SCHOOL FUND ATTRACTS ATTENTION.

What the Milwaukee Journal Thinks About the Way Minnesota is Caring for Her Finances.

Fred D. Sherman, commissioner of immigration, has issued a statement regarding Minnesota's finances, in which he says, "Minnesota's immense permanent school fund is attracting national attention, and her method of conserving her natural resources is being cited as an example that other states should follow."

The following article in a recent issue of the Milwaukee Journal is a fair statement of what other states think about Minnesota and her manner of creating and taking care of her trust funds:

"Wisconsin frittered away the school, university and other lands ceded to the state by the federal government and has little to show in connection with them, except a record of shame and folly. Minnesota, like Dakota, husbanded these resources, and as a result possesses a fund that exceeds $28,000,000 and assets that bring the total up to approximately two hundred million. Wisconsin sold her land, including the valuable timber that stood upon most of it, for little more than a song, and now the state legislature contemplates dealing a fatal blow to a forestry policy designed to correct in part the mistake of former years, while Minnesota has pursued the policy of selling timber upon state lands at something like the real value, with the result that during the last fiscal year that state received an income of $324,295 for timber, cutting privileges alone. Wisconsin university land fund amounts to only $232,796.50, as against $1,906,136, in Minnesota, and the income from this fund last year was only $17,959.44, against $57,000 in Minnesota. The principal of Wisconsin's school land fund is $4,117,698 and the income from it last year was only $203,977.19, while Minnesota's school land fund is $22,614,294 and the income from it for the last fiscal year was $590,000. Minnesota has wisely managed these public lands, has carefully conserved these natural resources, while Wisconsin has been exploited and robbed. State forestry pays. The fact that Minnesota, during the last fiscal year received an income of $324,295 from the sale of timber, while retaining the title to the land from which the timber was cut, proves this. This sum is greatly larger than Wisconsin's total income from all land sources. Germany's achievements bear absolutely convincing evidence of the feasibility and great advantage of state forestry."

BOOKS TO BE EXAMINED.

Under a new law passed last winter the accounts of all County Agriculture Societies drawing money from the State are subject to examination by the Public Examiners office the same as banks.

A representative of that office was here last week and examined the books of the Pine County Agriculture Society and reported them O. K. as well as complementing the Society for their work in promoting the County Fair.

NOTICE TO FARMERS OF PINE COUNTY.

PINE CITY, MINN., July 30th 1913

Pine County will have an exhibit at the State Fair this year. We won high honors and prizes at the past State Fair and we want to exceed our past record this year. The advertisement which Pine County has received thru winning these prizes has been the means of bringing our county to the notice of people all over the United States. It is necessary to make a success of these exhibits that every farmer pick out some of his best products and leave them at the bank, in his home town in order that our representative might get them. Mr. Albert Jumper, of Pine City, is chairman of the exhibit committee and will have the complete charge of the exhibit at the State Fair, assisted by Mr. Raht, Derr. Any information desired may be obtained by calling upon or writing to Albert Jumper.

All grasses and grains in sheaf should be cured in a dark, dry, well ventilated place.

By Order of the Committee,

Artistic Effects For Home Building

can be secured by the use of lumber, usually at a great saving over substitutes and with much greater stability. Shingles and novelty siding properly used is one example for exterior effect, and for interior purposes there are dozens of patterns and a variety of woods that, with comparatively little extra cost, furnish just those dainty pleasing touches that mean so much for comfort and coziness. We want to talk with you about this lumber question before you build and give you the benefit of our years of observation—tell you why frame construction is the best and show you by comparison why we think so. PINE COUNTY PIONEER

ED. C. GOTTRY, Editor and Prop.
Entered in the Postoffice at Pine City as Second Class Matter

Pine City, Minnesota, Aug. 15 '13

Twenty Five Years Ago.

The following items are taken from the files of the Pioneer printed 25 years ago.

Miss Ida Saffer went to Hinckley last Saturday

State fairs and political gatherings will soon be all the rage.

Walter Page is again at the depot in this village assisting Mr. Borst.

Jos. Kronenberg, of Sandstone, was in town on business Tuesday morning.

Mrs. M. Hregg went down to Harris Tuesday on a visit to her daughter Mrs. C. Clover.

W. R. Buttrick, agent at Harris, spent a few hours with friends in Pine City Sunday evening.

Mrs. P. Lawless, of Hinckley, was in town the first of the week, visiting with her daughter, Mrs. Jas. Hurley.

J. H. Borst, our popular station agent, went down to St. Paul, Wednesday at noon, remaining until the midnight train.

John Lawler, of Sandstone, was in town on Wednesday, shaking hands with his numerous friends and renewing old acquaintances.

R. M. Simpson, of Sandstone, was in town on business Saturday and Wednesday. Mr. Simpson reports business in his line as being very good.

Lumber for a number of new side walks to be built in this village has been ordered, and the much needed improvement in this line will soon be made.

J. D. Markham, the popular attorney of Rush City, was in town on business last Saturday afternoon. J. D.'s many Pine City friends are always glad to see him.

Frank Dudley, of Prescott, Wis., who has been up the river for a few days putting up hay for his brother John's lumber camp, returned to his home Tuesday morning.

Julius Neubauer has been doing quite a good business in the line of agricultural implements this summer, and now proposes to get ready for a much better business next summer.

Miss Minnie A. B. Jewett went down to Minneapolis last Saturday and will remain there for a few weeks, visiting with friends and relatives. She will spend a few days with a party camping at Lake Harriet.

Burt Richardson, formerly of Mora, has bought the small house of Julius Neubauer, which formerly stood next to the blacksmith shop and has moved it to the lots owned by his father, near the Catholic Church, and will fit it up for a residence.

A party of about twenty from this village went up to Lake Pokegama on Saturday afternoon, and spent the afternoon on the banks of that beautiful body of water. The rain storm in the evening gave them a thorough wetting, but that did not prevent their having a good time.

HINCKLEY.

Chas. Glinder has sold his house recently occupied by Mr. Jones, to Chas. Walters.

Rev. Father Coary, of Rush City, was in town the first of the week, visiting with Rev. Father Lynch, in his pleasant new home.

A new sidewalk has been built around the new residence of Rev. Father Lynch in this village. This is another improvement in this part of town which not only improves the looks of property, but is a convenience to the neighborhood.

Anton Smith, formerly of Mora, has moved into the building recently bought of E. A. Hogan, and on Monday of this week, opened his market with a good stock of meats. Mr. Smith expresses his entire satisfaction with the trade he has received and says that so far he enjoys living in Hinckley much better than he did in Mora.

A. B. Clinch, formerly teacher in our schools, has been mentioned in connection with the office of Superintendent of Schools for Anoka County. Mr. Clinch is a good teacher, a man who has given his lifetime to educational work, and would doubtless make as good a man for the office as could be found. If possible his Hinckley friends would give him a rousing support.

The past year has been one of marked improvement in this village. The onward march of progress has this year taken greater strides than ever before. There have been more new buildings erected and more permanent improvements made here this year than in any other town along the line of the St. Paul and Duluth road, and the end is not yet. With the improvement which will be made by the Manitoba Railroad as well as private enterprise, Hinckley will surprise her neighbors 'ere snow falls.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Notice is hereby given, that default has been made in the conditions of the certain mortgage executed and delivered by Nellie M. Fairbanks and V. F. A. McPherson, mortgagees, bearing date the 1st day of December, 1909, to the power of sale therein contained, in and to the County of Pine, State of Minnesota, on the 1st day of December, 1912, in Book "C" of Mortgages on page 446, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pine, State of Minnesota, on the 1st day of December, 1912, in Book "C" of Mortgages on page 446, which said mortgage is assigned to the said V. F. A. McPherson, by Thomas E. Lindquist, by assignment made and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pine, State of Minnesota, on the 1st day of December, A. D. 1909, in Book "B" of Mortgages on page 18, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pine, State of Minnesota, on the 23rd day of December, A. D. 1909 in Book "B" of Mortgages on page 90.

Which said default has continued to the date of this notice, by the failure and neglect of the said Mortgageors to make payment of the said mortgage note, bearing date the 1st day of December, A. D. 1909, and by said mortgagees, and each by their failure to cause the same to be paid as follows:

Four Hundred and Fifty Dollars on or before June 1st, A. D. 1910 according to the terms of said mortgage note, with interest thereon at seven per cent per annum from the date thereof to-wit: 1910 Dollars on or before August 1st, 1910 according to the terms of the said mortgage note, with interest thereon at seven per cent per annum from the date thereof until paid in full and the said default having continued for more than six months.

And Whereas there is actually due and unpaid to the said mortgagees on the said two promissory notes as of the date of this notice the aggregate sum of Nine Hundred Eighty Four and Five-tenths Dollars ($984.50) Dollars, and James Lorenz is the owner of the said mortgage has become operative, and no action or proceeding has been instituted to recover the debt secured by the said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises in and conveyed by said mortgage, to-wit:

(1) All that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the County of Pine and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: The East Half (1/2) and the Southeast Quarter of the Northwest Quarter (1/4) of the NW 1/4 of Section Twenty-one (21) in Township Forty-two (42) in Range Eighteen (18) West of the 1st Principal Meridian, being 320 acres, more or less according to the United States Government survey, thereof; And

(2) All that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the County of Pine and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: The North Thirty (30) in Township Forty-two (42) in Range Eighteen (18) West of the 1st Principal Meridian, being 320 acres, more or less according to the United States Government survey, thereof; And

(3) All that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the County of Yellow Medicine and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: The North Thirty (30) in Township Forty-two (42) in Range Eighteen (18) West of the 1st Principal Meridian, being 320 acres, more or less according to the United States Government survey, thereof; And the said sale of all the said premises hereinbefore described and to be made by the Sheriff of the said Pine County, at the Court House in said City of Pine City, in said County of Pine, State of Minnesota, on Saturday the 23rd day of August, A. D. 1913, at 2 o'clock p. m. on said day, to pay said debt of $984.50 and interest, and the attorney's fee, as stipulated in, and the disbursements in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, and the costs of said sale, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

HOOVER POTATO DIGGER

Specifications

Main Frame The main frame is made of the best quality gray iron castings with the axle and bolted solid thereto.

Shovel The shovel is made of best quality high carbon crucible steel, formed by us on special dies to just the right shape to scour properly and gather the potatoes with the least possible loss. The corners are turned to prevent the shovel to clear without catching or clogging. A special shovel with traps or hinges, for use in stony ground, will be furnished when so ordered.

Beams The beams are made of best quality charcoal malleable castings and bolted solid to the main frame. The beams are made of best quality charcoal malleable castings and bolted inside of the tilting or short beam that unite by a circular tongue and groove inside of the pole. This makes the main frame very solid and enables the operator to raise and lower the shovel while the machine is in motion.

Truck The Double-Action front truck, is our special design, and for which we hold letters patent No. 981,761, which protect us fully in its exclusive use on the "Hoover" Potato Diggers. The wheels have nearly double the action of the pole and permits machine to be turned around at the end to come back on the next row or shorter if necessary. They also help (by their peculiar action) to follow the row more closely. The wheels are steel with removable hubs and bearings and are protected from dirt by sand bands and have bearing means for oiling.

Roller Bearings The bearings for the main elevator shaft are roller bearings, 2 1/2 inches long, absolutely protected from dirt and are oiled by means of six inch oil tubes properly fitted with compression grease cups.

Drive Wheels The drive wheels are made of steel with staggered or reinforced spokes and are provided with removable hubs. The spurs that bolt on the rim to keep the wheels from slipping are of our own design and are made of specially rolled steel, formed and fitted by us to properly fit the wheels and give the best clearing qualities. They are either made straight for level land or formed with an angle for side hill work.

Draft Dogs are placed in the plate that bolts to the wheels, which engage ratchets in the large sprocket wheels for throwing in and out of gear.

The draft of our machines depends on the condition of the ground and the depth necessary to go to get the potatoes. In some conditions two horses will handle them easily, and in others it requires four.

All machines are furnished complete with doubletrees, neckyoke and suitable tools.

The "Hoover" adjustable roller coulters can be attached to any of our machines to cut the vines of the potatoes. They are adjustable to any width row and to any depth that it is necessary for them to run. When turning around they raise out of the way with the same lever that raises the shovels out of the ground. It is very simple and effective arrangement and should recommend itself to all. They can be attached to any "Hoover" Potato Digger with very little effort.

We give our personal guarantee with every Hoover leaving our store and if they are not all OK in every detail your money will be waiting for you, when you cannot do your work.

TWINE

GIVES YOUR BINDER A CHANCE

The best binder makes a poor showing when it has to work with shoddy, unreliable twine. Give your binder a change. Protect yourself from binder troubles by using even-quality, reliable McCormick binder twine.

There's a reason for McCormick twine superiority. Every step in its manufacture is subject to the most rigid care and inspection. The fibre is carefully selected. The spinning and winding are closely watched. The result is even quality and thickness—no bunches to clog in the knoter, no thin places to break. Make sure of good binder service by using McCormick twine.

Mo-n-a-a-a. That's a pretty good place to stay. We'll always think when we're far away, Of Mo-n-a-a-a.

THE particular part of Montana about which this song was sung lies in the far northwest corner of the state, where the Rocky mountains their summits covered with eternal snow, their faces clothed in pine forests of perpetual green, swing over the Canadian border, down through the heart of the continent to the year-long summer lands of Mexico. Bright lakes, tapphire and opal and diamond clear in the varying lights, reflect the blue western sky. Throbbing living glaciers, arched with the depths of ice that endures season after season, lie like the hollows of the giant peaks. Crystal streams descend in countless waterfalls over the brown rocks and break the silence of the forest trails.

In these mountains, left save for a few trails as they were before the first white men pushed their way across the plains to the further ocean, the wild things of that early wilderness still find a refuge.

Anticipation to think of Montana as a state of cowboys, big wheat crops, and the home of copper, we know nothing of this part of it—this land of delight. Yet it is common with some 40,000,000 of other Americans, are its owners. Conversely, in one of its moments of wisdom two years ago, set it aside as a national possession to be, as Chief Two Guns said, a playground for all the people, fish and pony, white and Indian, forever.

It is now Glacier National park, and there are some 1,000 square miles within its borders. You may roam through it for a month and never tread the same ground twice.

It was by pony trail that a party of eastern tenderfoot, fresh from occupations in which exercise is at a discount and locomotion is mostly by street car, explored the park a few weeks ago. They emerged from a two weeks' exile, after some tribulation, hard as nails and healthy as sparrows. This diary is a brief record of their experience.

Two Medicine, Mont., Thursday.
It is eight miles from the park gateway at Midway to the first chalet at Two Medicine. But these are mountain miles, and as Old Philadelphus said, if they would only let you land on the Moon, take measurement and let you re-appear on the eastern coast it would be a mighty satisfactory transaction. The trail led over several small streams and on through forests of pine and spruce oak. The ways I led upward, a little blue needle, and narrowly a second discarded the green ahead. The pace slowed on an easy walk, the horses' feet fell awkwardly upon the thick pine needles, and naturally a second discarded the forest path. Late afternoon came, all too soon. A sudden turn to the trail brought into view a forest of slender birch and poplar trees. The road was a narrow gully lined by a close that you would expect to throw a stone upon its surface with ease. The guide said it was a full three miles away.

Lake McDermott, Wednesday.
We have seen many beautiful sights, but the unanimous verdict on reaching camp tonight was that the day's ride had been the most beautiful side of all, at which Tom Dawson, the veteran tenderfoot rapturously "Why," he said, "you haven't seen anything to speak of yet. This is only the beginning."

Beautiful Lake Sherbourne was passed at a canter, for the tenderfoot by this time have become hardened to the saddle, and each rider's pony is his best friend. Toward evening we came upon a new and strange sight. By the remnants of a grass-grown stage road we reached a group of log houses, larger and more pretentious than most. The guide explained: "This is Altya, a dead town. It was built up by a copper mining prospect, but the prospect was only a pocket, and the pocket soon gave out. Then everybody went away. It has been deserted ten years."

We left Altya behind and in a few minutes were in quite a different spot. The Lake McDermott chalets are grouped about a waterfall, around which the mountains stand sentinel. Their summits as we saw them first were flushed with pink in the evening light, and inspired new adjectives of admiration, all too weak.

Lake McDermott, Friday.
Yesterday we rode to Loeburg lake and saw our park in still another guise. We passed through a forest of giant Christmas trees with the snow thick upon their branches and the whole world green beneath, then skirted the steepest mountains encountered in all our travel hitherto, climbed the famous Golden Stairs, and at last reached a valley where on three sides huge cliffs looked down upon a sapphire lake set in a sea of white. On one side a glacier carries its old snows as high as or so a year down the steep rocks, its waters feeding the lake, whose surface is dotted with huge cakes of ice. The hottest day in August is cool at Loeburg lake, and finds the glacial fragments floating there as though it were early spring.

Today we traveled to still another beauty spot, Cracker lake, haunt of the big horn sheep, whose tracks here and there were seen upon the snow's smooth surface. Tomorrow we move on toward Lake McDonald and homeward.

Lake McDonald, Monday.
Here on the park's western border, and by the side of the largest—many say the most beautiful of all its many lakes—we have spent our last day. Our exploration is at an end for here the outside world makes itself felt again. Hobbies, boots and khaki, short skirt and sweater here meet the hallmarks of civilization upon a common footing.

We said good-bye to our trusty ponies yesterday and today we tramped it to the Royal Gorge and waterfall, which are McDonald's chief beauties.

Most of the (we) who have been to the park are coming back there. Our own seat also has its appeal.

BIG FEATURE FILM

Burning of Old Family Home Saved Son's Farm From Foreclosure Proceedings.

By AUGUSTUS GOODRICH SHER.

When the movie came to Brookdale Mrs. Hayden took a great interest in their doings. She and her crippled husband lived a mile from town along the river. It was there that the motion picture men made their camp. The scenery was wild and beautiful, just the spot to furnish the frame for almost any verbal drama. Mrs. Hayden had not seen her son and his wife for years. He was glad to note her interest in trifles and the household cares of years, wearing away from her. All the same he did this with a suppression of sadness she never penetrated.

With an aching heart, and that heart had received and kept secret from her, that the old man smiled at her simple joyousness.

"Just think of it, John," she said, "only two weeks more and we start for the boy's farm! Did I show you the photograph he sent me of the dear place, with his wife and his wife, Laura, and the two little tots on the pretty porch? Isn't it delightful to think of you and I passing our last days among such lovely surroundings, just vegetating in this ramshackle old ruin ready to fall to pieces after a century's use?"

It was indeed a noble ruin. It had answered the needs of two generations, however. A large rambling house, it was scarcely safe now to walk across some of the trembling floors. Neighbors had warned the Haydens that it would not last much longer, that any day the venerable relic might tumble about their ears.

Pored Over Its Contents.

"Don't worry," Sarah Hayden had smiled brightly. "It will last our time. Oh, a few days and we will bid it goodby; we are going to make our home with the dear boy, David, out west."

The small patch of ground around the house had no value whatever, even for average garden purposes. As to the house, a millwright had offered $50, intending to tear it down and use the old lumber to build sheds on his own place. It was this that the Haydens had depended on to pay their way to the boy's farm out west.

"It will kill her when she knows the truth," groaned John Hayden as he moved away on his crutches from the house. "How about the news to her? Poor mother! Poor, dear boy!"

Then the old man sought a secluded spot near the river and for the hunter's breath time took out the secret letter and pored over its contents.

That letter contained a real heart tragedy in its few scrawling lines. It informed the distracted father that he and his wife must abandon all thoughts of coming out west. David Hayden had met with dire misfortune. The year before a scamp of a traveling swindler had induced him to speculate on a new grain. The crop was a total failure.

"Worst of all," wrote David, "I had borrowed $300 to try the experiment, and I gave the little farm as security. They have foreclosed for $200 in a lot of money out here. Unless I pay that and a penalty of $50 inside of a month my farm will be taken away from me—the dear little place Laura and I have worked so many years to secure."

No wonder, therefore, with this dread secret in his kind nature, that John Hayden took little interest in the gay, carefree, gilded group of men and women—actors and actresses they called themselves—who daily posed and maneuvered before the camera to supply city dime shows with attractive motion picture films.

It was not in his kind nature, however, to be surly and alien with anybody. The kype-like crowd was made welcome to the shelter of the old house when it rained. Mrs. Hayden did some extra cooking for them. The man in charge of the movie, one Rupert Dale, appreciated all these little courtesies. Twice when he needed an old couple in the scenarios he paid husband and wife a substantial sum. Mrs. Hayden was as pleased as a child.

money, real money, in what is going to make us look like real actors to the people who will see those pictures when they are finished!" she marveled.

At any other time, with a mind free from care, all this would have been a pleasant series of episodes in the quiet, humdrum life of John Hayden. Now, however, it was a false position. He made him assure—to smile when his heart was breaking! Each dawn his day drew them closer and closer to the vortex of ruin that must be announced sooner or later.

"I am going to tell her—I must tell her," he said one day, after a long spell of deep thought. "It is his favorite side of the river side.

Yes, the blow could not be averted longer. His wife must know the truth. The old man tried to steady his nerves, to gain courage for the distressful disclosure.

He arose and sighed as he noted the bright, cheering sunlight. The network of vines that screened the house rested lost in painful meditation. About to take up his crutches and proceed on his cheerless mission and proceed on his cheerless mission and proceed on his cheerless mission.

Some one had John Hayden passing them, engaged in conversation. He recognized the tones of one of the speakers as that of one of the rollicking, good-natured leader of the movies, Rupert Dale.

"How about the finish up of that big feature film?"

"We've got to burn up a house to act that out."

"Well, why don't you find one to burn?" demanded Dale's companion, evidently a person of imposing mien.

"The company don't stop at expense, you know, where it's an extra good film."

"I haven't run across an empty house in our travels just suited to our purpose," replied Dale.

"Why, the ideal old barracks to work in the fire and the explosion is that old ruin I noticed right beyond here. Do you know who lives there?"

"Oh, very well."

"Offer to purchase it."

"How much?"

"Oh—say $50," was the careless reply of a man who made money so fast that the amount was a mere incidental trifle.

"I'll take it, oh, I'll take it!" cried a quavering voice, and John Hayden staggered into view and from very joy and gratitude fell a senseless heap at the feet of the two astonished motion picture men.

In graphic, sensational style the old house went up in smoke the next day. Following a secret suggestion John Hayden sent to his son, a happy old couple took the train for that little farm out west. Sarah Hayden was never to know how narrowly the joy of living had escaped the bleakness of despair. And all the way of that rapt train journey, the heart of the happy old man was singing a glad strain of gratitude and perfect happiness and peace.

Change in Paris Humor.
There is a decided change in humor, as it is understood nowadays, from the humor of our grandfathers, says a Paris correspondent of the London Standard. The Gingersherb fair has just opened on the Paris boulevards, and the usual array of booths and amusements of all kinds invites custom. In front of one of these booths a man in clown's dress called an audience to see a peculiar phenomenon, a donkey whose tail he was holding up to be, and vice versa. He got a large audience at a penny apiece, and when they were inside a curtain was drawn and the donkey was shown.

He was a quite a sight, whose tail was tied to a manger, "the place," as the clown duly explained, "where his head ought to be."

Some years ago the audience would have laughed at its own piddling and retired to make room for other victims. This time they tied the clown to the manager to receive the same sort of treatment.

The unfortunate clown, whose sense of humor is half a century late, is now in prison for swindling and may expect a sentence of considerable severity.

Uses of Leisure.
Students who loaf not wisely but too well are going to receive prayerful attention from Dr. Henry Louis Smith, the new president of Washington and Lee university. He proclaims it to be the function of a university to teach future citizens to play happily as well as to work efficiently and study diligently. Gambling, drinking and vice he intends to combat with all the strength there is in him. The wisc use of leisure is perhaps the finest fruit of culture. It is learned naturally. The illustrious, the learned blacksmith, taught him to play in gauges at the forge and in idle moments Abraham Lincoln educated himself largely at the country store counter. Early to rise, early to work, day as in all ages, are embarrassed by moments of freedom and get away from themselves as quickly as possible, lose themselves in the crowd or in drink or other dissipations or in pastimes.

Rather Suggestive.
Rastus was ill and the physician was visiting him. "What you think is de matter wit me, doctah?" he asked. "Oh, nothing much," said the doctor. "Only a slight cold in de throat." "Rastus gwed nervous. "I clare, doctah," he said earnestly. "I ain't been nowhar whar I could ketch dat!" —Ladies' Home Journal.

BEING THE HAPPENINGS OF A NIGHT IN RICHMOND IN THE SPRING OF 1865

THE PLAY BY WILLIAM GILLETTE, BY CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY ILLUSTRATIONS BY EDGAR BERT SMITH

COPYRIGHT 1912 BY DODD, MEAD AND COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Mrs. Varney, wife of a Confederate general, has lost one son and another dying from wounds. She reluctantly gives consent for Wilfred, the youngest, to join the army if his father consents. The federal men, making their last stand, in all efforts to capture Richmond, Edith Varney secures from her mother-in-law a commission for Capt. Thorne, who is then recovering from wounds, to ride on the telegraph at Richmond, Capt. Thorne with Edith as his sole order comes. She declares he must go and that she will see that he is ordered to return. He is strangely agitated and the commission is not given. Thorne decides to escape while Edith leaves. She decides not the commission was prevented by the arrival of Caroline Mitchell, a federal secret service agent, Edith's distant cousin. Mrs. Varney's bitter, carrying a note from a prisoner intended for Thorne. The note reads: "Attack tonight. Plan 3. See Telegraph. Arrived. I suppose Henry is Lewis Dumont of the Federal secret service, and that whether Henry is a prisoner in Libby. Edith refuses to believe and suggests Caroline's name to be faced with the prisoner as a test. Caroline and Wilfred conspire to get Edith to the general asking permission for Wilfred to join the army. The order comes from General Varney for Wilfred to report to the front at once.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

"Are those things in there yet?" he asked peremptorily.

"Yes."

"Where is the key?"

Mrs. Varney left the room and went to the door.

"It is on this side," she said.

"Will you lock it, please?"

The woman softly turned the key in the lock, and returned to the drawing room without a sound. As she did so the noise of the opening of one of the long French windows in the front of the room attracted the attention of both of them. Edith Varney hurried the room nervously and stepped forward. She began breathlessly, in a low, feverishly excited voice.

"Mamma!"

Mrs. Varney hurried toward her and caught her outstretched hand.

"I want to speak to you," whispered the girl.

"You can't wait," said Arrelaford, stepping forward.

"You must," persisted the girl. She turned to her mother again, "I can't do it, I can't! Oh, let me go!"

"But, my dear, what for?"

"You were the one who suggested that..."

"But I was sure then and now..."

"Has he confessed?" asked Mrs. Varney.

"No, no," answered the girl with a glance of fear and apprehension to ward Arrelaford, who stood staring momentarily at her speechless.

"Don't speak so loud," whispered the secret service agent.

"Edith," said her mother nothing, "what is it that has changed you?" She waited for an answer, but none came. The girl's face had been very pale, but it now flushed suddenly with color.

"Dear," said her mother, "you must tell me."

Edith motioned Mr. Arrelaford away. He went with ill-concealed impatience to the far side of the room and waited nervously to give the signal, anxious lest something should miscarry because of this unfortunate unwillingness of the girl to play her part.

"What is it, dear?" whispered her mother.

"Mamma," said Edith, she forced the words out, "he—he—loves me."

"Impossible!" returned Mrs. Varney, controlling her voice so that the other occupant of the room could not hear.

"Yes," faltered the girl, "and I—some one else must do it."

"You don't mean," said Mrs. Varney, "that you return—"

But Mr. Arrelaford's patience had been strained to the breaking point. He did not know what interchange was going on between the two women, but it must be stopped. He came forward resolutely. The girl saw his determination in his face and said, "No, no," she whispered, "not that, not now!"

She shrank away from him as she spoke.

"But, Edith," said Mrs. Varney, "more reason now than ever."

"I don't know what you are talking about," said Mr. Arrelaford, "but we must go on."

"But why—why are you doing this?" asked Edith, pleading desperately.

"Because I please," snapped out the secret service agent, and it was quite

RESPONSIBLE FOR THE SLUM

Society Can Not Ignore Its Share of blame Where the Facts Are Brought to Light of Day.

Children work out their destiny along the lines of environment. If two infants, one born in a slum home and the other in a palace, were exchanged on the day of their birth, each would work out his destiny in accordance with his surroundings. In the palace, the child of the palace would remain on the level of the slum home.

While a noted physician was making these statements before a body of civil and other representatives, learned colleagues, a jury in Chicago learned conclusively that seven children and nineteen teenagers, guilty of murder and convicted years ago, had been released. Their slayers were all slum products who were freed from hanging youth saved their lives from the gallows by a technicality of the law.

Senior citizens cannot afford to be sentimental over a murderer because of his mental or physical infirmities. When the good monks saw the birds, they opened the doors and windows of their building that the little feathered strangers might have shelter.

At the slum, however, crowded with them, thousands remained until sunrise. The next day proved fine and the guests pursued their way toward Italy. This is very pleasant to learn, but it adds one to know that a vast number of less fortunate birds fall to the wayside, and are swept and were found dead in the snow by the tenderhearted

"Here, this way," Mrs. Varney said Arrelaford, taking that lady by the arm and going down to the far end of the floor covered by the long carpet.

The two disappeared, and it was impossible for a soul to see them in the darkness of the night, although they could see clearly enough, even in the dimly lighted drawing room, everything that would happen. Edith stood as if riveted to the floor, her feet still in her hand, when Thorne opened the door which she had closed behind her and entered in his turn the window through which she had come a short time before. He stepped eagerly toward her.

"You are so long," he whispered, "coming for me, that—" He stopped abruptly and looked at her face, "is anything the matter?"

"No."

"You had been away such a long time that I thought—"

"Only a few minutes," said the man passionately. His voice was low and gently modulated, not because he had anything to conceal but because of the softness of the moonlight and the faintly dimly flickering upon the walls of the great room, the look in the girl's eyes, and the feeling in his heart. A few minutes, the girl had said—Ah, it was indeed a few years to him.

"It was a few years to you," returned the girl with a violent effort at brightness, although her heart was torn to pieces with the emotions of the moment, "what a lot of time there is in a few minutes!"

"No," said Thorne, "there is only tonight."

Edith threw out her hand to check what she would fain have heard of Thorne. "You're right," said Thorne, "there is only tonight."

"You overhelm me,"

"I can't help myself. I came here determined not to tell you how I loved you, and for the last half hour I have been telling you nothing else. I could tell you all my life and never finish. Ah, my darling, my darling—there's only tonight and you."

Edith swayed toward him for a moment, completely influenced by his ardor, but then drew back.

"You must," she faltered.

"You must!" she glanced around the room apprehensively. "No, no, not now!"

"You are right," said the man. She dragged herself away from him. He would not retain her against her will, and without a struggle he released her hand, as if she had been hurt.

What I said, Miss Varney, I have forgotten myself, believe me. I came to make a brief call, to say good-bye and—

He turned and walked toward the hall door, after making her a low bow, and it was not without a feeling of joy that she noticed that he walked unsteadily, blindly.

"Oh, Captain Thorne," she said, just as he reached the door. "I—"

"Before you go I want to ask your advice about something."

"My advice?"

"Yes, it seems to be a military matter, and—"

"What is it?" asked Thorne, turning back.

"What do you think this means?"

"I'll tell him."

"She turned toward the window."

"Wait," said Arrelaford, "one thing more. I want him to have this paper. He has made Edith the commission which has been taken from Jonas earlier in the evening."

"What am I to do with this?" asked the girl, taking it.

"Give it to him, and tell him where it came from. Tell him old Jonas got it from a prisoner at Libby prison and brought it to you."

"But why am I to do this?" asked the girl.

"Why not? If he is innocent what's the harm? If not, if he is in the plot and we can't catch him otherwise, the message on the paper will send him to the telegraph office tonight, and that's where we want him."

"But I never promised that," said the girl with obvious reluctance to do anything not only that might tend to harm the suspected, but that might work to the furtherance of Arrelaford's designs.

"Do you still believe him innocent?" sneered the man.

Edith lifted her head and for the first time she looked Arrelaford full in the face.

"I still believe him innocent," answered the girl slowly and with deliberate emphasis.

"Then why are you afraid to give him the paper?" asked Arrelaford, directly with cunning and craftiness.

The girl, thus entrapped, clasped the paper to her breast, and turned toward the window. Her mind was made up, but it was not necessary for her to call it.

"No," she made, caught the noise of his footfall on the porch. She turned her head and spoke to the other two who were in the room.

"Captain Thorne is coming, unless you want to be seen, you had better go."

"Prisoner, Sir, Break Out of Libby," said the girl, handing him the folded dispatch.

She had intended to look him full in the face as he took it, but at the last moment her courage failed her. She looked away and did not see the instant but quickly mastered start of surprise. She was not conscious that Thorne had possessed himself of the document.

"What is it?" asked Thorne, holding it in his hand.

"That is what I want you to tell me," said the girl.

"Oh, don't you know?" said Thorne, now entirely master of himself.

"No," answered the girl, but there was something in her voice which now fully aroused the suspicions of the man.

"It appears to be a note from some youth, its duty, in self-preservatism, is to inflict punishment. A part of this self-preservatism duty, however, is to prevent the growth of murderers. In so far as society allows slums to exist and other degrading influences to be fostered, it is not without responsibility for the criminal."

Strange Guests at St. Bernard.

An enormous flock of swallows was overtaken by a heavy snowstorm near the famous Hospice of St. Bernard in the Alps last winter. When the good monks saw the birds, they opened the doors and windows of their building that the little feathered strangers might have shelter.

At the slum, however, crowded with them, thousands remained until sunrise. The next day proved fine and the guests pursued their way toward Italy. This is very pleasant to learn, but it adds one to know that a vast number of less fortunate birds fall to the wayside, and are swept and were found dead in the snow by the tenderhearted

There he was, sitting on the stairs, and with a look of awe, looking over at the secret service agent.

"What are you going to do?" asked Edith breathlessly.

"I don't know," said Thorne, "I'm a prisoner. I'm in the hands of the secret service agent."

"You're a prisoner?"

"Yes, I am. I'm in the hands of the secret service agent."

"What are you going to do?"

"I don't know. I'm a prisoner. I'm in the hands of the secret service agent."

There he was, sitting on the stairs, and with a look of awe, looking over at the secret service agent.

ITCHING TERRIBLE ON LIMB

It F. D. No. 3, Clarkfield, Minn.—"My limbs were of long standing, I started with some small red and yellow spots about the size of a pin head on my leg and every morning there was a dry scale on top covering the affected part and when those scales were falling off the itching was more than I could stand at times. The first year I did not mind it so much as it was only itching very badly at times, but the second year it advanced all around my leg and the itching was terrible. I had to be very careful not to have my clothing around the affected part very loose. At night time I often happened to scratch the sore in my leg. This I had to stand up, get out of bed and walk the floor till the spell was over."

"I bought lots of salves and tried many different kinds of medicine but without any success. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a fifty-cent box of Cuticura Ointment and when I had used them I was nearly over the itching. But I kept on with the Cuticura Soap for six weeks and the cure was complete." (Signed) S. O. Gordon, Nov. 29, 1912.

Love and an Agreement.

"Love and an agreement," said the lady, looking at the tinders. "I do not understand what you see in me that you love so much."

"That's what everybody says," surged the ingenious maiden.

Then the silence became so deep that you could hear the stars twinkling.

Just as Easy!

Preserving is now a pleasure—thanks to Parowax! For fruits, vegetable, jellies, catsup and chow-chow, indefinitely retain their natural flavor. And their sealing is as simple as can be.

Dip the tops of jars and catsup bottles in melted Parowax. Or pour this pure, hot wax directly on top of contents of each jelly glass. Result—perfect airtight, mould-proof seal. It is even simpler than tin. Not even paper covers need be used.

is pure, refined paraffine—tasteless and odorless. It has many valued household uses. In the laundry, for instance, it is invaluable. It softens greasy stains and whitens clothes. A bit of Parowax in the wash boiler, or steam and clothes in the ironing, Parowax cannot injure the most delicate fabrics. It is the most delicious of odorless preservatives. Responsible for the Slum

Children work out their destiny along the lines of environment. If two infants, one born in a slum home and the other in a palace, were exchanged on the day of their birth, each would work out his destiny in accordance with his surroundings. In the palace, the child of the palace would remain on the level of the slum home.
