Drank Car-bolic Acid

Pine City Man Takes His Life While Under Influence of Liqueur

Frank Voita committed suicide just before 9 o'clock Tuesday, on his farm about 4 1/2 miles east of town, by drinking car-bolic acid.

He had been to town early in the day and become intoxicated. Livayman Greenly had taken him home shortly after 11 o'clock and barely arrived in town before the call was received for the doctor.

Frank was a single man, slightly over 35 years of age. He was building a house on his place at this time.

The funeral will be held from the home of his parents in town at 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

Presidential Election Very Close

Election day dawned clear and warm all over the county. The clouds that came up later dispelled the genial warmth from the sun but, at that, the day was a cracking good one over a center county, giving every body a chance to get out and vote.

Especially in the southern and northern parts of the county, special interest seemed to center about the legislative contest between Cunningham and Larson but while this matter was not lost sight of, it was topped in public conversation by state and national affairs.

The result in the presidential contest is in doubt up to the hour of going to press, with several states in doubt. Minnesota, however will do for Hughes by about 1500.

Frank B. Kellogg is elected senator from this state and Theo. D. Schall congressman from this district. James H. Quinn is elected chief of the supreme court over Wm. B. Anderson, Governor Burnett and the whole Republican ticket of state officers elected.

Representative Adolph S. Larson is re-elected over George H. Cunningham by about 213 votes after a warm contest.

A. W. Gunn is re-elected clerk of court by a wide margin as is also Judge of Probate Wilcox.

Commissioner Derer was re-elected by the county commissioners was defeated by Jos. Zimmerman of Willow River, 462 to 514. Commissioner Johnson was re-elected without opposition.

To the Business Men of Pine City

The Pine Co. Poultry Ass'n have decided to hold their annual show in Pine City, Dec. 12 to 15, 1916.

The officers in charge of this show will do a lot of work to make it a success and will reap no financial benefit. Pine City will get a financial benefit—just in the proportion two which they contribute in making it a success.

The poultry industry in Pine City is second to nothing, unless it be dairy industry, and a very close second to that. If the people of Pine City will "boost" for this show, we can increase the production of wealth from this source from $10,000 to $25,000 in the next 5 years—is it worth while?

At Rush City, last winter, the merchants, clerks, stenographers and everyone was boasting of their Poultry Show. Rush City has ten times the interest in poultry that Pine City has. They had 600 birds and we had 200 last year.

Three years ago when the Show was held in Pine City there was only one business man in Pine City but spoke a word of praise for it—a good many of them "knocked."

Pine City has another opportunity—improve it and you lose out.

G. B. Washburn, Pres. of Ass'n.

Askov Wants the Bright Light

There has been some agitation for street lights in Askov and last night a meeting was held in town hall and the project discussed. Carl Miller, Martin Swenson and J. J. Mank were selected as a committee to go before the town board and ask them to furnish the light and wire the light, a thing which would cost nearly—Askov Courier.

Chicago Gets in Good Roads List

There is no longer any doubt of the completion of the Duluth Trail

The Poker has heard Manager Rossmeyer's charges at the Family theater criticised a little and, in this connection, wish to call attention to the fact that his charges for "War's Women", last Friday, for instance were 20c and 10c while the charges at Sandstone were 35c and 20c. It strikes us that prices at the Family theater are pretty low.

School Notes

Last Monday the "Ironmen and Grays" held their monthly meeting. After the minutes of the preceding meeting were read several topics were discussed. It was decided that each one should buy an arm band and that the class should purchase one for the banner or pennant. Undoubtedly they will have a boys basket ball team and also a girl's team providing the faculty do not interfere.

The manual training boys under the supervision of Mr. Schimmel are working hard on the gymnasium floor so that it will be completed in time to give the basket ball boys some practice before the first game.

This game is to be played with Forest Lake, Nov. 24 at that place. It is not a scheduled game but promises to be interesting.

The second number of the 14 course was held at the school house on Friday evening. All those who attended report it well worth the price. There are four more numbers. Don't fail to attend these, for all the money goes for the library fund.

Due to the fact that the teachers wished to attend the M. E. A. at the Twin cities school was suspended Thursday and Friday of last week. Neither was there any school on election day.

The Soils class was out taking samples of soil last week. Mr. Ayers is collecting the different kinds of grain raised this year to send to the University.

A party, consisting mostly of students, was held at the K. P. hall Saturday evening, given in honor of Miss Elkins, a former student of our high school.

The present enrolment of the High School is 104. This is more than it ever has before. (C)

Speedy and Easy Riding

There's little comfort in most low priced cars. You can't use their speeds. They jostle you—they ride roughly—they don't hold the road.

The $635 Overland is different. It is not only the speediest of low priced cars—

But you can use the full speed of its powerful motor when you need it.

It has long 42-inch, easy riding, shock absorbing cantilever rear springs. In addition the 75 B Overland is a longer car—104-inch wheelbase. And it has 4-inch tires.

Its smoothness and ease of riding at any speed would do justice to a much larger and heavier car.

Come in and let us demonstrate. That's the best kind of proof.

Uncle Sam: Detective

By WILLIAM A. THERTON DU PUY
Putting Up the Master Bluff

True stories of the Great Federal Detective Agency, the Bureau of Information, U. S. Dept. of Justice.

Did you ever go among reporters and pretend to be a more important personage than you really are? Yes? So have I. There are many of you who habitually take a taxi when you go to a strange city on a modest piece of business. Yet at home we would walk six blocks to save a nickel in fare. I would not acknowledge to the hotel clerk, nor would you, that an inside room, price one dollar, is what I want. I would like to ask for when I say that three-fifty will be about right. And we tip the waiter, you and I, although we know that he makes twice the money we do, and he takes the laborer's clerk set of a shirt for three dollars when we should pay one, and the barber halloo us into taking a shampoo when we are in a perfectly good bar of soap at home and not in a hotel.

For, to ourselves, upon occasion, we like to be the dream people, to see ourselves at the great and dominant of the land, to step out of the everyday commonplace of our existence. We pay the price of our temporary assumption. We may feel a bit foolish when the bellboy is gone and are alone with the pitcher of ice water, but in our hearts it is worth the money.

But with this tendency to disguise a front of false and unimportant personage do you put up how important a personage do you think you could make of yourself, if you should and all the gates open and were invited to do your darndest? And if you should, in a moment of abandon, summon courage to introduce yourself at the King of Spain or Anthony Comstock or Lillian Russell, and if you did this in a gathering that you would be made up of selected master minds, how well do you think you would be able to sustain the part?

This is the story of a modest employee of the government, drawing $2,500 a year, and with the wife and children tucked away in a thirty-dollar flat, who walked into a convention of multimillion manufacturers and with no heads in fact for his claim, virtually spoke to these dominant and successful princes of industry as follows:

"Gentlemen, you are mere children playing at the factory business, and the master here. Please be nice to me and tell me all your secrets or I will cut off your supply of raw material."

It is the story of a young man who, as a detective for the federal government, assumed this position among the sons of a big industry, who lived up to the part he had chosen for himself and got the inner secrets of a great business organization, these being the results he was after.

The government employee who was given the opportunity to become the super-detective, was a special agent of the department of justice, and his assignment was to ferret out the secrets of various trusts that were suspected of conspiracy in restraint of trade. He was a detective of a new school. Where the sleuth of yesterday went about with a dark lantern to discover who purloined Lady Letty's jewels or stole "the chest," the new detective unraveled the mysteries and seeks to determine the manner in which fifty big factories, with 100,000 men on their pay rolls, combine to stifle the small competitor who would enter their field.

It was such an assignment as this that one morning came over to New York in the mail from Washington and fell to the lot of Special Agent Billy Gard. The instructions read: "The Northern Pulp & Paper Manufacturers' association will hold its convention at the Waldorf on the 19th, 20th, 21st and 22d. It is suspected of being a conspiracy in restraint of trade. Its deliberations are in secret and the membership is unknown. Ascertain all action of the convention and procure a list of the members of the association."

This action on the part of the government was occasioned by complaints from publishers of newspapers throughout the country which seemed to indicate that there was an understanding among manufacturers as to what should be charged for white paper. If there was such an agreement that prevented competition, it would be a violation of the Sherman association of which all were members. There was the Northern Pulp & Paper Manufacturers' association, its deliberations and its membership were secret. This fact put it under suspicion. Was it fitting prices?

To answer this question, Special Agent Billy Gard went on his vainglorious debut of assuming an importance that was not his due. He was probably reaching through some all and let it run riot to the limit. But back of the dissembling there was an object to be accomplished.

"You are President Van Dorn of the association, I believe?" said Gard as he presented himself to that individual on the morning the convention was to be opened. "My name is William H. Gard. I am most anxious to attend your meetings and would like to be an 'Are you a member?' asked the president, an incisive and businesslike man of affairs whose factories produced 40 per cent of the white paper used by the daily press of the nation.

"No," acknowledged Gard, "I do not belong to the association, but I nevertheless believe that the membership would be glad to have me present."

"If you are a manufacturer you may become a member and attend," said President Van Dorn.

"I am not a manufacturer," smiled the special agent. "I am the man in charge of the factory business. You will all come to me. It is in the interest of the manufacturers that I want to attend."

"I do not understand," said the president.

"You of course know of the Canadian Northwest Timber company," said the special agent. (As a matter of fact there was no company of that name.) "I am the representative of that company. You may also know that we have been accumulating lands covered with spruce timber for twenty years. Our holdings now amount to areas equal to the whole of the states of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, and of other areas in the United States that have, in the past, been your source of supply for pulp from which to make your paper. The timber supply heretofore available for this purpose is approaching exhaustion. When it is gone you will all turn to the forests that are next most accessible. We have those forests. I therefore say to you that all of you will come to me within the next decade. I am coming to you in advance."

As the young man who claimed to be from the Canadian northwest talked, the brusk manner of the president of the paper manufacturers gradually relaxed. He stroked his grand, close-cropped whiskers in each direction from the distinct part dis-his chin and listened with undivided attention. The Canadian timber lands were at that time the matter of great interest to the pulp and paper world. These lands had been some thing of a mystery for their owners were evidently sitting tight and biding their time.

"I had depended on my subject to interest you," said Gard. "I came all the way from Canada to get acquainted with the men who are going to consume my product. I would like to attend your convention and address to them. Upon receipt of his orders he had found himself with a week in which to make ready. His first step had been to get in touch with the editor of a great New York daily who had reported to the department his belief that there was a white paper trust. That publisher spent hundreds of thousands of dollars every year for paper. He had therefore carefully studied the paper situation and had all the facts as to the supply of pulp timber. He knew just the crials that the paper manufacturers faced.

Gard's preparation for this approach and bid for a seat on the floor of the convention had been most thorough. Upon receipt of his orders he had found himself with a week in which to make ready. His first step had been to get in touch with the editor of a great New York daily who had reported to the department his belief that there was a white paper trust. That publisher spent hundreds of thousands of dollars every year for paper. He had therefore carefully studied the paper situation and had all the facts as to the supply of pulp timber. He knew just the crials that the paper manufacturers faced.

"The convention was yet a week off. Gard had time to accumulate a sunburn and he went fishing down the bay three afternoons in succession, wore no hat and carried a lobster red for a day or two but of a deep bronze at the end of the week. With a touch or two of the wood such as a stout pair of shoes and a hunting knife which he found occasion to produce, just the right impression was created.

"There is nobody that the convention would rather hear talk," President Van Dorn was saying to a man who is nobody who has a subject of more interest. But admission to the convention is provided for in the meeting and copies of addresses should be put at his disposal. He should meet all present.

So Agent Gard loafed about the Waldorf for four days. He was regarded by most as a master of finance who was the equal of any of the manufacturers attending the convention, but as the man of them all who held the whip hand. Morning and night he cultivated these men, talked business with them, asked them questions, they told him all that went on in the convention, allowed him to read its minutes. He was the timorous man at the hotel when the word got well circulated that he was the pulp king of the Canadian northwest.

"Of course, had an average number of acquaintances scattered about the country and many of these knew his name, but in the department of justice. In a New York hotel there is always a chance of meeting friends from any place in the world. Gard was therefore not surprised when, on the evening of the manufacturers' banquet which brought the convention to a close, he passed in a corridor two old-time friends, men whom he had known in college. They were the two men who had been in an emergency that he had used his own name."

"That list is quite confidential," said the president. "I have no copy of it myself."

"But your permanent headquarters in Fourth avenue will have it," suggested Gard. "Can't you give me a note to the secretary?"

"To this the president assented somewhat hesitatingly. The note he wrote was also intended to be friendly. Gard went for his list with some inward trepidation, although the man who pretended to hold the tale of the paper manufacturers of a nation in his hand could afford to show no outward manifestation of it.

The secretary of the Northern Pulp & Paper Manufacturers' association was a most courteous young Virginian bearing the name of Randolph. The special agent, a detective working on big trust investigations, was turned to the other and asked, "What is the name of the man who has been in an emergency that he had used his own name?"

"He is with the department of justice," said the second friend. "He is a special agent, a detective working on big trust investigations."

And the manufacturer heard it all. He immediately consulted with the president. That official lost his urbane equanimity and flattered about in much confusion, consulting with others in authority. He did not approach Gard, and that young man was all unprepared that anything had come wrong until the time came for after-dinner speeches.

"YOU ARE PRESIDENT VAN DORN OF THE ASSOCIATION," I BELIEVE.

Why one so vitally interested in the welfare of the manufacturers should not be a member. Information of a most exhaustive nature should be given to him. Even the minutes of the meeting and copies of addresses should be put at his disposal. He should meet all present.

We have all met, during the week, Mr. Gard of the Canadian northwest. Mr. Gard has furnished many of us with facts that seemed to be vital to the interests of wood pulp business. We in exchange have given to Mr. Gard much information with relation to the pulp and paper business. I would like to present Mr. Gard to this gathering, if I may."
