Daylight In The Subway

The New York Subway formerly dark and dreary, illuminated by Carbon lamps is now brilliantly lighted by National Mazda Lamps. The new Mazda Lamp stands the jar of the hundreds of trains passing daily; the subway is as light as day; the lighting costs were reduced two-thirds, a saving of thousands of dollars annually.

Mazda Lamps make brilliant lighting possible at small cost.

BOHEMIANS PLAN TO SHOW CHICAGO CULTURE OF RACE

The second great Bohemian contribution to the composite character of the new American is a certain tenderness of soul, which is characteristic of all the Slavic races. It is a softness of spirit which does not interfere with determination and strength of will and has nothing of weakness about it. Thus the Bohemian people, while always ready to fight desperately in self-defense, have never waged a war of conquest. They are inclined to be rather boastful of the fact that Bohemian names rarely appear on the rolls of prisoners at the bridewell or the penitentiary. And never yet has a member of the Bohemian colony been hanged for murder—though it is more than fifty years since the first immigrant came to Chicago.

In politics the Bohemians have been and are prominent. More than 50 per cent of the men are naturalized and take an active interest in political work. Charles J. Vopicka, the brewer whose confirmation as minister from the United States to the Balkan kingdoms was so bitterly opposed by the organized forces of prohibition, is a Chicago Bohemian, who is widely known for the devotion and self-sacrifice with which he gives himself to the service of the community.

Most of the traits of the traditional good citizen seems to be possessed by the Bohemian. He supports eight Roman Catholic and more than a dozen Protestant churches, four daily newspapers published in the Bohemian language, and ten other periodicals, a national theater where performances are given by Bohemian actors in their native language, a splendid system of athletic training, with more than 5,000 active and expert "sokols" in the ranks; a handsome club, and about 600 fraternal and insurance orders.

One of the interesting institutions in the colony is a series of Saturday and Sunday schools, at which pupils who attend the public schools are taught the Bohemian language and the history of their ancient fatherland.

But the Bohemians of Chicago wait the coming of 1915. In that year, when the great Mucha paintings are exhibited, when, perhaps, Dvorak, the great Bohemian composer, will conduct his symphony "From the New World," the Bohemian violinist, Kubelik, play, and the Bohemian artists, Destinn and Slezak, sing, Chicago will have a chance to see for itself how great may be the contribution of the Bohemian people to the beauty and splendor of the new city.

A SANE HALLOWE'EN

At a special meeting of the Village Dads held Saturday evening, a petition was handed in by the business men asking them to see to it that their property will not be destroyed on next Friday night as it has been in past years.

In accordance with the petition any person male or female caught or known to mark windows, remove or injure property shall be arrested and dealt with in a manner that will be a warning to others. In order to see that the above is enforced a sufficient number of special police will be on duty.

There is no reason on earth why our business men should be obliged to leave their work on the morning of the 1st of November to clean their windows, or hunt all over town for their property that had been removed during the night.

Last year it cost the tax payers of this village over sixty dollar for the damage done at the school house alone, and the amount of stuff piled in the middle of the street leading to the depot was a disgrace to the village.

Fun is fun all right, but it can be carried too far, and that has been the trouble here for quite a number of years. The Council and business men say it must be stopped.

"A word to the wise is sufficient."

THE SOUTHLAND SEXTETTE.

The time is drawing near when the music lovers of this place will have another opportunity to hear the Old Southland Sextette in concert. They have been billed to appear here next Monday evening Oct. 27th and will undoubtedly appear before a large audience.

Their appearance here last year was a marked success in more ways than one. They made a very favorable impression and this year will undoubtedly see a repetition of last year's success.

Some changes have been made in the personnel of the company but they have only added to its strength. Mr. Overstreet, who managed the company last season will be here again and will assist in his usual way.

If you are of a forgetful nature, just place a large pencil mark around the date Oct. 27th on your calendar and when Monday evening comes take the wife and kiddies to hear these talented artists.

Tickets will be on sale at the Drug Store.

HENRIETTE.

Frank Bragg closed a deal last week whereby he becomes owner of the Parson 120 acre farm south of town.

O. E. Lid sold his farm, some ten days ago, and will move with his family to North Dakota in the early spring.

On account of the cold weather the farmers are bringing in their potatoes but Jack Frost still finds some tubers in the ground in this vicinity.

Peter Pearson, the old reliable clerk at the Ed. Peterson store, is building a house on his farm east of town and will move into the same in the near future.

PINE COUNTY PIONEER

ED. C. GOTTRY, Editor and Prop

Entered in the Postoffice at Pine City as Second Class Matter

Pine City, Minnesota, Oct. 24 '13

Twenty Five Years Ago.

The following items are taken from the files of the Pioneer printed 25 years ago.

Mrs. H. Brande went up to Sandstone Monday morning.

Miss May Murphy went down to St. Paul on Tuesday on a visit of a day or two.

The dedication services of the M. E. church will be held at two o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

The Pine City Cornet Band has been engaged to furnish music for a Democratic blow-out at Sandstone to be held in the same village.

A party of friends of Peter Erickson, direct from Sweden, arrived in town on Monday and will make this county their permanent home.

Miss Gertie, daughter of E. Edgerton, of Rock Creek came up with Miss Carrie Jenkins last Friday and spent Sunday in the village.

Fred Wright went down to St. Paul on business the first of the week. He didn't say whether or not he went down to look for the man who stole his fence wire.

Peter Eiten has a new house well under way out on his farm a couple of miles from town on the Rock Creek road. This begins to look as though Peter was intending to take into himself a better half.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hodge returned from their visit to New Hampshire, which has covered over the past month or six weeks, on the early train Monday morning and report having had a good time. We are pleased to see Fred in his old seat at the desk in the County Auditor's office.

Mike McGann, who for the past summer has been at work in St. Paul, as foreman for a man engaged in moving buildings was in town the latter part of last week and the first of this visiting with his folks and also calling on his numerous friends in this vicinity. Mike has spent the past three summers in St. Paul and expects to remain there this winter. He has several good positions in view, and thinks he can do better there than he can up this way.

Exra Ritee was quite badly injured last Saturday morning while drawing feed to the barn. He had on a load too high to allow his body to pass under the beam over the door, but did not notice it in time to either get down or stop his team, and consequently he was quite badly bruised by being jammed between the beam and the load. Dr. Paquin was called in to attend him but on examination it was found that no bones were broken, and aside from serious shaking up and a few bruises, he was not injured.

Dr. Collins of Minneapolis, accompanied by T. F. Lally of the firm of Lally Bros., wholesale dealers in wines, liquors and cigars, of the same city, and Mike Ring and Joe Kronenburg, two of Sandstone's prosperous business men, spent a couple of days in the village the first of the week hunting pheasants and succeeded in bagging quite a number of birds. The doctor is the gentleman who is interested in the Hinkley hospital scheme of which we spoke in our last issue and the more he sees of this country the better he likes it. His removal to this section in the near future is all together probable.

HINKLEY.

John Brennan of Sandstone, was in town Monday on business.

Dan McLaren is now working on another slight improvement for his patent sled.

Dr. Thos. Zeien, of Rush City, was in town again on professional business Wednesday.

M. C. Dean went down to Minneapolis the first of the week and spent several days on business.

Miss Katie Hurley, of North Branch, was in town for a few days the first of the week on a visit with friends and relatives.

Thos. Burke is reported as improving though slowly. Tommie has been very sick and his friends are all pleased at his recovery.

J. O. Coffin has again been seen at his old position in the depot this week, he having gone in to help fill up the crew during Tommy Burke's illness.

Mr. Hawley has been making improvements in his house on the west side of the track, by finishing up the interior and making other improvements.

Mrs. Geo. W. Booth was called to Stillwater last Saturday to attend the funeral of her cousin, Mrs. Douglas Greeley. She returned on Thursday morning's train.

Comfortably fixed for life

YOU can put it down as a maxim that no one can go ahead very fast in this world unless he looks ahead. Foresight--vision--planning for the future--are essentials of success.

To supply the "daily bread" is only a small part of a man's duty toward his family. No matter how much you make or spend, you cannot feel "comfortably fixed" until the future has been provided for.

This principle applies with especial force to your home and the things you put into it. A poorly built house, or cheap, shoddy furniture, is a poor investment at any price. The man who looks ahead pays the price to secure things of lasting worth, and realizes that the best is not only the cheapest in the end, but the only economical thing to buy.

Estate Stoves & Ranges cost a little more to buy than some other stoves, but they last longer and cost less to support. It is no uncommon thing, in fact, to hear of an Estate Stove that has been handed down from mother to daughter through three generations, still giving the best of service and satisfaction. That's how this stove becomes in truth an "Estate"--how it earns its right to the title--"The Stove that Stays in the Family."

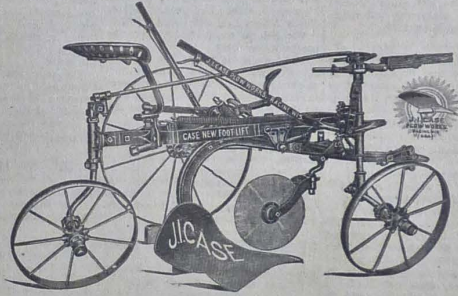

Get an Estate Heating Stove into your parlor, and an Estate Range into your kitchen, and you will be "comfortably fixed for life" as far as these two important factors are concerned. The full line of Estate Stoves and Ranges awaits your inspection here.

J. I. CASE New Foot Lift Sulky and Gang Plows

THE J. I. Case New Foot Lift Sulky and Two and Three-bottom gangs are companion plows, the principle of construction and adjustment of each being identical. The gangs are built heavier in proportion to stand the strain to which they are subjected.

EVEN DEPTH OF FURROW--One of the main things to be considered in judging a job of plowing is the evenness of the depth of the furrow. It not only adds to the good appearance of the job, but is important from the crop production standpoint. Shallow plowing in one place and deep in another is not conducive to even crops. With a plow beam having considerable play, it is obvious that good results could not be secured in this respect. To meet this, on J. I. Case plows the Spring Pressure Lock was devised. As shown by the cut, this spring is strong enough to lock the plow in the ground, to force it into a depression, and to rebound when a raised place is struck, so that one depth is always maintained. This is an exclusive feature covered by patent.

SHARES SAVED--In plowing, conditions are often met where the best of shares will be broken unless some mechanical contrivance on the plow serves as a buffer. The rebound in the Spring Pressure Lock is the buffer on J. I. Case plows. If a rock or root is struck, the plow jumps enough to go over the obstruction or if caught, it bounces enough to save the share from breaking. In case the point passes over, then the spring forces the plow into the ground immediately, without leaving a rough, unplowed spot.

Many a Pine City Reader Will be Interested.

When people read about the cures made by a medicine endorsed from far away, it is surprising that they wonder if the statements are true? But when they read of cases right here at home, positive proof is within their reach, for close investigation is an easy matter. Read Pine City endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. Isaac Weststrom, shoe maker, of Pine City, Minn., says: "I got kidney and bladder complaint from too much work and bending over at my trade. My kidneys acted badly and I had severe pains when passing the kidney secretions. The aches and pains in my loins and hips were awful and I got languid and weak. The trouble laid me up for two weeks and I couldn't work at all. I was in constant misery. I used Doan's Kidney Pills a few weeks ago and they relieved me. I now feel better in every way."

SECRET SECRET BEING THE HAPPENINGS OF A NIGHT IN RICHMOND IN THE SPRING OF 1865

THE PLAY BY WILLIAM GILLETTE; BY CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY ILLUSTRATIONS BY EDGAR BERT SMITH

Copyright 1912 by Dodd, Mead and Company

SYNOPSIS. Mrs. Varney, wife of a Confederate soldier, has just one son and another is dying from wounds. She reluctantly gives her son to the army for his father's consent. He joins the 10th Maine and is killed at Antietam. His father, Captain Thorne, is a member of the 10th Maine and is killed at Antietam.

surprised of the two—Thorne at seeing Wilfred, or Wilfred at Thorne's appearance. The latter's face was pale, his breath was coming rapidly, he was bareheaded. His brow was covered with sweat, and he had the hunted, desperate look of a man at the very end of his resources.

"Wait a moment!" gasped out Thorne, "I will go with you." "As he spoke he shook himself loose from the weak grasp of the wounded young man and started down the road.

"All right, all right," said Thorne quietly, "your prisoner, anything you like." "I'll take it," he drew his revolver from his pocket and pushed it into the boy's hand; "take this, shoot me the life out of me, if you wish, but give me a chance to see my brother first."

"Your brother?" "Yes. He was shot here tonight. I want one look at his face; that's all!" "Where is he?" "Maybe they put him in the room across the hall yonder."

"What would he be doing there?" asked Wilfred, not yet apprehending the situation from Thorne's remarks. "Nothing," said the other bitterly; "I guess he is dead."

CHAPTER XVIII. Captain Thorne Justifies Himself. After the two women had left him, Wilfred stood motionless for a moment, and then sat wearily down on the floor.

Edith looked at his face, shook her head a little, and moved away from him toward the table. Thorne threw up his hands in a gesture of despair, and turned toward the window.

for one moment that I am ashamed of it, no, not of my moment." "The sound of heavy feet drew near to the room, and he counted each other, the man erect, and the woman, too. A strange pain was in her heart. At least there was a man, but before she could say a word another man had passed between the door and the room filled with soldiers.

"There's your man, sergeant," said Wilfred, "I ought to owe to you." "You are my prisoner," said the sergeant.

His command was reinforced by a number of others, including several men and his squad and some of the men of the Provost Guard, who had been chasing Thorne through the streets. At this juncture, Arrelford, panting and breathless, also joined the company in the drawing-room. He came in rapidly, thrusting aside those in his way.

"Sergeant is he?" he cried. "Ah!" he exclaimed triumphantly, as his eyes fell upon Thorne, standing quietly, surrounded by the soldiers. "We've got him, have we?" "Yes, sergeant, here, took him, sir," said the sergeant.

"So," returned Arrelford to his prisoner, "run down at last. Now, you will show me what it costs to play your little game with our government telegraph lines."

But Thorne did not turn his head, although he spoke almost in his ear. He looked straight at Edith Varney, and she returned his glance.

"Don't waste any time, sergeant," said Arrelford, "shoot him full of lead down the street and shoot him full of lead. Out with him."

"Very well, sir," said the sergeant. But Wilfred interposed. He came forward, "Thorne's revolver still in his hand."

"No," he said decisively; "whatever he is, whatever he has done, he has the right to a trial."

"The head of the secret service department said to me if I found him, to shoot him at sight," snarled Arrelford.

"I don't care what General Tarleton said. I captured this man; he's in this house, and he is not going out unless he is treated fairly."

"Well, let him have a trial. We'll give him a drumhead court-martial, but it will be the quickest ever held on earth. Stack your muskets here, sergeant, and let me have the word."

"Fall in here," cried the sergeant, at which the men quickly took their places. Attention! Stack arms! Two of you take the muskets to the hall, and we had a vacant room, ma'am."

"Across the hall," said Mrs. Varney, "where the ladies were sewing this afternoon." "Very good," said the sergeant. "Left face! Forward, march!"

Arrelford and Wilfred followed the soldiers. "I am the chief witness," said the former.

"I will see that he gets fair play," remarked the latter, as they marched down the hall.

"I must go to Howard," said Mrs. Varney; "this excitement is killing him; I am afraid he will hardly survive the night. Caroline is with him now."

"Very well, mother," said Edith, going slowly up the new deserted stair and standing in the doorway, looking out into the night, thinking her strange, appalling thoughts. They would convict him, shoot him, there was no hope. Who had he said? He was not ashamed of his work. It was the highest duty and involved the highest and noblest sacrifice, because it would be the greatest demand; and they would not let him in a mad dog.

"Oh, God!" she whispered; "if some bullet would only find my heart as well."

MRS. MANGES ESCAPES OPERATION

How She Was Saved From Surgeon's Knife by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mogador, Ohio.—"The first two years was married I suffered so much from female troubles and bearing down pains that I could not stand on my feet long enough today to work. The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation, but my husband wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first. I took three bottles and it made me well and strong and I avoided a dreadful operation. I now have two fine healthy children. I can do any too much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." Mrs. L. MANGES, R. F. D. 10, Mogador, Ohio.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

AROSE TO THE EMERGENCY

How Engineer Undergo Worthy of His Position When the Occasion Came to Try Him.

The engineer of a Chicago suburban train showed the other day that a cool and experienced head is equal to the most emergency. A side rod had broken, and with every revolution of the wheels, was demolishing the cab and the mechanism by which the engine is operated. He was able to shut off the power, but the airbrake control had been destroyed, and the train went dashing on. Having done all that mortal could do with the apparatus that was left intact, he left the car, climbed over the coal in the tender and swung down on the platform of the first car. There, reaching for the air cord, he brought the train to a stop in a few hundred feet. If he had whistled for brakes the train crew might not have responded in as little time as it took him to do the thing himself.

Work Tunnel RMS Disease

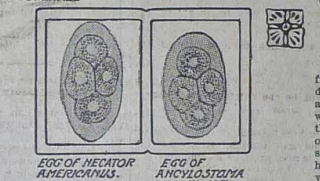

THE so-called ancylostomiasis, the commonest of all tropical diseases, is more debilitating and more fatal and more widely spread than any other tropical disease, with the possible exception of malaria. The trouble is brought about by the presence in large numbers of certain round worm, ancylostoma duodenale, in the human alimentary canal. According to Castellan and Chalmers, the disease is believed to have been known to the ancient Egyptians under the term "helti," which is mentioned in the Ebers papyrus, written some one thousand five hundred and fifty years B. C. In the papyrus the disease was called AAA, and certain remedies were suggested. Another ancient reference occurs in the Sanskrit Charita Samhita, where it is recorded that the trouble was due to swallowing clay. But whatever the ancients knew about the ancylostoma soon disappeared from the stock of common knowledge, and it was only in 1838 that Dublin rediscovered the worm which is responsible for such widespread distress. Some years later Grisebald associated the presence of the worm with profound anaemia in Egypt. Later on it was discovered to be the cause of tropical anaemia in Brazil. But it was not till the boring of the St. Gothard tunnel in the early eighties that the disease attracted general attention among the medical men of Europe. The Italian excavators suffered so much from this parasite that increasing interest was taken in it, and now, for the first time in modern medical history, it was recognized as causing a dangerous and not infrequently a fatal disease.

Our knowledge of the geographical distribution of the worm has within the last 25 years increased amazingly, and it has at the present time been found in so many countries that one may almost state that ancylostoma or an allied genus is generally endemic (if one may apply this word to a worm) all over the globe between the parallels 51 degrees 31 minutes north and 49 degrees south. In Cayton, the Straits Settlements, Java, China, Japan, the Philippines, the former parts of South America and the West Indies, and in the warmer parts of Europe and North America. In 1902 ancylostoma was discovered in the mines of Cornwall, England, probably introduced by the return of miners from the Transvaal or other sub-tropical districts, and it has caused infinite harm in the coal mines of central Europe, especially in Westphalia. One established in the larval state in the heat and the moisture of a mine it is very difficult to eradicate.

As is usual with parasitic worms, the male is comparatively insignificant. Its shape and size compared with the female. There seem to be about three times as many of the latter as of the former, and whereas the male measures from six to eleven millimeters in length, the female measures from seven to ten millimeters. Like all creatures that live in the dark, these little creatures are without pigment and are grayish white, but sometimes they are stained red with the blood they absorb from their host. Ancylostoma cannot shut its mouth; it is perpetually open. Inside it is provided with certain strongly recurved hooks. Into this mouth and, indeed, quite a long way into the gullet is dragged a portion of the soft tissue of the host, and it is on the cells covering this that the worm lives. Occasionally a blood-vessel is ruptured, and then a pinkish tinge is given to the blood; and according to Looss, the blood parasitic worm; but according to Looss, the blood corpuscles are not digested. It is believed that from time to time the worm shifts its position, and that the abandoned bite continues to bleed, and certainly there are some large gashes that exist into the mouth of the worm like those that exist in the pharynx of the leech which may very well secrete some anti-coagulating secretion.

A female ancylostoma produces a never-ending stream of eggs, oval, transparent, delicate-looking structures which do not develop very far until they have passed away from the body of their host. Should, however, they reach a warm, moist spot, in a mine or tunnel, or on the ground, the development is so rapid that in one or two days a young larva is hatched, and whatever organic matter it happens to devour within a week it trebles its size, and even then it is very minute. By the end of its first seven days of free existence the embryo has twice cast its skin, and after its second moult it undergoes a "rest-cure," passing a stage comparable with the chrysalis in insects, moving, if it can, it will live for weeks and damp earth. The question now arises: How do these larvae find their way into the alimentary canal of man? Till a few years ago it was always believed that the transferrance was direct, either by means of the drinking infected water, or by means of the persisted in the belief that the worm had been introduced into the presence stimulates human beings to eat clay and earth. But there is another route, and one of the romances of science must now be explained. Towards the end of the last century, when cholera was prevalent in Alexandria, Doctor Looss, the distinguished parasitologist, was working in the local laboratory at the larva of ancylostoma. In transferring some of the water containing larvae from one watch-glass to another by means of a pipette he accidentally split a drop on to the back of his hand. He did not wait to wipe it off, but after a time he noticed that the place where the drop had fallen was intensely irritable and had become reddened and inflamed. He then made further experiment; placing a drop of the fluid swarming with larvae on the back of his hand he allowed it partially to dry up. The burning and the reddening of the skin began over again, and a little later when he removed what was left of the fluid very few of the larvae were to be found. The great majority of them had disappeared. These little tritres gave Doctor Looss "furiously to think," as the French say, and he then repaired to the hospital, where he found a boy whose leg was about to be removed. He dropped a little of the fluid full of ancylostoma larvae on the leg, and after the leg was cut off the area in question was removed and cut into sections. When these sections were examined through the microscope the little ancylostoma larvae were seen forcing their way down into the body through the skin, especially traveling by the hair follicles, and, to a lesser extent, through the sweat glands into the deeper layers of the skin. It was, of course, impossible to pursue this work with the human ancylostoma, and Doctor Looss had to carry on his work with another species. The larvae of A. caninum were traced into the blood vessels and lymphatics of the dog. Swept along in the blood stream, they easily reach the lungs. Once arrived in the lungs the larvae have no difficulty in traversing the soft pulmonary tissue and making their way into the cavity of the respiratory organs. Hence they travel along the bronchial tubes, and so to the windpipe and into the larynx and up almost into the mouth, and here they turn back into the oesophagus and so down into the stomach and intestine. The whole of this remarkable journey takes from seven to ten days. They then shed the skin of their second moult, and later, when they reach the alimentary canal, they undergo a third and fourth ecdysis or moult. In eight days they become capable of reproduction, and in a very few more days the eggs are then passing away from the body of the host. The whole cycle of their life-history has taken, under favorable circumstances, from a month to six weeks; under unfavorable circumstances it can be almost indefinitely prolonged. The truth of this very remarkable and, until Doctor Looss' investigations, quite unheard-of life-history is now accepted, Doctor Looss, however, thinks that in many cases the ancylostoma larvae reach the alimentary canal with the blood stream, and directly penetrate its walls without passing through the lungs. Since the middle of the seventeenth century a fatal disease has been known to exist in the warmer parts of America. In 1848 Pisto, in his "Historia Medica Brasiliensis," gives an account of a disease which he calls "Omphalos," and from that time forward numerous writers have described the symptoms of this disease without appreciating or understanding its cause. As we have mentioned, Dublin undoubtedly deserves the credit of first associating Miners' Anaemia or Tunnal disease with the presence of a parasitic worm. One of the many troubles which has, for more years than one cares to recall, vexed the economist of the southern part of the United States is the existence of a large population degraded white people, sometimes referred to by the black citizens as "Poor man whites" or "Poor white trash." About the beginning of the present century Professor Sillies of Washington was able to show that the deplorable condition of this degenerate people was due not so much to original sin as to the fact that they were infested by a worm which was thought to be identical with the Ancylostoma duodenale we have described above. But ten years ago Sillies found out that the worm, although its effects were identical with the Ancylostoma, was of a different species and even its name was different. He then named it Necator americanus. It was for some years thought that this N. americanus was peculiar to America, and the unfortunates labeled "N. americanus" by the schoolmasters and college presidents looked forward to a virus weakened under cultivation until inoculation would confer immunity to leishness on schoolboys and college students. A little later some miners from the Seneca Forest, who were brought by some enterprising impresario for exhibition in music-halls, passed down the Nile, and, on reaching Cairo, were inspected by Looss, who discovered in them Necator americanus. Probably this was introduced some centuries ago into America from Africa with the slaves, and is part of the debt the New World has had to pay for the institution of slavery. Since then Leiper has shown that Necator americanus is almost as widely distributed in the Old World as in the New. There are many details about the tunnel worm which are ill adapted for newspaper discussion; but one may at least point out that, with proper provision, it may be controlled. To a great extent it is controlled in the Panama canal region by the time of writing. The remaining 18 1/2 per cent. ceased to return, and only 0.2 per cent. died. This admirable work was effected without any great cost. The triumph of the Americans in making the "Canal zone" a health resort is summed up by Mr. James Bryce, late British ambassador at Washington, in these words: "Its success in escaping all charges of partiality or corruption, as well as in producing efficiency in the work and contentment among the workers, has indeed been such as to make some persons draw from it an argument in favor of state control of all great enterprises. To the unbiased observer it is rather an instance of the efficiency obtainable by vesting full administrative control in men whose uprightness and capacity have already been proved beyond question, who have not risen by political methods, and who have nothing to gain by any misuse of their powers. So far as any political moral can be drawn from the case, the moral recommends not democratic collectivism but military autocracy."

Wagons and IHC Wagons
The farmer who, in need of a wagon, blindly makes a bee line for the first new wagon or dealer in sight may get a good wagon. If chance steers him to an IHC dealer, well and good. That is his good fortune. If not, he will probably be in the wagon market again years before he should be. But the economical farmer will study and compare different makes; find out in advance which wagon will give him best service, and consider such questions as company standing and reputation. When he has finished he will buy an IHC wagon.

Weber New Bettendorf Columbus Steel King
Here are only two of the many features that contribute to the making of IHC wagon reputation. 1—Air-drying of lumber. Every stick of wood used—hickory and oak for wheels and axles, bay poplar for box sides, long leaf yellow pine for bottoms—lies drying in open sheds from two to three years, saving all its resinous saps, toughening, seasoning, gaining elasticity, as only air-dried lumber does. Kiln-drying quickly evaporates the sap, leaves the wood brittle, and weak—ruins it, in short. 2—Thorough inspections. Every IHC wagon, passes many rigid inspections by experts. Seldom does any flaw in material, or defect in shaping, ironing, and assembling get by without detection. When ready it must come up to IHC standards. Weber and Columbus wagons have wood gears; New Bettendorf and Steel King have steel gears. Look the line over at the local dealer's. He has catalogues, or, write the International Harvester Company of America (Incorporated) Minneapolis, Minn.

Thirty Day Free Trial Offer

Yes I mean exactly what I say. Every DIABOLD dealer is instructed to sell you a machine on this basis, that is, if after you have had a machine 30 days you are not thoroughly satisfied with your purchase in every particular, you may return the machine to him and he will gladly refund your money. If You do Not Find That There is no Separator on the Market That skins closer (milk may be hot or cold), That is so easy to turn at same capacity, That is made of better material in any detail, That shows more perfect workmanship That is easier to clean, That is more convenient to handle, That the cost of repairs is less, That gives you the quality at our price, Return the machine to him and he has our instructions to refund your money to you.

If we did not believe in our machines, if we did not absolutely know that we were offering you a proposition that never before was equalled in a cream separator, we could not afford to make this proposition.
