl, his married sister, brother-in-law, his young brother and Miss Theresa, his sister, a girl of not quite sixteen years of age, decided to spend the evening at their uncle's home, Mr. Frank Pangerl, who resides about a half mile from the Pranghofer farm. Miss Theresa, getting ready before the others, started on slowly ahead and when reaching the Brunswick road, which is about twenty rods from the Pranghofer farm, she was accosted by Erick Pearson, a young man who had been threatening in that neighborhood this fall, his home being at Rice Creek, who inquired where she was going and upon being informed that she was going to Frank Pangerl's to spend the evening, he told her that he also was going that way and offered her a ride. The girl got into the buggy and Pearson drove away with her. She says he gave her something to smell and she knew nothing more until she was aboard the train on the way to Minneapolis, where she was found by her brother, Frank, Tuesday morning and brot home on the noon train. The remainder of the party, on arriving at the Pangerl home, inquired about her, but was informed she was not there. But little was that of the occurrence, as it was supposed she was stopping with some of the other neighbors, but upon arriving home, she was not there. In the morning when she failed to make her appearance, the neighbors were all visited, but no trace of her could be found. The woods were then searched, but she had disappeared.

Her brother, Frank, went to Grass-ton and Bert Davis, eldest son of J. P. Davis, came to this place.

While in Grass-ton Frank got on the trail, which resulted in tracking her to Minneapolis and her returning home, as stated above.

Erick Pearson, the abductor, was placed in jail at Minneapolis and Wednesday morning, sheriff Wilcox went down and lodged him in this place, where he was brought in jail.

Wednesday Dr. R. L. Wiseman was called to the Pranghofer home on account of the severe illness of the kidnaped girl, caused, it was reported, by the dope administered to her by Pearson.

About twenty-five of the young people and a few of the older young people were in attendance and enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent. A very nice lunch was served about eleven o'clock. JOHNSON MEMORIAL.

Memorial Exercises For Governor John A. Johnson, Held in Robinson Park, Thursday Afternoon, At Three O'clock, At Which Several Addresses Were Made.

Last Thursday morning, Mayor Derr caused Marshal Glasow to visit all business houses and ask them to close their places between the hours of 2:30 and 5:00 o'clock in honor of Governor John A. Johnson, who was buried at St. Peter at that time. A mass meeting of citizens was called for 3:00 o'clock in the town hall for the purpose of holding appropriate memorial services, but the weather cleared and it became warm enough to hold the exercises in Robinson's Park.

At the appointed time a goodly number of our citizens assembled, all of the business houses being closed. Mayor Derr acted as chairman and in a few well chosen remarks told the object of the meeting.

Rev. W. K. Gray, of the M. E. Church, offered up the opening prayer.

L. H. McKusick was the first speaker called on and he, in a few words, told of the services that our deceased governor had rendered to the State and nation. His remarks were well received. He was followed by Professor McAdam, who dwelt at length on who the governor was and his services to the state.

Ottocar Sobotka followed the professor and he also eulogized the deceased governor, so did also Rev. Paul Cook, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and Attorney S. G. L. Roberts followed.

The meeting closed at about half past four with a few remarks by Rev. W. K. Gray.

All of those that were in attendance speak very highly of the fitting remarks that were made by the speakers.

PINE CITY, MINN.

As a killer the scorching automobile is too miscellaneous.

What effect will the discovery of the north pole have on the price of earnings?

Cabbages 20 cents apiece. Not so uncomplimentary to call a man a cabbage head.

There cannot be too much light in the streets. The more light the less opportunity for crime.

The first dollar that most men earned was given to them for a birthday present or something like that.

A man in New Jersey is going to trap a lion to guard his chickens. He might do better with a trained mosquito squad.

While the amateur aeronaut is quite likely to come to some untimely fate, he is less a menace to the public than the amateur chauffeur.

London has been having a naval procession of 16 warships. The demonstration ought to scare off that phantom German invasion.

There is only one more pole to discover. Nations which may feel piqued at American success in one direction are at liberty to get busy in the other.

When Prince Miguel renounced the throne of Portugal, which he had no chance of ever getting, it must have been almost as easy a step as swearing off of smoking.

A San Francisco man is to marry the richest of the young set in that princess. It is time we were getting back some matrimonial millions into this country.

A professional walker is confident he can walk from San Francisco to New York in a hundred days. But why should anyone waste so much time when trains are handy?

The baby emperor of China has been formally proclaimed commander of the army and navy. It is to be hoped that those two important branches of the public service are not infant industries.

The French have discovered that whistled kisses leave on the lady's lips bacilli of tuberculosis, diphtheria and pneumonia, besides unclassified microbes. And yet it's doubtful if the whistled kiss will go.

A young man in New York committed suicide because two girls had rejected him within a matter of one hour for the fifth time. He ought to have been immune after such an experience from the deadly love germ.

The household rush of sightseers has set in from Europe. We wonder how many of them will ever get through Yellowstone Park, have gazed upon the wonders of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, or camped in the redwoods of California?

Even the accused mosquito has its uses. In New Jersey they get rid of the tramps by hand-outting and exposing them to the mosquitoes. In a few minutes the tramps are ready and eager to leave town. This is almost as barbarous as capital punishment.

Another prince is reported to be paying attention to an American heiress. Now that even royalty is anxious for the pretty American girl and her millions, the chances of the young American man ought to have been considered in the tariff at high protective rates on princes.

Aviation is the craze of the hour. Luckily, it is not a craze which can be passed as general. Some other things have been, and while some forlorn ones will pay the usual price for reckless temerity, the experiments in the main will be confined to those who look upon the question of air travel as something more than a passing fad.

Lieut. Shackleton of the British forces, who came within an ace of discovering the south pole, will lecture in this country to make up the amount of his expenses in this important expedition. Of course, England will take the glory of his discoveries, but, up to date, he is left with the credit, which shows how much superior present gratitude is to posthumous glory and post-mortem monuments.

It is somewhat surprising that in a country of such high morals, some of the France lotteries should flourish to the extent they do. The man who saves money on small earnings seldom takes the gambler's chance on which all lotteries depend, but it is a fact that France abounds in these institutions. So pronounced is the evil that the government has just submitted to the Chamber of Deputies a proposition looking to the abolishment of lotteries.

The large plant to be erected at Wells, Minn., for the extraction of kerosene from hemlock bark, represents an improvement in the process of tanning which has established precedence in the manufacture of kerosene and enabled tanners to sell their product at lower figures. Poor quality the bark was shipped in salt and steam, and to the western tanneries, where it was ground up and subjected to treatment for the extraction of the kerosene, while the process of tanning was at the same time in progress.

An alarm of fire was sounded about five-thirty o'clock Sunday morning and when the citizens rubbed their sleepy eyes and got up, they found that the A. H. Brackett house, on the east side of the railroad tracks, was in flames. The fire department responded in double-quick order, but by the time they had arrived on the ground, the fire had gained such headway that the only thing they could do was to save the surrounding property. The house is a total loss with but little insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown, as when it was first discovered it was on the roof of the back porch. A very small portion of the household furniture was saved. The Pioneer sympathizes with Mr. Brackett in his loss.

We noticed some time ago that the management of the state fair, of Minnesota, asked the opinion of the people of this state in regard to holding the fair two weeks, instead of one. Now, Mr. Editor, we are surely again at an such proposition, as we have several reasons. First of all, that it would be an injury to all county fairs, as they would not hold their fairs until a week later, bringing the same to such a season of the year, that the weather is not reliable, as we know from our experience of this fall, and the managers of county fairs, who work hard and endeavor to make their fairs a success, would be discouraged and in the end there would be very few county fairs. We have nothing but praise for the state fair, of Minnesota, as they have done splendid and there is no state in the Union that can come anywhere near the same, and you may say the same, practically, of nearly all the counties which hold fairs. In holding the state fair two weeks, instead of one, it would be likely to bring people to it who have been perfectly satisfied with the county fair, and attending it each year. Give those towns, which the fairs are held in, a chance to gather in a little of the money, which otherwise would go to city business concerns. Let us keep a little of it when it by rights belongs to us. We are daily in receipt of opinions of persons, who desire to express same, and wishes them to be known, and if they would send the same to the Pine County Pioneer, Pine City, Minnesota, or to M. Chas. Heineman, Rock Creek, Minnesota, the same would be published.

DEER VALLEY
A wolf visited Chas. Heineman's home Saturday morning about 4 o'clock, making awful barks and cries. Mr. Heineman got out, but Mr. Wolf ran for cover.
Thursday morning we had a severe thunder storm in our valley. Mr.

John Fransen's house was struck by lightning. It was quite a sight to see the freak it took inside of the house. It went into the house by way of the chimney, tore up the shingles and roof, went along to the top floor, tore the plastering off the walls of the room, went along an iron bed-post to the other side, took down more plastering, went back to the iron bed-post, splintered the floor, went down stairs, put a hole in the bottom of an oil can and let out four gallons of oil, which did not burn. The parents' that some of the children were struck, but thanks to the Lord! They were all answering their mother's call, except Miss Marion, who could not hear. Mrs. Fransen that she was sure dead, but she was found standing by her bed. She is now doing well and is past all danger. The lightning also struck four large tamarack trees near Mr. E. J. Heineman's new house, but did no further damage.

PAINT PAINT.

It is a common occurrence nowadays to hear a man remark with disgust: "It is impossible to have good painting done these days; either the paint is not good or there are no good painters." This, however, is not true.

One cannot expect a satisfactory painting job without pure white lead. There is a way to make sure you are getting pure white lead without testing it. See that the keg bears National Lead Company's famous Dutch Boy Painter trademark, which is a positive guarantee of purity.

Billy Cole's Refrigerator

By Carroll Watson Rankin

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

The Tourist turned his steps toward the cemetery. The latest curiosity led him to the lumber part of the grounds, where he was trying by shovels from a partially dug grave.

"This here hole," announced Briggs, the grave-digger, smiling hospitably as he leaned on the shovel to rest, "is for poor old Billy Cole. He's lived right here in the cemetery for 27 years. He was character, Billy was; but he wa'n't of much use in any other capacity of late years. We're goin' to miss him, though, around here."

Briggs, who was, without suspecting it, himself something of a character, alleviated with renewed energy to conceal his emotion.

"Yes," he continued, "Billy worked for Simon Beals, the banker. Old Simon Beals was just dead about nine or ten days, and he used to think nobody could grow things like Billy. I guess he was just about right, too. When Simon died, Widow Beals moved back east, where she came from, promisin' to pay Billy a hundred dollars a year for takin' care of her lot. You see, she'd got there—the biggest an' the finest in the bull cemetery."

"Poor Billy wuz ez black ez the ace of clubs," he had a squint in one eye that sort of spilled any good looks he might otherwise have had. The white folks livin' near the place would be sure to give him a hard time. His own shanty was too far away, so, at first, he sets up a little 'A' tent in a field just back of the cemetery, an' stays in the ground, rolled up in a blanket. He wuz, ez I said before, a rattlin' good gardener, an' he had a number o' lots besides the Beales' to look after, so that gave him enough to live on, and he spent all his time in the cemetery.

"But ez he got older he grew stiff in his joints with rheumatism, so he retired for permin' housewiser. The tool-house he set opposite the Beales' vault. He hadn't no fear o' ghosts, for he said that so long ez his old master's spook wuz growin' 'round him, he had no fear o' his own. He set up a bed in the tool-house; but there wuzn't room fer nothin' else, so he put his little cot-stove up jest outside the door. There wuz a lot of little Christmas-trees 'grewin' at both sides o' the shanty, so betwix the vault in front and the hill behind, the trees to both sides, nobody'd notice the place. Very few knew he wuz livin' there.

"After a little while, though, he got himself into trouble. You see, 'twuz this way: There wuz no room fer his provisions just across the way in the receivein'-vault. Now, to tell the truth, a receivein'-vault ain't exactly a necessity in a town ez small ez this; but them Beales had ev'rything there wuz goin' themselves, an' they had to spend their 'sperrits money' on steam yachts an' automobiles, but the Beales wuz great on cemetery fixin's. Old Simon built the receivein'-vault an' presented it to the cemetery, reservin' it permanent place in it fer himself an' his wife—they never had no children. When the old gentleman died, he wuz laid in there on the floor ez the wuz accordin' to instructions, leavin' a place beside him fer Miss Beals. Then the casket wuz walled up with marble slabs, an' jest above the top they built a stone shelf for the general public, one at a time.

"Bein' underground, the vault wuz always cool, an' old Billy kept his provisions in there right on top o' Mr. Beals. Of course, it looked queer, ez old cabbage, an' slices o' bacon settin' there on that marble slab, like offers to a heathen goddess, but the town-folk soon got used to it. Strang' ez they laughed, but never done no kickin'—'twuzn't none o' their funeral. "But one day there wuz a row about it. You see, there wuz jest row enough on the shelf for one casket at a time, an' when Julius Rogers died there wuz some hitch about gettin' the lot there wanted, so they 'lowed to keep him in the vault fer several days. Julius wuz the tallest man in town, an' his coffin filled that shelf right wite from end to end. It wuz August, an' the weather wuz pretty warm. Old Billy had jest laid in his week's supply o' provisions, an' he haled the blunder to move out to accommodate the corpse, but he done it with a pretty good grace.

But ez I said, it wuz pretty hot. Billy hated to waste all them good provisions, an' when night come he couldn't stand it no longer. He hid his buttin' an' a pound o' coffee in a hole, right on top o' the coffin among the flowers, intendin' of course, to take 'em out again first thing in the mornin'—but ez luck in it, the wifid had a garden jest chucked full o' sweet peas. She riz at daybreak, picked a basketful, an' drove to the cemetery with 'em. "When she saw them sausages she wuz red-headed, Old Billy wuz 'A' bein' turned out o' the cemetery then. It hadn't 'A' ben fer fer Miss Beals, who happened to be in town for a visit. Miss Beals wuz a lively o' lady, her tongue wuz pretty sharp, an' she owned a good bit o' property, so the Park Commissioners wuzn't willin' to go ag'in her. She said that Beas wuz her charge, fer her lot, sausages ez no sausages, jest ez long ez he could crawl; an' she guessed if Billy an' Mr. Beals didn't object to the matter, nobody else had any call to. If Mr. Beals had any objections, there wuz no way in findin' it out, so Billy staid.

However, the scandalized town thought it best (ter that, to buy him a zinc-lined refrigerator. Tuz a fine, big one, painted bright yellow, that had three lock-boxes wuz the greatest thing in the bull cemetery. Settlin' there ag'in the side o' the tool-house, it fairly made the geraniums, at two dollars a dozen, look pale; an' Miss Beals left orders for the team to keep Billy supplied with ice, free of expense; but even so, Billy managed to his dym day that that there store refrigerator wuzn't no patch on the vault fer coolness."

PARADISE FOR SUFRAGISTS. A Little Corner of the Sahara Desert. Where Feminism is in Full Swing.

A French explorer just returned from Africa has addressed an open letter to Mlle. Laloe and to the woman doctor Mme. Pelletier, the great adventuress, who are advising them to leave at once for the Sahara, or rather to that district inhabited by the tribe called Tuaregs.

Tuaregs, says the explorer, are crafty, cruel and treacherous, but they are ardent apostles of feminism. The Tuareg women are indeed privileged beings. They have camels of their own, which their husbands are not allowed to mount, and their household duties are, so to say, nil.

They are allowed to have an admirer who saddles their camels and runs errands for them. According to the Gentlewoman, the attitude of this admirer must remain strictly platonic, or he starts making love to the lady, the husband flies into a temper, and an angry Tuareg becomes a dangerous creature.

According to the laws of the country the Tuareg woman need not follow her husband unless she wants to do so, nor is she compelled to serve her spouse. She is educated, for she can read, and she accomplishes, not shared by the other sex, gives her a privileged position in so far that she acts as judge or arbitrator in all difficult cases.

The Water Bite. He was six years old and had never gazed into the mystical lines of a natroscope. Several children containing animalculae had been displayed to his astonished vision. He was too amazed to make any comment until his name came to one who seemed more wisely than any of the others. It was merely a drop of water.

The little fellow gazed at it a long time, with all his nimble particles of animal life, and finally exclaimed to his mother: "Oh, mamma, now I know what it is that bites you when you drink soda water!"

Case of Cordial Hatred. An Irishman was standing in a depot smoking when a woman came and, sitting down beside him, remarked: "If you were a gentleman you would not smoke here."

"Mum," he said; "if ye wuz a lady y'd sit farther away!" Pretty soon the woman burst out again: "If you were my husband I'd give you poison."

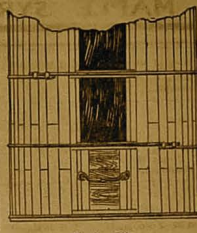

"Wuz, mum," returned the Irishman, as he puffed away at his pipe. "If you wuz me wife I'd take it!" Kansas City Independent.

FAULTS IN SILO BUILDING

Unless Walls of Wooden Pits Are Airtight Much Silage Is Necessarily Wasted. A writer in farmers' bulletin, 353 points out that too often the walls of silos are not made airtight. Unless the walls of wooden silos are made airtight, with tar paper, felt pads or clay worked into the joints, much silage will be wasted. Ninety per cent. of stave silos are not airtight at the foundation. The shrinkage and swelling of staves breaks the contact which must be frequently bagged.

Some losses have occurred because the ends of the staves have decayed.

Faulty Silo.

Fig. 1 shows how some durable wood may be used at the bottom of the silo, which is one method of overcoming the difficulty.

The hands of the stave silo will fall down as the staves shrink. Sometimes the iron spikes rust. Unless a stave silo is well anchored, it may be moved from its foundations or even blown down. The walls of the silo must be rigid or they cannot stand the pressure.

A mistake sometimes made was in building the silo of too large a diameter for the size of the herd, so that a stave silo is well anchored, it may be moved from its foundations or even blown down. The walls of the silo must be rigid or they cannot stand the pressure.

In one case a man with a small herd built a silo in his barn 18 feet square and 16 feet high. After two years' trial this man gave up the use of the silo in disgust because his silage did not keep. A year or two later he sold his farm to a more progressive man, who built partitions across the same silo, making four small silos out of the large one, and had no difficulty in obtaining good silage for stock.

The silos should be deep. The deeper the silo, the better the silage. The diameter should conform to the size of the herd, and if two inches of silage are fed each day, there will be no loss from surface exposure.

It is desirable to prevent silage from freezing. The best way to do this is to create silos and those built of rectangular building tile accomplish this object as well as any. Stone silos prevent freezing, but many owners of stock farms who build silos because moisture collects on the inside of the walls and rots the silage along the edge. A roof helps to keep out the frost, rain and snow. The second illustration shows a patent roof which allows the silo to be filled above the top.

Cow's Milk Surpasses. Of the various mammals whose milk is used for food in the different parts of the world may be mentioned the goat in the hilly districts of Europe, the buffalo in India, the water buffalo in South America, the camel in desert countries and the mare on the steppes of Russia and central Asia. Sheep's milk is used in some countries for making cheese and in other ways, and the milk of reindeers is commonly used as food in the arctic regions. With us the milk of the cow so far surpasses all other kinds in importance that unless otherwise specified the word milk is taken to refer to cow's milk only.

Feed for Young Calf. Feed the young calf at least three times a day, and feed smaller amounts at a time. When fed only twice a day the calf becomes so hungry that it drinks the milk too fast and indigestion often results, and indigestion is a source of many troubles. After the calf learns to nibble hay or other solid feeds, the feeding of milk may be reduced to twice a day.

Time for Dehorning. Dehorn the calves when they are a few days old by rubbing the button with caustic potash wet with water. One good application is usually effective. In dehorning older cows do the work in cold weather, when all flies are dead, to prevent maggots from infesting the wounds. Secure the head firmly so that no movement can be made when using the saw.

Good Feed for Milk. In sections where alfalfa does not grow it will pay to secure a good supply of clover for dairy feed. Clover is the best milk-producing hay known, and is about equal, pound for pound, to wheat bran. Where you do not grow your own clover it will cost you about half of what it will cost in winter or early spring.

FAVORED DOGS IN GERMANY

Dachshund is the Most Popular Variety, the English Bulldog Being Second Choice.

The dachshund is the favorite dog in Germany, and a very useful and pleasant companion he seems to be. The English bulldog is a good second in popularity, and the reason is to be found in the fact that the latter is so fit. The fox terrier varies a good deal in size and marking and is evidently not so well known in Germany as he deserves to be.

The indies there are so fond of their little Poms and their King Charles spaniels, and their English sisters of their pet dogs at home. Some few dogs in the streets are harnessed to four wheeled tricycles, and a dog pull. The work seemed too heavy and exhausting for the dogs, which are generally mongrels of the mastiff type. They look in fair condition and are not ill treated.—Farm and Home.

Sheer white goods, in fact, say fine fine goods which give you much of their attractiveness to the way they are laundered, this being done in a manner to enhance their textile beauty. Hence laundering would be equally satisfactory if proper attention was given to starching, the first essential being good starch, which has sufficient strength to stiffen, without thickening the goods. Try Defiance Starch and you will be pleasantly surprised at the improved appearance of your work.

Well, after the snake bit him, the reptile cut all sorts o' capers, keep the remedy wuzn't straight to his head.
