REIMESTAD and CRANSTON APPEAR TONIGHT!

Tonight at the Town hall will appear the last number of the entertainment course. This is a musical number consisting of two tenor soloists.

Theo. S. Reimestad.

Prof. Wilhelm Freudenberg, Royal Professor and Director of Music and Director of Chorus in the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial church of Berlin, says: "Prof. Theo. S. Reimestad has studied singing with me, especially German arias and songs. At the close of the course he appeared in recital concert at the Kaiser Wilhelm Gedachtniss-Kirche (The Emperor Wilhelm Memorial church) before a musical audience, singing the arias, "Mit Wuerd' und Hoheit angethan," from "Creation" (Haydn) and the arias, "Dann werden die Gerechten Leuchten" from "Elijah" (Mendelssohn). His voice is flexible, rich and sympathetic, and he sings with very intelligent expression.

Kenneth A. Cranston.

Prof. Kenneth Cranston, also of Minneapolis, shared honor with Prof. Reimestad. Mr. Cranston is a lyric tenor with an exceptionally pleasing voice. The songs "Believe Me" by Moore; "When Song is Sweet" by Sans Souci; and "Daddy" by Behrends were rendered by Mr. Cranston. The singer gave a charming and excellent interpretation of the latter selection which was well received by the audience. Mr. Cranston sings artistically and was enthusiastically applauded by those who came to hear him. (Duluth News Tribune.)

This will be an exceptionally good number and you can't afford to miss it. Remember that the program begins promptly at 8:30!

DIED WEDNESDAY AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS.

Wednesday evening at 8:15 occurred the death of L. S. Larsen. Mr. Larsen was ill scarcely a week, his sudden demise resulting from pneumonia.

Louis S. Larsen was born in Norway on the 26th day of January 1869. He came to this state in 1893 and to this village Jan. 1st 1911. Since residing here Mr. Larsen has been engaged in the lumber business, and up to the time of his death had charge of the Reliance Lumber Co. interests in this place.

The body will be taken to Minneapolis today and the funeral will take place from the residence of F. C. Riggs tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon at 2:30 p. m.

In his business and every-day life Mr. Larsen was always the same. He was honest, reliable and ever a man of his word. He was held in high regard by his business associates, and his loss is deeply felt by his numerous friends in this place and surrounding country. Beside a wife and two small children, Mr. Larsen leaves two sisters to mourn his loss. The deep and heartfelt sympathy of a feeling public is with the bereaved ones.

offer the inexperienced home builder much food for thought, not because roofing materials are inferior to what they were in former years, but because of the many new products on the market. Of course most all of these coverings have merit, but the question that naturally arises is the cost and service as compared with shingles. We have made a careful study of the various prepared roofings and believe we can offer you good substantial advice and help you to select just the roof for your purpose. In some cases shingles are preferable and in others the ready prepared roofings are best suited. But of one thing you can rest assured whichever we sell you it will be the best for the money the market affords.

Miss Thompson, whose form nature has endowed with all-too-ample curves, was giving her little nephew a lesson in spelling...

BABY'S HAIR ALL CAME OUT

"When my first baby was six months old he broke out on his head with little bumps. They would dry up and leave a scum. Then it would break out again and it spread all over his head."

All the hair came out and his head was scaly all over. Then his face broke out all over in red bumps and it kept spreading until it was on his hands and arms. I bought several boxes of ointment, gave him blood medicine, and had two doctors to treat him, but he got worse all the time.

"I have bought Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap several times since to use for cuts and sores and have never known them to fail to cure what I put them on. Cuticura Soap is the best that I have ever used for cutaneous eruptions."

"That politician used to have a knife in his sleeve for you." "Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "But I have observed him at luncheon and his knife in his sleeve, do me any harm. He's too busy eating with it."

Question Posing Teacher in Mission School After Incident in the Sewing Class. This was our children's sewing class yesterday. I said a teacher of a mission school in New York city...

THEY'RE A ROMANCE BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WATERS

SYNOPSIS. In through any regular port of entry. All we were certain of was that it was getting in duty free—though we couldn't prove even that.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, would like Blackstock, who invites him to a sad party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, who seems to be both a man and a woman.

"I'm through any regular port of entry. All we were certain of was that it was getting in duty free—though we couldn't prove even that."

A change has come over the spirit of our dream—yes! Appleyard inquired. "Nothing like food on the human stomach to make the skies seem brighter."

Coast sat down. "Well," he said, with the air of one no longer to be denied.

"Well," said the little man reluctantly. "If you must know all my glances, I read the paper."

"What's that go to do with it?" "So, when you were kind enough to tell me your real name, after your gallant rescue yesterday morning, I knew at once just who and what you were."

"I don't know your temper—please. I know I sound impertinent, but I don't mean to be so; it's just my temperament makes me such a cut-up."

"You are a little child if I can work it. I'm going to stick round and see what happens next. You see, it's my business to go about nosing into other people's."

"Yes," assented Appleyard serenely. "I make my living the way Government pays me a handsome salary for doing it."

"What!" A light was beginning to dawn upon Coast. "The little man nodded gravely. 'The U. S. Secret Service,' he affirmed.

"Let us begin at the beginning, for never understanding it Appleyard continued. 'I'm not here for my health—'m on the job; and things have shaped round so that I want your help temporarily—while you are certainly need mine. That's why I'm letting you in by the basement door and speaking in stage whispers. You get me? What I'm telling you is to be kept under your hat."

"Certainly, that's understood." "Right you are, sir. Now for the particular phase of lawless industry at present engaging my distinguished professional attention!"

"Let us return to the beginning of your business," said Appleyard. "You see, it's my business to go about nosing into other people's."

"I know I sound impertinent, but I don't mean to be so; it's just my temperament makes me such a cut-up. When I waked up before you did yesterday, I thought it all out and I see to myself, set it. 'His big nose I'm mistaken something glorious. Romance is a dead-end of him by the hand, like a little child. If I can work it, I'm going to stick round and see what happens next. You see, it's my business to go about nosing into other people's."

WHO REALLY ARE THE POOR? Question Posing Teacher in Mission School After Incident in the Sewing Class.

This was our children's sewing class yesterday. I said a teacher of a mission school in New York city, and the cold snap drove a larger attendance to our doors than we have had since to be very cheerful in our mis-speech if I couldn't incidentally talk you into going where I wanted to—No Man's Land, Muskogee, Tucker-

"I'm ready to certify you're qualified to talk the hind legs off the domestic mule," Coast averred with enthusiasm. "Don't worry; I'm a merciful man."

"I had no particular notion of investigating that island first of all; but a number of circumstances made me suspect we were in its neighborhood."

"I know that, once south of Devil's Bridge, the set of the tide would snake us out toward No Man's Land. So, when we ran around and I went ashore, leaving you asleep, I wasn't surprised to recognize the place."

"I was an excellent memory, and had visited the island a good many times on fishing trips when I was a boy in these parts. That abandoned fishing village made me sure of my ground; in the days when the bluetrail ran in these waters there used to be quite a settlement there. However, I'm fortunate in the possession of a sense of locality something above the average, and though it was pitch dark at first, and thick as mud, I wasn't

"In a grey wash of seas to starboard. 'Some navigatin,' that!" Appleyard observed complacently. Coast watched Appleyard shift the spokes until the Echo swung upon a course at a salient angle to that which she had been holding. "And now what?"

"Lest!" exclaimed Coast in exasperation. "Tut," said the little man in a tone of mild reproach; "and again tut. Etissoon I will a tale unfold that'll shed a heap o' light upon the plot of this issue of the Half-Dime Library Book you not that Demond the Dachshund Detective is on the scent?"

"You were on the point of making some interesting discoveries," Coast prompted patiently. "To be sure. As I was about to say, I felt my way along, lost it, and presently stumbled onto what seemed a pretty raw slice of melodramatic romance. The first thing I struck for was the farmhouse. Last I heard of the island, it was inhabited by a single family, a farmer, his wife and three children. Must've been a bit lonesome, but they didn't seem to mind. They do say the man once petitioned the State Legislature to build a schoolhouse on the island, but that as a taxpayer he was entitled to their schooling at the expense of the Commonwealth. Shrewd customer!

"I had it in mind to pump him, you see, the first case. And when I pulled up to take soundings I heard a curious sort of noise—singular in that locality, at least: one of those noises that, once heard, is never forgotten; as nearly as I can describe it, a sort of ripping crash—very irregular in duration and much muted by distance and fog. I picked up my ears and tried to mark down the quarter it came from. Then I followed it up as best I could. After two or three false turns I fell over what seemed to be a wire stay, groped round and found a mat. The noise had stopped by this time, but I knew what had made it without doubt; that mat was an aerial, and I'd been listening to some body operating a wireless station. Next thing, I made out a glow of light that led me to a window. By now I was interested and laying very low."

"I'm through any regular port of entry. All we were certain of was that it was getting in duty free—though we couldn't prove even that."

Why all this squabbling for the Democratic nomination? One man is about as good as another for the sacrifice.

There is not a boy or a girl in America who could not be made better by the friendly interest of those around them.

January has been a record-breaking month. It will be remembered as the coldest month in the memory of the present generation.

Don't blame the fellow who throws mud. He can't help it and it is in his natural element when dealing with scandal. Just pity him.

There is no question as to the Democratic party being harmonious at the present time but the variety of harmony is about the same that is witnessed when several beligerent tom cats meet on the back yard fence.

At last there is a real "yellow peril" and it is not the yellow man but the prices of good yellow butter that threaten the peace of the American people for no man can pay the present prices demanded for good butter and keep his temper.

It is astonishing how very much afraid of a rupture between the President and Postmaster General Hitchcock some of the people are. It is also astonishing that the people who fear the rupture are the ones who would gladly welcome such a break.

Some time ago we predicted the outcome of the Stephenson investigation. Today is "Ground Hog" day. It makes no difference whether the old fellow sees his shadow or not he will be foolish if he stays out in this spell of weather and it will be a safe bet that he will have sufficient sense to keep under cover for the next six weeks.

MRS. Henri Watterson has stirred up a terrible row in the Wilson camp and is telling stories out of school that worry some of his political bed-fellows. The day of personalities in newspaper work has not altogether passed and as long as Henri Watterson lives the Courier-Journal will be a power not only in the Democratic party but in the entire field of American journalism.

It isn't safe to believe all the stuff you are told in the papers these times. Many of the fellows who are talking in print have an ax to grind and the papers are a good medium for disseminating the misinformation on which they would climb into a fat job. Take a pencil and paper and figure some of the things out for yourself from original sources of information. Then you know what you are talking about.

It is certainly amusing to read the "tariff reform" papers in an agricultural community and see how they tell the farmer that he is being taxed to death to provide luxuries for the manufacturers and then to turn to the papers of the same breed published in a manufacturing community and see how they tell the men who work in the factories that they are being taxed to death to provide a high price for farm products and to raise the price of living for the man who has to buy what he eats. The story works all right in both communities until the reader happens to get hold of the "dope" fixed up by the Free Trade Press Bureau for the other community and then there is more trouble than is caused by mailing the wrong letter to your best girl.

LET HER VALENTINE BE A MONARCH
MALLEABLE RANGE

How long since you gave your Sweetheart a GOOD Valentine? Why not make Valentine Day, 1912, a big day of lasting enjoyment in your home? You can do it easily--You can do it economically--Let us tell you how.

Make Your Valentine a
Monarch Malleable Range

Let us tell you why--

It will mean shorter hours in the kitchen for your sweetheart. It will mean less work and drudgery for her, every day for years to come.

It will mean always satisfactory results in her cooking, and it will mean much less fuel to do the same work. Moreover, in ten, fifteen or twenty years from now, the Monarch will do the work with just as little work, in just as little time and with just as little fuel as at first.

Come in and let us show you just how the Monarch is different than any other range--just how the Triple-wall Construction--the Duplex Draft--the Hot Blast Firebox operate to make perfect baking and small fuel consumption.

Let us show you the Polished Top and show you how it needs no blacking. There are lots of other good things that we can show you and you owe it to yourself and family to investigate.

We can show you a big saving and how you can better afford to have a Monarch right now than you can afford to do without it. Don't think that because the range you have is pretty good that you can let this go by. You will quickly see the difference, if you come in. Do It. Investigate--bring Mrs. Sweetheart with you--you will be surprised at the many improvements you can have and have them at a great saving of time, work and fuel in the U. S. Senate and now the sub-committee which conducted the investigation has prepared its report in which it exonerated the Senator completely and says inferentially that the excessive use of money in his campaign was due to the system under which he was elected. This is the hardest blow the primary election fad has received since it was adopted by the Populistic "reformers" as a means of bringing "government back to the people." When will the average man wake up to the realization of the fact that it is usually the man who starts the cry of "stop thief" who has the stolen goods on him. As a means of throwing the control of political nominations into the hands of unscrupulous leaders and demagogues the primary election is the best tool that the devil ever devised.

GOVERNOR Woodrow Wilson is one of the men who talks too much. Not only has his tongue been getting him into trouble but his pen has been working against his Presidential ambitions of late. Before the Governor thought of becoming a candidate for the highest office in the land he was radically opposed to the initiative, the referendum and the recall and in a letter to his friend Prof. R. H. Dabney of the University of Virginia he said, "My whole prepossession--my whole reasoning--was against these things." He has, since he became a candidate, been loud in advocating these socialistic horres and the thinking up public wonders why. The real solution of the difficulty is that he has thought of these Bryan-esque follies would add to his popularity with a certain class of voters whose suffering was essential to his success. Stoppage of all the excuses and apologies that may be made for the Governor the situation is simply this; he wants the office and is willing to sacrifice his "prepossessions" and his "reasoning" and to mislead the public if he can only land the office. Woodrow Wilson was our choice among all the Democratic possibilities before he began talking and before his mask was torn off. Now that he is disclosed as a demagogue of as dangerous a class as some of those in the opposition camp, he is unmentionable in the class of Presidential possibilities. What this country needs just now is a class of men in public life who have opinions and are willing to stand by them--not the trimmer who is after votes at any cost.

—Reimestad & Cranston TONIGHT!

—Tuesday morning Wesley Flaten received burns about the back and shoulders which were exceedingly painful. The little fellow had come down to be dressed and was standing with his back to the stove waiting for assistance. He was clad only in his night clothes and on getting too near the hot stove these took fire. Before aid could reach him his entire back and shoulders were blistered and in some places raw. The little fellow suffered terribly until a doctor could be summoned.

Keeping the Boys and Girls on the Farm

In these days when the public prints and the popular mind are filled with the subject of the "back to the soil" crusade which has been sweeping over the country it might be supposed that the enthusiasm for farm life was universal. And yet, oddly enough, the problem of keeping the boys and girls on the farm is, in some sections of the country, only little less acute than it was a few years ago when the cities bade fair to drain the rural districts of all the best of its young blood. However, it is only fair to say that the crisis has been passed in this drift from the country to the city. The tide has turned not only as shown by the migration of many city folk countryward, but yet more significantly by the growing content with which an increasing proportion of the young people who have been born in the city elect to remain in their native environment when the time comes for them to strike out for themselves.

It should be pointed out, just here, though, that the considerations that are prompting an increased percentage of rural youth to stay by the time-honored vocation of their forefathers are not all the purely sentimental ones that influence so many city folks to seek the country as a place of residence. It is undoubtedly true that the average individual is prone to underestimate the advantages and exaggerate the disadvantages of his own situation and environment. And it is equally true that "far away fields look green," literally as well as figuratively speaking. Consequently the city resident, sick of stuffy apartments and noisy, dirty streets, working for a wage or salary, is prone to find a dream of paradise in the prospect of being his own boss in the cool, quiet country. The country girl or boy, on the other hand, must inevitably look at the situation through the opposite end of the telescope. He or she is familiar from experience with the hard work of the farm when the inexperienced city dweller has given scarce a thought to in advance and many of the distractions of city life which have pallied on the rural resident who turns his eyes forward to see the charm of novelty for the unrivaled young people of the farm.

Boys and Girls Sticking to the Farm.
That depicts this state of affairs a constantly increasing proportion of the country girls and boys are choosing to stick by the farm is highly significant and betokens a change of material conditions as well as an altered mental state. And, speaking of material things, or had we better say financial conditions, it might as well be put down first and foremost that one of the main factors in inducing country bred youth to remain in the country is the increased prosperity that has come in recent years to tillers of the soil. In the old days when almost every farm was heavily mortgaged and the son or daughter of the household saw little ahead but a lifetime struggle with debt it was no wonder that they turned to paths where life, if not easier, was certainly more pleasant and allowed a more equal division of the time between work and play.

But now, with the farms on a sound, profitable basis and the average rural couple able to start their married life on a farm of their own, wholly or partially paid for—there is not so much attraction in the jobs which the city affords the unskilled worker.—the $12 or $15 a week at which the street car conductor must start or the $5 or $8 a week that is offered to the new recruit among the shop girls of the big city stores. Even if a country youth is allured by the lights and sife and glamor and gaudy of the large city he is now compelled by that sound, practical common sense which is the heritage of the average farmer boy, to stop and consider whether it is worth the sacrifice demanded in dollars and cents, to say nothing of the sacrifice of health, to which perhaps he gives more a thought.

Property Has Brought Improved Conditions.
The farmers who have given serious thought to the problems of keeping their girls and boys with them or near them on the farms have been quick to appreciate the advantages of the improved conditions of recent years and they have followed up the advantage that prosperity has given them by making it easy for a young man to get title to a tract of his own or for the daughter of a household to have a dowry of broad acres when she marries. We can all remember how the farmer of yesterday, even if he was pretty "well fixed," thought that his son ought to be perfectly content if he had a showy turnout in which to take his best girl for the traditional Sunday afternoon ride. Ideas have changed rapidly in this respect and a great light has broken in upon the wide-awake farmers. The prosperous tiller of the soil has come to realize that if he wishes to have his son remain in the neighborhood he must either give him a tangible interest in the home place or else arrange matters so that the young man can strike out as master of his own holding, even though it be a comparatively small one to start with.

Rural Free Delivery of Much Benefit.
Much has been said regarding the extent to which the rural free delivery of U. S. mail has contributed to keeping boys and girls on the farm and its influence has probably not been exaggerated. For all that the average young farmer prizes the boon of receiving his daily paper on the same day on which it is printed, it is probable that rural free delivery has meant even more to the young women than it has to the young men. The circulating rural libraries have been another contributor to content on the farms and so have the rural telephones which enable the young people to keep in close touch with one another and enable them to arrange social festivities on short notice—something that was absolutely impossible under the old conditions when every farmhouse was more or less isolated from all the other dwellings of the country side. The advent of the modern musical instruments has been another tremendous help in rendering the country young people self-sufficient. The player piano has done wonders but perhaps the greatest transformation has been wrought by the modern graphophone, phonographs and talking machines with the facilities they afford for ready-made concerts and recitals of sacred music and accompaniments for singing in the home and dance music for the frolics in barn or parlor.

Moving Pictures Shows Enjoyed.
The latest and one of the most potent of all the contributors to content in rural communities is the moving picture. The time will come when every farm household can have its nightly moving picture entertainment in its own home, enjoying the delights of foreign travel and the relaxation of funny plays but in the meantime the installation of moving picture shows in every town and village has given the rural young people the best kind of a substitute for the one form of amusement that in the past they thought could only be had in the cities.

The moving picture fad has also made it possible for the young people to entertain an evening of relaxation, whenever they happened to feel in the mood or whenever the state of the weather is favorable to a drive "to town". In the old days the opera house in the average small town had a theatrical attraction not more than once or twice a week, and even if the young people on the farm could make it convenient to make the trip on such an occasion they were more than likely to be confronted with "The Two Orphans" or "Ten Nights in the Bar Room" or "East Lynne" or "Uncle Tom's Cabin" or some other classic that they had seen so many times that they knew the story backward and forward. Now we have the moving pictures open every night with a nightly change of the little plays on their programs. Their programs are concluded, too, at an hour that enables the farm young people to be at home and in bed in reasonable season and finally this innocent amusement costs only a fraction what a visit to the "town hall" or opera house did in the old days when the traveling troupes held sway.

To jump at one bound from the frivolous to the serious, it may be noted that our modern agricultural colleges are also doing a tremendous work in keeping the young people on the farm. First of all, they give to the farmer boy and girl an added appreciation and respect for the vocation which awaits them and incidentally kindle ambition by disclosing how much money can be made in farming if the farmer will get down to business and use scientific, progressive methods. Quite aside from this consideration however is the one that after a three or four year course at an agricultural college, with all sorts of excursions and social festivities on the side, a farmer lad or lassie is more likely to have had his or her "fill" of such diversions and be ready to come back home and settle down to the serious business of life than is the country-bred junior who has never been off the farm and has never had any opportunity to gratify that love of a good time that is instinctive with all young people.

A Sad Event.
The irrepressible "Toby" Hamilton, who is held to know as much about oxen as any man being could, tells of the misfortunes of an Ohio man who attempted to pilot a "one-ten" show" through the middle west. This owner lost a number of valuable animals, by accident and otherwise; so that it was with considerable sympathy that one of his keepers undertook the task of "breaking gently to the old man" the news of further disaster. The keeper accomplished this with much tact, as follows: "Mr. Morgan, you remember that 'lamb' hyena in cage No. 8?" "Remember the laughing hyena?" repeated the owner. "What the deuce are you driving at?" "Simply this, Mr. Morgan: He ain't got nothin' to laugh at this mornin'!"—Lippincott's

Letter from Miss Grace Dodds, Bethlelem, N.H.
Bethlelem, N.H.—"By working very hard, sweeping carpets, washing, ironing, lifting heavy baskets of clothes, etc., I got all run down. I was sick in bed every month."
