MICHAEL B. HURLEY

The election next Tuesday gives the voters of Pine County an opportunity to give a native son of Pine County, by casting a big vote for Michael B. Hurley of Pine City, who is a candidate for district judge of this district.

Michael Hurley was born in Pine City, Aug. 9, 1879, the son of James Hurley. He is a graduate of the local school and the St. Paul high school. He graduated from the law department of the University of Minnesota in 1912 and received the Master's degree with honors at Yale in 1912. He has been a successful practicing attorney for 22 years and was county attorney of Pine County for two terms.

He was a member of Co. L, 34th Infantry, 83rd division, from the organization in 1917 until after the Armistice. From January until June of 1919 he was on judicial duty and exchanged at St. Paul Second Army Head-quarters of the advance section S. O. S. at Neuchâtel, Switzerland.

He is at present chairman of the citizens' committee of Pine City to assist the Pine City Association at chairman of the Americanization committee of the Minnesota American Legion.

In addition to the above qualifications we wish to mention Mr. Hurley's character, because to our mind a judge's character should be above reproach. If he is to mete out justice we have yet to see a man of like character than Mr. Hurley's honesty, and he has spent the larger portion of his life in Pine County, where he is well known. He is a real American, and we feel for him that any fair comparison of American citizens and American men, he is a clean-cut man whose morals, integrity and character are 100 percent.

He is 45 years old now, and has plenty of years of legal practical experience and has had a mature judgment. Young enough to perform the actions of a young man, but with the force of age of this district and give the proper study to the matters that would come before him as judge.

He has never been a professional politician and political affiliations would never enter into any matter connected with his court.

It looks to us that his legal training, his work as his chamberlain, and the fact that he has had no personal temperament would entitle him to a big vote by the voters of Pine County, the county where he was born, where he was raised, where he has held public office, and where he now resides, a native son of Pine County.

There is no doubt that one of the best lawyers in Pine County is

JOS. E. THERRIEN. Jos. E. Therrien, state representative of Pine County, is a candidate for re-election. Mr. Therrien has been a member of the state legislature and when a representative has served his constituency fairly and efficiently, it has been the custom to return him to office.

As the old saying goes, "It is poor policy to change horses in the middle of the stream," and Mr. Therrien is entitled to be re-elected. While the last time he ran for office he did not appear in the state legislature, he gained the respect of his colleagues and was appointed a member of 8 of the important committees of the house, the committees on Agricultural Taxation, Cooperation, Insurance

State Parks, and Telephones and Telegraph, etc., in addition to other special committees.

The committees on taxes and agriculture were especially important to Pine County. Mr. Therrien was conscientious in his endeavor to serve the people of Pine County to the best of his ability, and we are confident he will do the same thing at the coming session.

Mr. Therrien is one of the real public spirited men of Pine County. He has given liberally of his time and money that were of public benefit. It was largely due to his influence and untiring work that Pine County will receive $7,500 from Hennepin County and $5,000 from the state highway department for the State road and No. 3, the work of which is now being done. Such work on the part of Mr. Therrien deserves recognition and we commend many other things of like nature that he has worked for and accomplished for the welfare of Pine County.

The least that Pine County voters can do toward their appreciation of Mr. Therrien is to return him to office next Tuesday.

GODFREY G. GOODWIN

Any one who has heard Godfrey Goodwin of Cambridge, candidate for congress of this district, can't help but admit he is sincere and will confidently represent his constituents if elected. No greater tribute can be paid Mr. Goodwin than to say that he has been a competent attorney of the community for twenty consecutive years.

The fact that he has performed his duties well and that the citizens have found in him a reliable public official of whom their confidence may be repaid. What more can the voters of the tenth district ask for a congressman?

GOT WISE TO JIMSON'S TRICK HIP

By ALBERT W. TOLMAN

(© Dowdellay, Page & Co.)

S O RUNS the motto: "Every man has a Klondike in his own brain; keep digging." But not every man has a Klondike in his pocketbook. Jimson, however, was a natural gambler. He could put ten dollars out of a one-dollar job with as much ease as a magician can extract a rabbit from his hat, and he could do his work so artfully that he would have to come back to it, to a second, and perhaps even a third time. His life was one long golden dream, now and again punctured, sometimes dazed, and dislocated his right hip bone.

"Sorry," said the hospital surgeon, "but I'm afraid this will incapacitate you for continuous work; for 10% liability, I'll give you a week's pay."

The store compromised for a thousand dollars, of which Jimson's attorney gleefully appropriated a mere half.

"A good case for five thousand," if you didn't bungle it by contributory negligence," grumbled the legal philistine.

"Next time, don't contribute."

"I'm not a gambler, and I'm in the habit of gambling."

It is not recommended for everything.

It is nature's great healer, in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder diseases.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant, and is taken in tablet form.

It is the standard of purity, strength and economy, and is maintained in every store of Swamp Root.

A man naturally feels secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful ingredients.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

The same standard of purity, strength and economy is maintained in every store of Swamp Root.

"What are you going to do?" he demanded suspiciously.

"For your hip, so that you'll never have another trouble with it," the surgeon replied grimly.

Malachi became wide awake in a moment. These girls were preparing to steal away his living.

"Help! Murder! Police!" he screamed.

It was a scene of pandemonium in the hospital room, a scuffle between the two stout nurses with a stretcher, haltered beside his head. Soon Malachi found himself on the floor, and sped away, after knocking him down.

As he was dressing comfortably in his pajamas, a doctor, the ward doctor, accompanied by two stout nurses with a stretcher, halted beside his head. Soon Malachi found himself on the floor, and sped away, after knocking him down.

It was, no doubt, a deliberate lie on his part. The man who had invited him to dine with him had produced his passport, which would have opened the road to him. Instead he committed a faint error in the like of which it would be hard to find in all the records of human action.

"I am a British officer," he declared. "Please take me to your post."

"They were kind to us," said a quickly surrounding him. "British officer! Why was he in the dress of a Yankee farmer? The pass could not have been from those rough, strapping bandits. The die was cast. They demanded the right of search. He saw his error and changed his plea.

"I am a citizen of New York returning from some business in the country," he said.

He drew his gold watch from his pocket—that unflinching sign of the gentleman of fortune—and looked at its dial.

"You can see I am no common fellow," he added. "Let me go on about my business."

The skinner insisted on their right to search him. He began to be frightened. He offered them his watch and a purse full of gold and any amount of British goods to be allowed to go his way.

Now here in the wonder and the mystery in this remarkable proceeding. These men were seeking plunder and here was a handsome prospect. Who could tell what the most of it and her best? They were plunders, but first of all and above all they were patriots. The spirit brooded over the highlands of the Hudson and the Mohawk, and had entered their hearts. The man who called himself John Anderson was compelled to dismount and empty his pockets and lay them bare, one of which was the damning evidence of Arnold's perfidy. A fortune was then within the reach of these three hard-working men of the hills, but straightforwardly they took their pay from the papers, paid off his boot, to the outpost commanded by Colonel Jameson.

This negotiation for the sake of the United States had met with unexpected difficulties. The "skimmers" had been as hard to buy as the learned diplomat.

CHAPTER XXIX

Solomon's Last Fight.

Meanwhile, Margaret and her mother had come up the river in a barge with General and Mrs. Arnold to the house of the skinner. They had gone on a tour of inspection. He had left headquarters after the noon meal with a curious message in his pocket and a feeling of mortal relief. The skinner had been given orders to hide by the mother of a captain in one of the regiments. She said that it had been given to her by a man whom she did not know. Jack had been busy when it came to open and read his mother's note, of which was the damning evidence of Arnold's perfidy.

A fortune was then within the reach of these three hard-working men of the hills, but straightforwardly they took their pay from the papers, paid off his boot, to the outpost commanded by Colonel Jameson.

"My dear friend: I have good news from down the river. The danger is passed.

HENRY THORNHILL.

Jack being out of camp, Margaret had found Solomon. Toward the day's end he had gone alone on the road with a young lady and her mother and Mrs. Arnold.

Jack was riding into camp from an outpost of the army. The day was in its twilight. He had been given a furlough on his leave as an approved a sentinel post. Three figures were standing in the dusky road.

"Halt! Who comes there?" one of them sang out.

"I am the soldier of Margaret. Her chivalry was more like a phrase of music than a demand. He demurred.

"I am one of the great army of lovers," said he.

"Advances and give the countersign," she commanded.

A sentinel held her in his arms and whispered: "I love you."

"The countersign is correct, but before I let you pass, give me one more look into your heart."

"As you like—but—why?"

"I may be sure that you do not blame England for the folly of her king."

"I swear it."

"Then you shall enlist with your king. He has never been good to me."

Lady Hare stood with Mrs. Arnold near the horses.

"I demand the countersign," said the latter.

"And much goes with it," said the young man as he kissed her, and then he embraced the mother of his sweetheart and added:

"I hope that you are also to enlist with your king."

"No, I am to leave my little rebel with you and return to New York."

"Will you give me a ride?" Margaret asked her lover. "I'll get her behind you."

Solomon took off the saddle and tightened the blanket girth.

"Thar, 'tain't over clean, but now ye kin ride," said he.

Soon the two were riding, she in front, and he had ridden long before through the shady, mallow'd bush in Tyrion county.

They dismounted at Arnold's door.

"For a time I shan't have much to do, but soon I'll be fit for great promotion and more leisure," he said.

"Tell me the good news," she urged.

The meal was first roasted at a tem-

"I expect to be the happiest man in the army, and the master of this house and your husband."

"And you and I shall be as one," she said, smiling at him, "the day which may be true also of your people and mine."

He kissed her and bade her goodnight and then visited the family and batteries. He had communicated with every outfit. His plan was complete. About midnight when he and Solomon were lying down, to rest, two horsemen rode up to the door and stopped at his door.

They were aides de camp who quickly surrounded him. "British officer!" Why was he in the dress of a Yankee farmer? The pass could not have been from those rough, strapping bandits. The die was cast.

They demanded the right of search. He saw his error and changed his plea.

"I am a British officer," he declared. "Please take me to your post."
