Some Aspects of the Farmers' Problems

By BERNARD M. BARUCH

(Reprinted from Atlantic Monthly)

Now that the farmers are afloat, thinking and acting as never before to eradicate these inequalities, they are subjected to stern economic pressure. This is not with the intention that they are demanding, and are the recipients of special privileges. Let us see what part the government has conferred on the farmers. Much has been made of Section 6 of the Food and Drug Act which purports to permit them to combine with a commodity. Admittedly, that, nominally, is a special privilege—though I think it was so in appearance rather than in fact—we find that the combine has nullified it by not being permitted to accept contracts by co-operative means. The only co-operation in the form of incorporation. If it is proper for them to form, in the case of existing corporations, otherwise, a corporation that controls the entire production of a commodity, or a large part of it, why is it not for the marketing of their common products, either in one or several selling agencies? It should be the right for a hundred thousand cooperative shareholders to direct 25 or 30 percent of the income to a hundred thousand co-operative farmers to control a larger proportion of the wheat crop, or cotton, or corn.

The Department of Agriculture is often spoken of as a special concession to the farmer. It is not so. The results, it is of as much benefit to the farmer and consumers of agricultural products as it is to the others, or even the public. It is not supposed that anyone should get the benefits that are derived from the educational and advisory work that it gives them in working out improved cultural methods and practice in developing better yielding varieties through breeding and selection. In introducing new varieties from other parts of the world and other countries, and in devising practical measures for the control of destructive animal and plant diseases, insect pests, and the like. All these things may be done, and their general beneficial effects are obvious.

It is complained that, whereas the law directs Federal Reserve banks to open branches in rural areas, these banks are slow to do so. This is not a special privilege, but merely such a recognition of business conditions as to do business with country people. The crop farmer has only one turn-over for his products, and the manufacturer has many, incidentally, I note that the Federal Reserve Board has refused to discount paper for a period of six months, to conform to the nature of the business.

The Farm Loan banks are pointed to as an instance of special government favor for farmers. Are they not rather the outcome of laudable efforts to equitize rural and urban conditions and to assist the government to do this to help set up an administrative organization and lend a little credit to the rural areas? Eventually, the farmers will provide all the capital and carry all the liabilities themselves. It is not a tax exemption, but so bonds of municipal light and traction plants, and new forms of electric power, have been taken, in New York, for ten years.

On the other hand, the rural needs of plants for municipal housing projects that run into the billions, hundreds of millions annually spent on the purchase of motor cars. It is said that the railroads are being favored with increased rates and virtual guarantees of earnings by the government, which results in a line of increased tolls on all that he sells and all that he buys. It is not a special privilege, but a general government concern for particular industries and interests. Rescuing the railroads from insolvency is undoubtedly for the benefit of the country as a whole, but what can be more general benefit than encouragement of ample production of the necessities of life and their even flow from contented producers to satisfied consumers?

While it may be conceded that special governmental aid may be necessary in the case of agriculture and the production and distribution of farm products, it is not for the farmer's own benefit, but for the benefit of other businesses, especially as the enjoyment by the farmer of such opportunities would appear to be even more contributory to the general good than in the case of other industries. The spirit of agriculture, under the privilege of unequal opportunity, is a special privilege and one that it is difficult to see why agriculture and the production and distribution of farm products are not provided for other businesses, especially as the enjoyment by the farmer of such opportunities would appear to be even more contributory to the general good than in the case of other industries. most degree or greatest production compatible with the large trade it has built up. All things are generally conceded to be for the advantage of the consumer. Nor does the steel corporation inconsiderately dump its products on the market at a low price. It is so influenced, as is often the case with other large organizations. It is matter of its distribution as well as of its production. If prices are not satisfactory the products are held back or production is restricted or suspended. It is so compelled to send a year's work to the market at one time and take whatever it can get for it. In this connection, it has one selling policy and its own export department. Neither are the grades and qualities of steel different at the caprice of the buyer, nor does the latter hold the scales. In this single illustration of the steel corporation is represented about 40 per cent of the steel production of America. The rest is mostly in the hands of a few large corporations. It is not that the steel corporation, by example, stabilizes all steel prices. If this is permissible it is even desirable, because the steel and fair prices are essential to solid and continued prosperity, why would it be wrong for the farmer to utilize central agencies that would have similar effects on agricultural products? Something like that is what they are aimed at.

Now, what is the farmer asked? Without trying to catalogue the remedial measures that have been suggested in his behalf, the principal proposals that bear directly on the improvement of his position and marketing relations may be summarized as follows:—

First: storage warehouses for grain, wool, and tobacco, and elevators for grain, of sufficient capacity to meet the maximum demand on them at the peak of a marketing period. The farmer thinks that other private capital must furnish these facilities, or that he must create his own the elevators and warehouses.

Second: weighing and grading of agricultural products, and certifying of same to be done by impartial and disinterested public inspectors (this is already accomplished to some extent by the federal marketing and grading agencies), to eliminate ungrading, overgrading, and unfair grading. The farmer thinks the utilization of the stored products as the basis of credit.

Third: a certainty of credit sufficient to enable the marketing of products on an orderly basis.

Fourth: the Department of Agriculture should collect, tabulate, summarize, and disseminate information to the farmers, full information from all the markets of the country, so that they may be informed of their selling position as buyers now are of their buying position.

Fifth: freedom to integrate the business of agriculture by means of consolidated selling agencies, co-operating and co-operating in such ways as to put the farmer on an equal footing with the large buyers of his products, and to improve relations in other industries.

When a business requires specialized talent, it has to be hired. So will the farmer. It is perhaps the best way for them to get it would be to utilize some of the present machinery of the law to set up agencies dealing in farm products. Of course, if he wishes, the farmer may go further and engage in other businesses, such as the manufacture of food products. In my opinion, however, he would be wise to stop short of that. Public interest may be opposed to all great integrations; but, in justice, should they be forbidden to the farmer and permitted to others? The cooperative form of association can be wholly adapted to his objects and conditions. The cooperative form seems more generally suitable. Therefore, he wishes to be free, if he finds it desirable and feasible, to resort to cooperation with his fellows and neighbors, without running afoul of the law. To urge that the farmers should have the same right to consolidate and coordinate their particular economic functions with other industries is not only reasonable, but it is, however, to concede that any business integration should have legislative sanction to exercise normal economic power. The American people are as firmly opposed to industrial as to political autocracy, whether attained by rural or urban industries.

For Better Citizens Better Service

TO promote the safety first movement, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has created within its own organization 24 separate and distinct inquisitorial bodies to investigate accidents involving Company motor equipment. These bodies are called "Safety Courts."

The primary purpose of these courts is to reduce the hazard of automobile accidents on the public highway. This is directly in line with the policy of the Company to help the employee to a better understanding of his obligation to his fellow citizens.

The Court meets weekly and before it must appear any employee, whether manager or truck driver, who has been involved in an accident during the preceding week. The employee comes to court as defendant with his immediate superior as his attorney. The Chairman of the Safety Court is the judge. Other members of the Council serve as jurors.

When the investigation shows that the employee has been guilty of carelessness in observing traffic laws, penalties are fixed and punishment assessed by the jury. The punishment is often as novel as the plan itself. For instance, a truck driver recently convicted of carelessness was removed from his position and sentenced to work for two weeks in the Company warehouse as a common laborer.

The plan is in operation throughout the 11 Middle Western States served by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) and has been responsible for reducing automobile accidents approximately 50 per cent.

The spirit which pervades the "Safety Court" is to inspire employees with a sense of their responsibility. For, Kellogg's is an extraordinarily generous Annuity System, which gives the employee a feeling of security regarding his future, and in the case of the Stock Investment Plan to promote the desire to save, the "Safety Court" has as its object the making of a better and more responsible citizen who will render continuous and greater service to society.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is continuously studying methods for improved service through adjusting its organization to the changing needs of the people of the Middle West.

JAMES TUNNEY HOPES LIGHTNING MAY HIT THRICE IN SAME PLACE

It's an old saying that things come in threes. That showman idea has been running through Gene Tunney's head like an express train ever since he took up boxing. And this is why: The first heavyweight champion of the world under the Marquis of Queensberry rules was James J. Corbett. His sparring partner at Carson City was James J. Jeffries, afterward the heavy-weight champion of the world.

DANFORTH OF BROWNS HAS BAD REPUTATION

As Minor League Pitcher He Doctored the Balls.

At Least That Was Charge Always Held Against Him—Effectiveness Increased When Opposing Players Start Fusing.

Once a player gets the reputation of being a "cheater" it is a difficult matter for him to live it down.

DAVE DANFORTH OF THE BROWNS IS AN EXAMPLE OF SUCH A REPUTATION. IN HIS EARLY DAYS AS A MINOR LEAGUE PITCHER DANFORTH DOCTORED THE BALLS.

At least that was the charge that was always held against him as a minor leaguer. In the American association it was not unusual for Danforth to strike out ten men in a game.

His great work in that league caused the White Sox to give him a chance. He fared just as well with Chicago and was again sent back to the minors.

Once more it was the American association, this time with the Columbus club. Immediately Danforth began to burn up the league. He had so good a year in 1921 that the St. Louis Browns gave 11 players for him.

Danforth has always been accused of rigging the ball with his thumb nail, thereby making it possible for him to ball his fast ball.

Danforth does not rub the ball slightly with his thumb before delivering it. He says it is merely habit. Opposing players are positive it is then that he rigs the ball.

Danforth says his effectiveness is increased when the opposing players start fanning about the delivery, and that is the real reason why he always rates the thumb on the ball as if nicking the leather in order to get a rough spot.

Sporting Squibs of All Kinds

The steel golf club is approved by the Western Golf association.

Perhaps Jack Dempsey got that much to read the trail law.

A national golf series for amateur soccer teams will be held during the 1922-23 season.

The hand that used to rock the cradle is now marking the ballot and deciding whom we shall have in public office.

It is difficult for some folks to think that a physician can be kind hearted, when he demands that you suffer by giving them a liquor prescription.

It is difficult to escape getting your pocket picked when you go in a crowd nowadays, but quite likely the thief won't get anything but some old laundry tickets and theatre seat checks.

This is the merry month of June which puts the wedding bells in tune, when men see those who soon will boss 'em all camouflaged with orange blossom. O blushing bride, O gentle dear, push back the tresses from your ear, I have some words for you to hear. When all mankind were troglodytes, before the dates that history cites a female person had no rights. The bridegroom's plan for home sweet home was bending saplings on her dome. But times have changed since those beginnings and women long have had their innings. Since Satan made the rolling pin, the human head is all too thin. If Jason calls his soul his own, rap gently on his frontal bone, but bear in mind the tool is meant to staple, not crack or dent. From self assertion you must wean him, but do be careful when you bear him. I wish you you luck, I hope you win, I'm very strong for discipline, but yet as soft as once a week, for him some freedom I respect. You should give no wrathful sign providing he is home by nine, nor bounce his head against a fester for coming just a minute after. So nobly just, but sternly great, step to the helm and navigate; you are the captain, he the mate. And when he tries back talk with you, he'll soon be nothing but the crew. Nay more, if he a bit too far go, he may be classed as simple cargo. BOB ADAMS

You can make your car serve the church next Sunday by bringing your friends to the open-air church service at the August Wickstrom farm on Cross Lake at 11. If you have seats to spare in your car drive around to the church at 10:30 and pick up those who wish to go out to the service. Baseball Notes

St. Paul American Association club sold infielder Mark Koenig to the Watertown (S. D.) club of the Dakota league.

Jimmy Mattox, former Rochester pitcher with the St. Paul American Association baseball team, has jumped to the Eveleth team of the Mesaba Range league.

The world's supply of ivory obtained from elephants is said to be almost exhausted, but why worry with an annual growth in the number of baseball umpires?

Tees ("Steamboat") Williams, pitcher with the St. Paul American Association baseball team, has jumped to the Eveleth team of the Mesaba Range league.

Walter Hammond, second baseman, purchased by Cleveland from the Pittsfield, Mass., Eastern league team last winter, has been released to the Pittsburgh Nationals.

Sometimes the comely sport of baseball becomes a reality. Heathcote, centerfielder for the Caribs, was knocked out by a fly which struck him on the head.

This is Plette's first year in the big show. He is a strapping right-hander with a fast-breaking curve. His control isn't much to brag of, but outside that he looks pretty good.

The poor showing of the Detroit team has not caused President Navin of the Detroit club to change his plans for adding another deck to the grand stand at Navin field.

Southpaw Harry Courtney, from the Senators, joined the Chisox, via the well-known waiver route. He was ridden by district fans and ought to go better with the Glensons.

The Pittsburgh Pirates are said to have offered the Minneapolis club $20,000 for Ith Russell, with the idea of using the former White Sox pitcher in the outfield if he can be landed.

The shock of the season in the Coast league is the rise of Duffy Lewis' Salt Lake Bees. They were generally picked for the cellar, but now are considered a troublesome bunch.

Combie Mack's pitching and the club's hitting has surprised the critics this season, with the result they are picking the Philadelphia entry to make things hot for the other second division entries.

Art Fletcher of the Phillies does not seem to have been affected by his year's layoff. The former Giant star is hitting the ball right on the nose and is the heir to Wilhelm's fast and youthful infield.

Wilbert Robinson's hopes for good pitching may come true after all the bad start. It will be remembered that Brooklyn's chances were said to depend almost entirely on the sort of pitching it got.

Mrs. Augustina Bottin was born in Germany May 17, 1849, in the daughter of Mr and Mrs. Voss. She married Wm. Bottin there in 1877, and came to America in 1882, settling in Iowa where they resided until 1902 when they moved to this country. They moved to their present home about 8 years ago.

Appreciation

"Were you ever misquoted in an interview?"

"No," replied Senator Forchman. "Did you document the interview?"

"No. Some of the reports he undoubtedly attributed to me made such a hit that I thanked him and told him to roll on me for any influence I could command."

Conservation

"What sort of business is Oilpiping in now?"

"He says he's doing a little something in oil."

"How profitable?"

"Why so?"

"That's the first time I ever heard of an oil operator who didn't claim to be juggling with millions."

TREE FOLIAGE DESTROYED BY TENT CATERPILLAR

Blue Gray Worm Doing Damage in Certain Districts of Minnesota—Remedy in Orchards.

The forest tent caterpillar, the blue gray worm with diamond shaped spots along the middle of its back, has been stripping the foliage from certain trees in districts west and northwest of the Twin Cities. This pest is hatched from eggs which are laid in the summer or fall months in circles about the twigs of the tree. It is estimated that more than 80 per cent of these eggs are laid in hardwood trees, hence the hardwood is the first to suffer when the hatch begins. The elm, maple and many other varieties are also favorite feeding grounds of this caterpillar. Apple and other fruit trees are not immune.

This worm has been known to appear in such numbers that it is able to gum up the railway service and actually prevent the passage of trains. Reports received by entomologists at University Farm this year tell of the presence of myriads of the pest around St. Cloud, Oakley and many other points in Minnesota. Shade trees about town and trees in wood lots have practically been denuded of their foliage in many instances. Such trees are materially weakened and if the process of stripping were repeated every year they would eventually die.

What really saves the situation, says University Farm, is the fact that the one generation of this caterpillar is produced within a year. The eggs which are generally laid in the fall do not hatch until the coming spring. Various parasites also contribute to its death in keeping the family in check. For a series of years the parasites may have the upper hand and the destructive caterpillars become so reduced in numbers that little account is taken of them. Finally the parasites having eaten their hosts are themselves practically wiped out by starvation. This is the caterpillar's opportunity, those which have survived begin to thrive and continue to increase in numbers until by change of fortune the parasites again assume control. This accounts, Mr. Billings says, for the periodic outbreak of many of our caterpillar pests.

It appears, therefore, for wood lots that nature's method of control is the only method. Fruit trees can be saved by the use of the ordinary spray materials, and shade trees, when stand along alone, can be protected by hands of kerosene or other sticky material which will prevent the worms from climbing up the trunk to the spreading branches. The hands should be kept clean and occasionally renewed in order to retain their effectiveness.

THE BLACKHEAD DISEASE

Turkeys Suffer With this Infection—The Cause Explained.

Blackhead, an infectious disease of turkeys, may occur among other fowls when turkeys are raised on the same premises. The disease is more prevalent during the late winter and spring months. Flocks in Minnesota have suffered from it to such extent that the business of turkey growing has declined in many localities.

The cause of blackhead, says Dr. W. A. Billings, division of veterinary medicine at University Farm, "is generally considered to be an amoeba which is secreted in enormous numbers through the droppings from the diseased bird. Young points are especially susceptible to infection. The liver and intestines are the organs affected."

"Prevention and treatment of blackhead have usually been unsatisfactory. Recently in southern California the use of ipsecan has met with considerable success. This has led us to recommend it to turkey raisers in Minnesota. In many instances reports indicate the treatment is having some success."

"As a preventive, the dose is a teaspoonful of powdered ipsecan given in the feed twice a week to each group of 20 birds. No allowance is made for difference in ages. As a curative for birds already infected each turkey is given 10 drops of fluid extract of ipsecan by mouth once a day for three days. If this method is too laborious, make a mash containing three teaspoons of powdered ipsecan to the quart and feed for three or four days."

One secret of success in canning is to use the best of can rubbers and those only ones.

Expert sheep men of the college and station agree that sheep, especially old ewes with lambs, require a goodly amount of salt in their summer diet. Often sheep deprived of salt become nervous and run wild. If limited to the amount of salt fed, ewes soon cut down a milk production and their lambs suffer in consequence. Salt cure is provided for sheep, swine and cattle so that it can be taken any time.

The pressure cooker is of great help to the housemaker, especially in hot weather. Meals may be speeded up cause meats can be cooked in half the time that it takes to prepare them the open kettle method. Also, the pressure cooker is a help in canning. A sun up, it saves time, labor and oil.

It's the vivid splash of color rightly used that gives the somber costume character and dash.

Bran mash poisoned with a good dose of Paris Green and thrown in all pellets along garden and field will get the cutworms.

BROADCASTING THE MARKETS

Radio-Phone Will Become a Practical Use in Dispensing Daily Reports.

E. A. Stewart, associate professor with the division of agricultural engineering, University of Minnesota, told an audience at University Farm the other day that the radio-phonograph will come into practical use for broadcast of market and weather reports in country districts. "News of this kind can be picked up by stations under the direction of county agents or other local agencies," said Mr. Stewart, "but so far as individual farmers finding it practical to maintain a receiving station, it is not probable such will be the case."

Electrical engineers seem to be pretty well agreed that as a means of person-to-person communication the old time "wire" telephone will never be ousted by the radio from the place it now holds. As a mode of general communication, as contrasted with private communication, the radio has possibilities which seem almost unlimited.

The market is never glutted with products of the farm that are care fully grown and prepared. Choice products always find a market at a little better prices than the average run.
