

MURDER ATTEMPT FOILED BY SON

Gust Anderson county commissioner of the first district of Pine County was lodged in the Washington county jail last Monday on a charge of attempt to murder.

In one of the most brutal attacks ever heard of in this part of the county he recently killed his wife by beating her with a call about three feet long. The attack was made about one a. m. last Sunday morning while Mrs. Anderson was sleeping.

Anderson beat her until she was just able to drag herself out of doors, inflicting deep cuts on her head and neck. Her right arm was broken by one of the felon's blows.

Angus, a son, about fifteen years old heard his mother's screams and hastened to his father's assistance and tried to leave his mother alone.

While he was calling for help Anderson, again started beating and was again driven off by the son with an iron bar.

Previous to the attack Anderson had soaked the bed clothes and Mrs. Anderson's bed with kerosene with the intention of settling fire to the house after he had beaten her into unconsciousness so as to make it appear that he was not implicated in the heinous crime.

As the neighbors started arriving Anderson decided it was a good place to leave, so after changing his clothes and settling the oil cans out under a tree, he drove to Pine City, about two o'clock and gave him self up to marshal.

Dr. Wiseman was sent for immediately and after administering to Mrs. Anderson's wounds, she was removed to the hospital at Rush City, where her condition is reported as good.

Anderson's trial was set for Monday afternoon and early Monday morning crowds began to assemble before the courthouse to see Justice Elin.

During the morning Anderson wrote out his resignation as county commissioner, which was received by Cap. Hanck chairman of the board of county commissioners and forwarded to Auditor Elin.

Due to the large crowd and unfriendly feeling toward Anderson, Sheriff Hawley, had the hearing held in the jail. The hearing was held by Justice Stephan. Anderson waived examination and pleaded guilty.

He was bound over to the grand jury and taken to Stillwater by the Sheriff in the J. G. Petschel car, where he was lodged in jail to await his trial.

Anderson was serving his second term as county commissioner from the first district, this being his sixth year on the board. The crime he committed certainly stamps him as one who is absolutely unfit to mingle at all with people, let alone representing them on the board of county commissioners.

He should receive the full penalty of the law for the atrocious crime which carries with it a penalty of from one to forty years imprisonment.

Pine County and specifications may be examined at the office.

In April 1920, she was taken to a hospital in southern Minnesota where she passed away July 7, at the age of 29 years. Death resulted from intestinal trouble.

And the "Smokes" Were on Jackie Jackie Coogan brought joy into the hearts of several dozen prisoners in a comedy fall during the production of his latest First National picture "Trouble" now showing at the Family Theatre, Sunday and Monday. One of the episodes of the picture called for the exposure of the inmates of the jail prison bars—all eager to catch a glimpse of the little chap. They all knew him and when he finished, called out to him.

Jackie does not care who anybody is, he might be as low as a fellow like regular old Joe K. with Jackie—and he immediately walked over to the building where he started up a lively conversation with the prisoners.

The clinic is made possible by the efforts of the local physicians and specialists through the County Public Health Association. Miss Urnes is staying at the Pokegama Sanitarium and is working through out this part of Pine County.

To the People of Pine County As I am going to put on a Pine County Exhibit at the Minnesota State Fair this year, and as I wish to make some success, I take this means to see if I can interest all the business men of Pine County to help me defray the expenses connected with this exhibit. The farmers will do their part. They always have, but it has been slow to put on good exhibits. If the business men will do their part, I will be able to put it over right.

True enough conditions are not so good as they might be and crops also, but they are not any better in any county in this state or in other states this year. So it is up to the business men of Pine County to grow too slow for a good county. Let's get together! Cut out this jealousy and hatred and all work for bigger and better Pine County!

I wish to thank all the farmers and other people of Pine County who have helped me in the past and hope that they will be with me again this year. I thank the business men in advance for their financial support for this year.

I am yours for a bigger and better Pine County, M. E. Profert

Anderson Wants Office Back

After spending a couple of days in Washington county jail Gust Anderson decided he didn't want to resign as county commissioner and wanted to withdraw his resignation.

As soon as County Auditor Elin received the resignation he made out the necessary papers and that evening served them on the chairmen of the town boards of Royaton and Rock Creek.

When the withdrawal request came in, Auditor Elin took it up with the Attorney General's office and he ruled that as long as the chairmen of the two town boards had been served notice of the vacancy and his resignation was accepted, it would stand that way.

The two chairmen will meet at the court house tomorrow—Friday—to fill the vacancy.

Three cows and a De Laval will make more money than four cows with gravity setting or an inferior separator

Thousands upon thousands of cow owners have already proved this statement; any experienced dairyman will verify it for you.

If you are selling cream or making butter, and have no separator or else an inferior machine, we know if we could put a De Laval on your place we would be doing you a personal favor.

Remember, you can't make money by trying to save money in the purchase price of a cream separator. A De Laval costs only a little more than the cheapest and will save you twice as much and last five to ten times as long as other separators.

Coeds Set Record for Hurdlers

Olympic Games Once Had but One Event

Olympic games of ancient Greece consisted at first of only a foot race of 210 yards. Gradually the number of events was increased until the program included three foot races, wrestling, boxing, pankration which was a sort of boxing and wrestling combined, usually running, jumping, throwing the discus, throwing the javelin and wrestling, and finally, as the program became more elaborate, various kinds of horse and chariot races.

BOSTON CLUB SHOWS MUCH IMPROVEMENT

Quinn and Fohl Meeting With Great Success

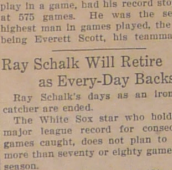

The success that Bobby Quinn and Lee Fohl are having with the Boston Red Sox is being watched with interest by all baseball followers of the American association, because of the fact that they are products of this circuit.

It was pointed out last winter when Quinn and several business men of Columbus, Ohio, purchased the Post, which Quinn, with the aid of Fohl, who has selected as manager, would build up a team that would soon be in the Red Sox ranks.

Quinn and Fohl are not entitled to all of the credit for the bang-up ball the Red Sox are playing, however, for they have two able assistants in the persons of Lefty Leifeld, former pitcher, and Steve O'Neill, the catcher obtained from Cleveland. Leifeld and O'Neill have performed wonders with the Red Sox pitchers whose work has been the talk of the major leagues.

Ward Finally Stopped

Aaron Ward, second baseman of the Yankees, who because he was unable to play in games, had his record stopped at 275 games. He was the second highest man in games played, the first being Everett Scott, his teammate.

Ray Schalk Will Retire as Every-Day Backstop

Ray Schalk's days as an iron-man catcher are ended. The White Sox star who holds the major league record for consecutive games caught, does not plan to catch more than seventy or eighty games this season.

Last year Schalk caught 121 games. He is no longer a youngster, and the continuous service took much out of him.

This year he will come close to dividing the burden with Clyde Gronow, who finished the season with the club last year.

A newcomer, Joe Burns, from Shreveport, developed by Les Thomas, will be in the lineup and will break into a number of games back of the plate himself.

Ed Brown, Hard-Hitting Fielder of Indianapolis, Former Giant, who was traded to Joe Johnny Jones and Gene Bailey of the Brooklyn Nationals, has been a strong addition to the Brooklyn "Murderer's Row."

Golfer Asks No Revenge

There's a story told of a golfer whose driving, very erratic, kept landing the ball in the rough, with the result that more time was taken up looking than was spent in actual play. At the end of this tiresome game he said to his opponent: "Well, son, what about another round to let me have my revenge?" "If that's all you want," replied the other wryly, "another round isn't necessary."

Harvey Christensen, former Neeshville utility man, who became a free agent when the Travelers cut his salary 100 men, has gone to Wilson in the Virginia league.

Pitcher Reynolds Kelly, traded to Worcester by New Haven in exchange for Outfielder Eddie Myers, has been star for the Coal Heavers since joining them.

Scout Pat Monahan of the Browns gets up for into the outfit at intervals that he carries a radio set in order that he may be able to get the baseball scores out of the air.

Lee Fohl insists on paying his young shortstop, Lee, some high compliments. He says that Lee now has the same style that Owen Bush had when he broke into the American league back in 1908.

International league magazines claim a loss of $200,000 this spring due to postponements of games on account of rain. Buffalo will be new park, shows the heaviest loss. Its estimate being $80,000.

Paul Strand, center fielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, was a radio operator, first class in the United States navy during the World War, and was the leading hitter of the Pacific Coast league last season.

Up to 1888 the rules of the National Association of Baseball Clubs prohibited the employment of any paid player, but by that time so strong had the rivalry become between the leading clubs that the practice of compensating star players had worked its way to an extent which entirely nullified the rule.

LOVED IN SPITE OF CATS

By CLARISSA MACKIE

If the blue cat had not broken down at Meadows Point, this story would have been a long one. If a yellow cat had not crossed the road under the very nose of the blue cat, it would not have broken down at all. John Dornier tried to avoid letting the flying felix, and only succeeded in drenching his car. Happily he was alone, but it was a shallow he, and it was muddy. There were blue flags growing there, and catkins he had eaten, always had eaten, and he had eaten and owned several.

"Now, for the love of cats, somebody go to help me. I'll go to the little some that belongs to the yellow cat," and he strode across the road and let himself be run over by the yellow cat and proceeded around the road to a neat back porch where he slipped smartly on the door.

At once the door opened and a voice exclaimed, "Oh, do come in, and close the door. There, some of them will get out again."

John Dornier, hater of cats, found himself the center of a feline mob. Cats everywhere—in chairs, on the floor, on the table, on the window-sill, on the clock-hack behind the sofa, on the sphinx, but mostly they were under the feet of the man who was in the midst of it all was this wonderful pretty girl, in white linen sporty clothes, her gray eyes shining brightly and her lips suppressed excitement and fair hair becomingly ruffled.

"Oh, do you mind going for the doctor?" she appealed before he had an opportunity to state his own troubles.

"Randomly. Where is he?" "There is only one around here. Just take my car—it's in the yard—go right down the street until you come to the millpond. It is the first house on the right—you'll see the sign. Tell him Mrs. Minch has had a bad fall."

"Fall downstairs?" he asked politely. "Tripped over one of the cats. They got under one's feet," she apologized.

"I'll be right back," promised John, and he kept his word for the little car he found outside in the yard was of an expensive make, and it flew like the wind. When the doctor was closeted with the patient and the beautiful girl, John Dornier decided that he was to get home that night, but must have help in pulling the car out of the ditch. So detaching himself from a dozen or so cats, he simply left the little house and went out in search of help. Half an hour later, the blue car, much the worse for a mud bath, was tearing its way down the shore road. John Dornier, along the shore road, had forgotten all about the speed laws for he was thinking about a pet that he could not characterize as a cat that he could not forget.

"Remember, old man," he told himself, "that that girl may be all right in every way, and I do admit that she is your ideal of what a perfectly adorable wife would be, even to her choice of cats; but must I always pick out a wife who would not be satisfied with one cat but must have twenty? Forget it!"

It is easier to say that than it is to put behind one a memory that eludes John Dornier, a memory that eludes all able young men, and never had a love affair, and his memory of the girl of the cats lingered tenderly. More than once he had thought of the girl, but he never refused to go. It looked at him with appealing gray eyes, until he decided to give the blue car another try, along the road to Meadows Point.

The little house was still there, but on the window sills, they were draped on the fences backing in the sun. A little old lady sat on the front porch, and she kept on looking at the cat-girl with her lap full of black kittens. John decided that the cats belonged to her; the old lady picked some of them away with her care.

That ended John Dornier's romance. He told himself bitterly as he turned the car about and went back to town. No matter how fascinating a girl might be one surely couldn't marry twenty cats!

"I'll forget her in a week," decided John. At the end of the week he was introduced to a girl who was a club owner and had his fingers to do all over again. Phyllis Dora seemed to like him, sometimes she looked at him in a puzzled way as if trying to recollect where she had seen him.

"I don't stand out from a bunch of mere cats. I don't care whether she remembers me or not," growled John. "I'll be done with her in a week, but every chance he could get, he looked her up. She liked cats, and she looked up quickly, almost suspiciously, at the blue cat.

"What a funny question to ask me," she said in reply. "Don't you like them?" he insisted. "Not particularly," she replied in a friendly tone that John knew it was assumed. John smiled unsmilingly. She couldn't do it with an air of indifference, hadn't he found her cherishing twenty cats, more or less. Of course some of them might belong to an owner's attitude toward the felix. It was evident she liked them, and if he succeeded in marrying her, there would always be cats around; then, they would have to go out and make visits upon Mrs. Minch, who was rather a low and middle old lady, but that meant more cats.

He was to see more of Mrs. Dora, for he was visiting people that he knew, but never in the course of conversation did she ever mention cats. One would think that if she were the way she was, she would have avoided the subject.

At last John Dornier found an explanation. A woman and he simply ran away from love as represented by Phyllis Dora. In one week he was back again, feebly, but Phyllis Dora was still visiting the Taylors.

She was so kind in her way there as fast as the sympathetic blue car could speed him, and when he found her in the rose garden, among the blue roses, he knew that Fate meant to be kind to him. Phyllis looked so glad to see him that he burst right out and down the road, and later in the blissful period that followed, he confessed, "I did run away from you, darling, just because of your cats? I never had one of your cats? I never had one in my life," she looked at him amazedly.

"Remember last spring out at Meadows Point, I stopped at your place, and you were surrounded by cats. Mrs. Minch had had a fall," she stated, and then she began to laugh softly. "Oh, John Dornier, she sneered, "those were not my cats. They were Mrs. Minch's, and I stopped there to get water for my car, and that Mrs. Minch (and she's dead) fell over a cat and sprained her ankle. I remember you came in and went for the doctor (as if she had ever forgotten him). And so you were trying to get away from me, because of them?"

John Dornier blushed guiltily. "Give me credit, darling," he sturdily protested. "Give me credit for asking to see the doctor, cats and all." And Phyllis gave him all the credit he deserved.

Vegetarianism

The Chinese are the most expert vegetarians in the world, says Frank Thorne, Ph. D., in Hygiene. They are the first in that respect. They can make an entire dinner from soup to nuts out of a few beans.

Appreciated Class

When Jim Fagin, candidate for county clerk of Vigo county started to make his campaign race he bought a new flyover. He didn't know how to use it, but he was very well so he took the demonstration with him on several of his trips.

Name Came From Italy

The name of the present time is undoubtedly connected with Tivoli, an ancient town of Italy, which was the birthplace of the present time near Rome. The name of the ancient city was pronounced Tee-volee. The pronunciation in the United States, however, as of the town of this name in New York, is Ti-vo-lee.

Euphemism

"Alert! Goodnight (to companion)!" "I don't care to meet my tailor. He still owes me the receipt for the money for my last dinner jacket!"—Le Journal Amusant (Paris).

Royalty and the Turf in Long Association

The association of royalty with racing dates back a century or more to the English history. One of the earliest occurrences in the writing of Malinesbury, the Saxon historian, who speaks of certain training horses being sent by Hugo, founder of the French royal house of Capet, as a present to King Athelstan in 1002.

It was Charles II who first imported eastern horses on a large scale into England. His stud was sold to the king of France, and the most celebrated English breed of racers, The Merrie Monarch's example was followed by several sovereigns, and in 1724 the celebrated Arab, Godolphin, arrived in England. He was originally presented to Louis XV by the emperor of Morocco, but was so lightly esteemed by the French that for a time he was used for draft work in Paris.

In England, however, he became a tremendous success, both on the course and in the stud, and it is commonly believed that many of England's most noted racers have had a Godolphin strain in them. This horse is depicted in the old prints with a coat of many colors, a cat, which was said to have played away with grief when Godolphin died at twenty-nine years of age. Another royal importation, Darley, became the sire of Flying Childers, who was the best horse ever known. During a career on the turf he was never beaten.

Believed Birds Talked

Legend and folklore are responsible for the saying, "A little bird told me." The Hindus used to believe the humming bird could impart messages intelligible to humans and the Greek peasants undoubtedly believed birds were endowed with a power to use human language.

BAPTIST MINISTER GIVES TANLAC FULL CREDIT

The greater praise can be accorded a medicine than the voluntary testimony of a minister of the gospel. The preacher's high calling puts a greater responsibility on his every word, and by commending a thing without first assuring himself it is all right, he has been exposed by numerous of prominent ministers. They have put Tanlac to the test of personal service and their words carry conviction because they know what they know to be the truth.

One of the latest to speak out in behalf of Tanlac is Rev. B. B. Bell, a retired Baptist minister, 207 Elm St., San Antonio, Texas, who says:

"Before taking Tanlac I had suffered from stomach troubles for years for over 30 years and there were times when my condition was such that it required almost superhuman effort for me to prepare my sermons and go through with my Sunday services. Indeed, my work seemed like some great outside agency was trying to burden too big to carry in my weak physical condition. "But in six weeks' time Tanlac transformed my entire outlook, giving me a new second, like a new set of nerves and a brand-new digestive system. My appetite became reasonable, my nerves steady, my liver action regular and I could sleep sound for the first time in years. Whenever I have the slightest symptoms of trouble now I always resort to Tanlac, an taking none at present, and it never fails to smooth things out for me. I certainly have the best of reasons for feeling grateful to Tanlac." "Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitutes. Over 50 million bottles sold."

First U. S. Patent

The first United States patent was granted to a descendant of a Waterbury (Conn.) miller. The second was granted to a resident of Waterbury and the number of patents now issued to people of that city is about double that which might be expected from the population.

and average pounds of butter fat 28 one tenth. The highest cow in owned by Weltermann Brothers of Pine City. This cow produces 1484 pounds of milk making a total of 88 and two tenths pounds of butter fat. The highest average herd is owned by Art Peppin also of Pine City which in average fat production of 40 and four tenths pounds of butter fat per cow. It sometimes seems queer that people will still follow the bit or miss method of guessing in all farm projects but parties althly in the dairy end of farming. We would like to see every herd in Pine County in a testing association. We firmly believe that no one can afford not to test his cows & find out the production of these. Everytime we hear remarks made that I have my receipts in your herd but do not average averages so and so. This is all true but it does not tell the true story about your herd. Of these there may be a few cows in your herd that do not average 200, may not average 100 and you may have others in the herd that average better than 300. Therefore the only safe way is to test each and every cow and take the guess out of dairying. Study the following interesting report and compare with your own herd.
