Dr. Chesley, acting executive officer of the Minnesota state board of health, will be the principle speaker at a county health meeting to be held in the family theatre at Pine City, Monday evening, March 14th at 8 o'clock. Dr. Chesley was in charge of the relief work in Poland last year.

This meeting is called by the county health association for the sole purpose of discussing public health, to inform the public as to the activities of the association and to bring the health organization and the general public closer togethers.

Two films dealing with health matters will be shown. Five minute talks will be made by Miss Nicl, county nurse; Mrs. H. E. Dane, secretary of the county health association; Miss Kohl, principal of the local schools; and C. R. Boo, musical numbers will be given by Mrs. R. E. Caswell, Mollie and Gertrude Miller, and F. P. Gentry. If time permits, there will be community singing.

The use of an additional three tablespoonsful of milk daily instead of the usual amount the United States would bring about normal conditions and protect the dairy industry from the dangers of the present situation arising from the importation of butter from the United States became an importer of 425,000,000 pounds of milk in the form of butter in 1920.

Minnesota as the leading dairy state of the union is vitally interested in the new conditions which have been produced, and her dairymen believe that the solution lies in getting the people of the United States to use more dairy products.

The way to do this, so the dairy men believe, is to advertise the opportunity to have a man like value of dairy products as a health Dr. Chesley. His address will be food—or just as food, for it is al-

HINCKLEY REELECTS THE COUNCIL.

Hinckley village was the scene of an old time hole contested election last Tuesday. A caucus was held last Saturday evening and a ticket passed in the field to oust the last year's council but when the smoke of battle had cleared away and the votes had been counted, it was found that the entire last year's officers had been reelected.

Mr. Powell is an interesting speaker and his lecture was greatly enjoyed. His subject was "Fancies, Forces and Facts about the home town." Interspersed with humor, it contained much good sound advice, while more or less idealistic. He is strongly in favor of consolidated schools for towns and rural communities, and believes that consolidation will go far toward lowering taxes.

HARDING TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

Simple Ceremonies Mark the Inauguration of the New Chief Executive.

VISITORS FILL THE CAPITAL

Good Weather Makes Outdoor Features Possible—Many Governors of States and Other Notables on Hand to Honor the Event.

Washington, March 4.—Bright weather with a cold, blustering March wind, marked the opening of inauguration day.

The inaugural ceremonies were the shortest, simplest, and best few inaugurations have been.

Before a standing crowd of thousands, which completely filled the broad plaza and溢ed for blocks around the capitol itself, the new president accepted the welcome gift of the republic in a short inaugural address—an address in which he did not attempt to outline in other general terms the program of international relations which he proposed to follow by his administration.

Day Clear and Cold.

Inauguration day dawned clear and cold. The temperature was not far from freezing, and there was a stiff breeze whipping the flags that fly over the government avenue and the government buildings.

In other days crowds moved restlessly up and down the street all night long and dawn found many sleeping soundly in pairs of vantage above historic Pennsylvania Avenue to view the great cavalcade of dignitaries. This morning a machine gun could have swept the length and breadth of the avenue with but few casualties.

No pomp or ceremony.

There was something coldly and distinctly businesslike about today's inauguration. Gone were the pomp and pageantry, and in their place only with their extra-long decorations, crashing bands, marching military, and horse-drawn carriages of state prettily bearing silk-hatted and frock-coated dignitaries, in came the procession.

In those same streets today the swift motor car, little club and an apparent desire to get things over with in the shortest possible time and settle down to the quiet of home, had taken the place of the long drawn-out cavalcade.

Today's events began to march with such efficiency shortly after 10 o'clock, when half a dozen automobiles drove up before the White House. The four cars, which contained the entire staff of the Handling inaugural! Only the first four cars were ready in it, the others being occupied by secret service men and drivers. Here and there the members of the inaugural party were picked up with the exception of the President and Mrs. Wilson.

Committees Meet Harding.

Shortly after 11 o'clock, a half dozen motor cars drove up to the east end of United States capital, threading their way through the throngs which had gathered there, and the members of the congressional committees appointed to conduct the inauguration chambered in and whirled down stairs.

Heeded by Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, the congressional committee went to the hotel room where Mr. Harding had been staying while at work. The committee with due formality announced that they had arrived to conduct the President-elect to the capitol to be inaugurated, and the former Senator with a smile of formality, addressed them familiarly, folded a small manuscript in his pocket and joined the committee.

Political Leaders on Platform.

Political leaders from all parts of the country were here today for the inauguration. The veterans of them all were former Senator Chauncey M. Depew of New York, who has attended every inauguration since Abraham Lincoln.

Among the governors who had arrived were Albert G. Clegg of Colorado, Thomas E. Campbell of Arizona, Warren T. McCrary of Indiana, Channing H. Cox of Massachusetts, Henry J. Allen of Kansas, Edwin P. Morrow of Michigan and Percival P. Baxter of Maine.

Theodore Roosevelt of New York, who will be the assistant secretary of the navy, also arrived, and was the mother of an upright, stanch, bearded old gentleman, the President's father, and his brother and a few other members of his immediate family. They joined in a simple meal together.

President's Inaugural Address Deals Chiefly With Reconstruction.

ACCEPTS MANDATE OF PEOPLE

Electoral Vote Construed as Directing Continued Policy of Non-Intervention in World Affairs—Tariff Readjustment.

Washington, March 4.—President Harding's inaugural address, delivered today, was substantially as follows: My countrymen—We survey the marks of destruction and yet rejoice in the ruggedness of the things we have seen. We have seen the earth breathe the clarified atmosphere with the fragrance of victory and the promise of peace and hope. We have seen a world of passion and enthusiasm, but held our civilization secure. Our liberties are inseparable, and though both were threatened, we find ourselves safe. We have seen the love of Americans the profound assurance that our cause is just. We have seen the highest expression and surest guarantee of freedom.

Standing in this presence, minister of the solemnity of our cause, we know that no one can doubt us, and he sees the great weight of our belief in the divine inspiration of the young nation. We have seen the hand of God in the intent in the making of this new nation, and we have seen the hand of God which had but one ambivalence and that was to give us a sense of security. We have seen the hand of God, with unshaken maintenance, the nation stand.

We have seen the world view its hopeful gaze upon the young nation, and we have seen the whole human and religious liberty verified and glorified.

Boardman Community School

AS IT WAS

AS IT IS

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.
EWTIS AND CLARK, 110 years ago, passed along the Columbia river over the mountain pass of exploration between the Mississippi and the Pacific. It was then a primitive country, home to the Indian. Today the Columbia highway runs over their trail. To-day the government Umatilla irrigation project has given opportunity to the settler. Today is the settlement of Boardman, North Morrow county, Oregon. Today stands the Boardman community school.

The Boardman community school is but one of thousands of public schools all over the United States. Why pick it out among so many? Because it is an object lesson, because the American educational school should be—and will be before many years.

The 1920 census shows that the urban population of the United States, or people living in towns of 2,500 or more, is 54,118,028, or 51.4 per cent of the country's total population, and the number of people living in rural territories is 61,360,759. In 1910 urban population was 45.4 per cent.

For the first time in history, the urban population outnumbered the rural population. It is a bad sign of the times. We have been brought up to believe that the farm is the foundation, and the foundations are the foundations of our democracy. Are the foundations beginning to crumble? Apparently the country boys and girls are migrating to the cities, so that they can get away from the farm.

Why do they go to the cities? Because, as things now are, city conditions best satisfy one of the deepest needs of man—the desire for happiness. A man can work in the city can earn more money, work shorter hours, live more comfortably, see more of life and drink more deeply of the cup of happiness.

It is the balance with more people in the cities than in the country. The balance must be restored.

What is it to be done? One answer is to make the country more attractive. Are there many factors? And the least is the community center. And happy is the community where the community center is the schoolhouse.

The development of the Boardman community school over the term of three years, from a little one-room shack with six pupils, to the modern building hereinafter represented, writes Principal M. B. Blair in the Reclaims ("The Reclaims" naturally refers to the hundred pupils now attending and working, and the people of the community proud of their accomplishment.) Boardman is situated on the Columbia river highway, in the heart of the great extension of the Columbia irrigation project, North Morrow county, Oregon. Surrounding the new government aid for furthering the use of the public schoolhouse as the center of community association and activity.

Representative M. Clyde Kelly of Pennsylvania, a speech leader in the house on the floor of the federal government aid for furthering the use of the public schoolhouse as the center of community association and activity.

He said, among other things: "I am not a neighbor in America; I am the public school director. The entire nation is divided into these national communities, and in the center of each is a public building owned by all the people, regardless of all the differences in class and creed and partnership and income."

On the main floor are the class rooms, office, and library of 3,000 volumes. The auditorium is in the central portion on the second story. The auditorium is divided into two distinct departments, one for the boys and the girls on the other. Provision is made for sewing, cooking, dining, science, and manual training.

The grounds comprise ten acres and afford opportunities for a school lawn, a school garden, and play ground, when fully developed, a complete athletic field.

The primary function of the public school is to make good citizens. From the standpoint of citizenship, the schoolhouse ought to be a polling place. This would not only be economical but would emphasize the educational value of the school.

The buildings are for what the ballot box stands, and the school is the voting place. Last primary election was the last day of school. We held our election, and the school was open to the public.

The school year had a speaker on political economy from the state university, and a community dinner—a real time of good fellowship for the people of the community, young and old.

We have had a good deal of fun, and the school is the voting place. Under the leadership of the various organizations of the community we use the buildings and its equipment for their activities; the Ladies' Aid society, the Young People's Friends, Parent Teacher Association, Commercial club, Community Library, Hay Growers' association, the North Morrow County Fair association, and extensive general work for the local organization.

No partisan or private group of any kind ought to be allowed to use the public school building except by invitation of the neighbors whose community organization is using it.

There are more than 1,000 members in the group control is the method, in Rooseveltian phrase, of the "polycratic" building house."

The public school plant represents the largest single investment of the American people's money.

Mr. Blair has invested in school buildings and grounds the immense sum of $1,983,808.00, and expects to add $739,075.00 more.

This amount plant is to be paid off in four years, and the school could be remodeled for a full and steady forward, in accomplishment of its needs and betterments.

Representative M. Clyde Kelly of Pennsylvania, a speech leader in the house on the floor of the federal government aid for furthering the use of the public schoolhouse as the center of community association and activity.

He said, among other things: "I am not a neighbor in America; I am the public school director. The entire nation is divided into these national communities, and in the center of each is a public building owned by all the people, regardless of all the differences in class and creed and partnership and income."

The next important step in developing the schoolhouse as the center of the community would be the federation of all community-aid societies with a board of directors composed of the heads of each department.

Community work should then be done with definite plans for all and immediately for accomplishment of its needs and betterments.

Roses in Many Lands.

Those who travel to Europe are particularly with England, are surprised to find mountains covered with roses over to the demand for a meeting place where by association on a common level the sense of equality may be maintained and where the power and happiness of the individual members may banish the thousand and one divisive lines of danger.

The schoolhouse is a community building because of the common interest of the people in the welfare of the community, either directly or indirectly, taxes pay for its erection and its maintenance. Such common interest is essential for any real community work.

Many cities and towns have recently erected separate community buildings through private contributions or have inaugurated drives to secure funds for modernization of existing community buildings; they are simply clubhouses for groups of people. They are necessarily governed under rules laid down by groups which have the greatest influence, while those who gave nothing have nothing to say.

Under the community organization any groups or clubs may use the schoolhouse as a meeting place, but no partisan or private group of any kind ought to be allowed to use the public school building except by invitation of the neighbors whose community organization is using it.

There is a school for every purpose, and the school is the voting place. Last primary election was the last day of school. We held our election, and the school was open to the public.

Roses in Many Lands.

Those who travel to Europe are particularly with England, are surprised to find mountains covered with roses in China, bushes of them; or to see tall trees, especially in the mountains, when reaching the summit, burst into flower, and roll down the other side in waves upon waves of blossoms.

They are the most beautiful, covered with crimson or scarlet flowers called "hips." But though wild roses are far more varied and abundant in the mountains of Asia than they are in England, with England has its roses and perennials; and not is the rose garden surely all its very own!

For a long time England possessed the only endowed flagstaff in the world.

King Edward VII, in commemoration of his reign, founded the Royal Yacht Asylum for the Duke and Duchess of York at Margate. This staff was erected in the first year of the reign of King Edward VII, in commemoration of his accession to the throne. The cost was defrayed by public subscription and friends and the collection taken was so large that it enabled the institution to purchase 20 flags. Even when the staff and the flags had been paid off, £40 remained in the treasury. This sum was invested for an endowment fund.

Venetian Glass.

Venetian glass is distinguished by its exquisite thinness and fineness of quality. Tiffany glass being its only rival.

Compared with Bohemian glass, which is also prized for brilliance, its quality is much superior.

Indeed Bohemian glass sometimes rivals it in coloring and decorations of the work.

Mrs. Pat Neumann, Chicago, Minn., 1 m. 11 s. W., was having trouble with her kidneys. She had a pain in her back and in her legs. Her doctor showed signs of kidney trouble and it broke down. The Trail to Prosperity

SMALL business is essential to our national prosperity and has won for itself an important and enduring place. But small business, however multiplied, cannot undertake to serve the public in a big way where unity of service is necessary.

This must be accomplished by great, highly specialized organizations, managed honestly and efficiently, and functioning to the benefit of all the people.

Such an organization is the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

Its business is to refine crude petroleum into the many products needed by the people—to provide a system of distribution which will make them available everywhere, and to sell at a price which is fair to all.

To accomplish this, 25,000 men and women devote all their time, energy, and intelligence to the task, while the stockholders have invested more than $200,000,000 of capital.

In preparing to meet the demands of industry, agriculture, and motorists throughout the 11 Middle Western states served, the Company is now refining petroleum to the limit of its vast refinery capacity.

It is distributing gasoline, kerosene, and lubricating oils to its bulk stations throughout the territory in order that it may be in position to give immediate service when the Spring and Summer rush comes.

THE FACTS ABOUT LUMBER PRICES

For Several Months Past the Price of Lumber Has Been Gradually Declining, Until Today It Is 15 to 35 Per Cent Lower Than Peak Prices

There has been so much said about Lumber prices, and so many misleading statements made, that we feel that we owe it to the people of Pine City and vicinity to tell you the whole truth about the subject. You will recall that we have not been inclined to do much prophesying about prices, but we are in a position to tell you definitely what Lumber Prices have been doing, and what the market is NOW.

The highest Price that Lumber reached was last February. Not long after that the wholesale market began to decline, very slowly at first, a little more rapidly later on, and has continued on the down grade, until now it appears to most experienced lumbermen that the bottom has about been reached.

While we have not advertised price reductions, we began early last Spring to cut our prices to conform to the falling wholesale market. At least three or four times since then we have made definite price revisions as rapidly as justified by our costs. Our last reduction, made early this month, brings our prices down to a point approximately one-third less than the highest point of the winter.

We are perfectly frank to say that lumber is not selling at the "Pre-War" prices, notwithstanding some statements that have been made to the contrary. No one who has made the most superficial study of the situation expects lumber to go as low as it once was. There are several reasons for this: 1st, Freight is a considerable factor in the cost of lumber, and freight rates are approximately double what they were before the war. 2nd, Labor and production costs, while they will be reduced, are not likely to reach pre-war levels. 3rd, The supply of lumber grows less each year, while the demand increases.

At no time have we been in sympathy with the efforts that are being made in some quarters to hold retail prices up to the High Price Level long after wholesale prices have been reduced. When the market was advancing retailers made considerable "Velvet" on the stock they had bought on a lower market. Now that things have gone the other way there's no reason why we shouldn't all take our medicine like men.

Come on in, folks, the water's FINE.

Uncle John's Josh

Gruson's Find.

An extraordinary story comes from Shanghai (China) of a find by some railwaymen of Adelphi, Russia. A trunk was shipped to the Russian representative at Harbin, who to the Russian representative at Harbin, was opened and found to contain apparently bags of flour and firewood. Underneath these were found eight rings, one of them gold, six bearing the names of the dukes and duchesses and the other two the name of a priest and a valet of one of the grand dukes. To make sure there was no ruse, one ring was opened and a body was found. In addition to the body of the dead there was also where the question is being asked who had forwarded these bodies and for what reason, and when this was asked, he replied that he did not know the time to be sent. In these boxes when robbers expect to hidden away gold, jewels and other precious metals, to be confronted with caskets containing murdered persons is indeed a gruesome and unconvincing find.

If She Doesn't Talk Too Much.
The worst woman hater I know is my husband's brother. He is a bachelor M. D. and although he with his patients never gets into trouble seems to dislike women through jealousy of his wife. As he is only forty-three we intend starting a campaign at once to convert him. I have invited him to speak to the women of Pine City, and for him to do so I have also invited another and hopefully young woman, who is a practitioner at the bar of justice. She has my cue to hold the floor for and in favor of women everywhere. She may win him over. If this interests you I will send you the next chapter—Exchange.

All Land-Clearing Records Were Broken Last Year—Make 1921 Another Record-Breaker!

THIS is about the time of year that every one begins thinking about spring planting and how much more land he can get cleared and ready to produce crops.

From experience we have found Du Pont 20% Red Cross to be the cheapest and most effective explosive for blasting stumps in this section. When properly loaded, it does the work of the higher percentages at a considerable saving. It is now being made so that it is practically freeze-proof. This means that you save the bother of thawing and thus do away with the most dangerous feature of blasting.

On January 30th of this year the open-pit mines on the Mesaba range were using this new Red Cross of all percentages absolutely without thawing.

Start planning now just how many acres you can clear this year and how much dynamite you will need. See our local dealer. He can give you full particulars.
