NOLAN IS ELECTED SPEAKER OF HOUSE

Forty-third Biennial Session of Minnesota Legislature Formally Opened.

St. Paul, Minn., January 3.—The 43rd biennial session of the Minnesota legislature opened today at 10 o'clock in the capitol building. The session was opened by the reading of a prayer by Rev. J. J. Conroy, pastor of St. Paul's cathedral. The session was opened by the reading of a prayer by Rev. J. J. Conroy, pastor of St. Paul's cathedral. The session was opened by the reading of a prayer by Rev. J. J. Conroy, pastor of St. Paul's cathedral.

Hancock and Oakland Hold Out for Low Bids to Save Money but are Overruled

Several hundred dollars were saved by the county printing to the high bid of the Askov American. Stepan moved the letting of the contract to the Askov paper at a bid that was higher than both the Pine City and the Brainerd Courier. Thomas overruled the motion. When put to a vote, these two voted for it and Hancock and Oakland voted against. That left the matter open to the chairman who voted for the resolution by declaring the motion carried.

Farmers Set Off From Villages

The annual meeting of the Pine County board of commissioners got under way in a hall at Askov Tuesday night when the farmers set off from the county at that village. There has been a heavy gathering, according to the chairman for the evening session.

Big Basketball Game Saturday

The Pine City alumni basketball team has won two games in the past few days. Last Saturday evening they defeated the Mora team by a score of 49 to 12. At the end of the first half the score stood 10 to 2 in favor of the home boys. The game was a slow one, as it wasn't at all necessary for Pine City to extend themselves. There was a large crowd out to witness the game.

The Casting Out of Jimmy Myers

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

IT SEEMED a cruel thing to do, but we had to do it. For ours is an ordinarily a quiet office. We have never had a riot since. The last day we ever fought than most newspaper offices have, and while it hardly may be said that we strive to please, in the main we try to get on with the people, and tell them as much truth as they are entitled to for ten cents a week. Naturally, we have our best to get up an spirited paper, and in that the Myers boy had our best exactly. He was indomitable, more than that he tried with all his might to exercise his best judgment, and he could say that he was a reporter, yet everyone around the office admitted that he was unlucky.

We took him from the college at the end of two years. He had been running the college paper for a year, and knew the mechanics about as well as any boy, and since he was equipped as far as education went, he seemed to be a likely sort of a boy for reporter and advertising solicitor.

One of the first things that happened to him was a mistake in an item about the opera house. He said that a graduate had taken a lien on it. What he meant was a lease, and as he got the item from a man who didn't know the difference, and as the boy stuck to it that the man had said, and he was not, we did not charge him with it. A few days later he wrote for a newspaper a paid local article criticizing some one who was going about the county peddling plates, frames and taking orders for enlarged pictures. That was not so bad, but it turned out that the peddler was a woman, and she came with a ravine and camped in the office for two days waiting for Jimmy Myers to come in and out of the back door, stick his copy on the board by stealth, and travel only in the alley. He had no blame for that, either, as the photographer who paid for the item said the peddler was a woman, and the boy was not a clairvoyant.

One dull day he wrote a piece about a man who placed a bet on the right in Red Martin's room. Jimmy said he wasn't afraid of Red Martin, and he wasn't. The item was a regular enough, and led to a raid on the place, which disclosed our best advertiser sitting in the game. To save his name, he must own shares before the town, to print it meant his—at our expense. It was embarrassing, but it wasn't exactly the boy's fault. He was just one of those unfortunate circumstances that come up in life. However, the advertiser afterward began to hate the boy.

He must have been used to injustice all his life, for there is a vertical line between his eyes that marked trouble. The line deepened as he went further and further into the newspaper business, for generally speaking, a person who is unlucky has less to fear handling dynamite than he has writing local items on a newspaper.

A few days after the raid on the poker room Jimmy, who had acquired a particularly fine knowledge of the "hem of her skirt was trimmed with pink crushed roses" and he was in no way to blame for the fact that the printer accidentally put an "R" for a "K" in Jimmy, though the woman's husband chased Jimmy into a culvert under Main street and a chert under Main street and a blintz was a lot of the afternoon, while the chert crowd informed the federal bureau whenever Jimmy was out to get out of either end of his prison.

The printer that made the mistake brought Jimmy a new copy of clothes, we managed to print an apology that cooled the husband's wrath, and for ten days, or perhaps two weeks, for his life was a round of joy. Everything was done promptly, accurately and with remarkable intelligence. He waited at his work and stacked up more copy than the printer could set up in type.

He told us in confidence that he never felt better and gay than something didn't happen. He was not in the building that evening when the paper went to press, but stay it was printed and the carrier had left the office he came in singing "Stars My Sweetheart, For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." To his credit, and out down to read the paper.

Suddenly the smile on his face widened as with foot, he snatched the paper across the table to the book-keeper, who read this item:

Miss Mrs. Lilliam Gray, Prepare for the hot weather, my good woman. There is only one way now; get a gasoline stove of Harley & Co., and you need not fear any future heat.

And it wasn't Jimmy's fault. The foreman had merely misquoting a local line, but that explains a head line, but that explains a head line, but that explains a head line.

Jimmy was beginning to acquire a reputation as a joker. People were inclined to believe that such things just happened. They did not happen before Mr. James Myers came to the paper, and they didn't begin with his coming and continue during his engagement. This reassured the comforters of the Chicago, and those interested in our downfall. The next day the "Statement" wrote a burning editorial denouncing us "for an utter lack of all sense of common decency" that permitted us "to violate the sacred feeling known to the human heart for the sake of getting a small thing from the unlikeliest. We were two weeks explaining that the error was not the boy's fault.

The summer wore away and the dog days came. The Democratic state campaign was about to open in our town, and another campaign was under way from all over the Missouri valley. There was a lack of flags at the dog days shops. The Fourth of July celebration had taken all the stock. The only materials available were some red hunting, some white hunting, and some blue hunting with stars upon it. With this hunting the committee on reception covered the speakers stand, wrapping the canopy under which the orators stood in the solid colors and the star-spangled blue.

About noon of the day of the speaking the city clerk, who wore the little button of the U. S. A., asked Jimmy if he didn't want someone to take care of the Democratic meeting. Jimmy, who hated politics, was running his legs off to get the names of the victors, and was glad to have the help. He turned in the coordinated copy without reading it, as he had done with the city clerk's articles many times before, and this is what greeted his horrified eyes when he read the paper:

"Under the Stars and Bars" Democracy Opposes Its State Campaign Under the Label Emblemation Today. A Fitting Token. Treasonable Intentions Have a Proper Setting.

And then followed half a column of most violent abuse of the Democrats who had charge of the affair. Jimmy did not appear on the street that night, but the next morning, when he came down, the office was crowded with indignant Democrats "stopping their noses at the smell of the boy's words."

Jimmy had a peculiar knack of getting up little stories of the town—not exactly news galleys, but little bits that made people smile without rancor when they saw their names in the quantity traded items. One day he wrote up a story of a little boy whose please bought extra copies for their relatives. We were proud of Jimmy, and assigned him to write up the funeral. That was to be a "day of triumph in Capris." There being no time, therefore, the judges of the town—and the governor was known as a "joker"—had had with one another to make the funeral the greatest possible funeral ever given in the state. The whole town turned out, and the foreman of our office, and everyone in the back room who could be spared was at the governor's funeral. We put a long letter on to call by the undertaker for a paid job which the undertaker had written for the paper that day.

Jimmy's face was beaming as he snuggled up to his clock at three o'clock the afternoon. He said he had a great story. Trusting the foreman to read the proof, Jimmy rushed out to get from a United States senator who was attending the funeral an interview on the sugar scandal, for the Kansas City Star.

The rest of us did not get back from the cemetery until the carriers had left the office, and this is what we found:

"The solemn mood of the organ had scarcely died away, like a quivering sob upon the fragrant air, when the mournful procession of citizens began filing past the flower-laden bier to view the casket face of their beloved friend and honored townsmen. In the grief-stricken hush that followed might be heard the sobs of some young women as he passed for the last time before the coffin.

"At this particular time we desire to call the attention of our readers to the admirable work done by our hastening undertaker, J. B. Morgan. He has been in the city but a short time, yet by his efficient work and careful attention to duty, he has built up an enviable reputation and an excellent custom among the best families of the city. All work done with neatness and dispatch. We strive to please.

"When the last sad mourner had filed by, the pallbearers took their sorrowful task, and slowly, as the band played the 'Dead March in Saul,' the great throng assembled in the street viewed the mortal remains of Governor Antrhus start on their last journey."

Of course it wasn't Jimmy's fault. The "rising young, unmarriageable, good looking, well-to-do" man, who made up the forms, five dollars to work his paid local in the funeral notice. But after that—Jimmy died to the public sentiment would no longer stand him as a reporter on the paper, and we gave him a good letter and sent him onward and upward. He realized that his lack was a great grief of some young women who had borne with him in all patience.

The day that he left he was instructing the new man in the ways of the town. Rev. Frank Milligan came in with a church notice. Jimmy took the notice and began marking it for the printer. As the door opened, Jimmy, with his head still in his work, called across the room to the new man: "That was old Jimmy that just went out—how do you like him? He will lead you up with trick about himself. He rings in nervous. Beate around with church special notices that ought to be paid for, and refers to get them in free; likes to be referred to as doctor; slips in mean items about his congregation. If you don't work him, and insists on talking religion Saturday morning when you are too busy to quit, generally that, he has an awful beard—but his out; he will make life a burden if you don't; and if you do he will go to the old man with it. And say you are not treating him right."

There was a rattling and a scratching on the wire partition between Jimmy and the door. Jimmy looked up from his work and saw the bright little figure of Parson Milligan coming out from the door—a printer had come in when it opened and had then taken a position as book-keeper. Jimmy took the paper and lay it off the top of the back door of the office, down the alley. "Looked the sun's purple rain." It was not his fault. He has only told the truth—where it would do the most good.

Quite cold. The bowers are built on high tarred poles to keep away the white ants, a constant nuisance.

Really Dry Territory. One of the most arid parts of the United States is what is called the Papago country, a region including about 10,000 square miles. many groups of volcanic and other mountains, separated by broad arid basins, with, though a portion is small and the temperature is high, are a scant growth of desert plants.

People Talked About Uncle Sam Will Teach Nature Study

Public school officials and teachers the country over will be interested in a new departure of the United States Bureau of Education as outlined in the following letter from John J. Ferguson, United States commissioner of education, to Mrs. John Dickson Sherman, chairman of the department of applied education of the General Federation of Women's clubs:

"Dear Mrs. Sherman: I have read with interest your pamphlet on natural science and nature study in the schools, including a graded course of study from the kindergarten through the sixth grade. The Bureau of Education fully recognizes the importance of the study of the practical application of the natural sciences to everyday life. It believes that the subject should receive special attention in the kindergarten and the elementary grades, and that the subject should be made an integral part of the school course, recognized as one of the serious subjects of the curriculum, and credit given as for other recognized subjects. It appreciates the work of the General Federation of Women's clubs in its effort to awaken a general understanding among parents of the value of science teaching in the education of the child and urge that the work be continued. The Bureau will support the project and give active co-operation in so far as it is possible for it to do so."

The General Federation has undertaken to get nature study into the schools and Mrs. Sherman has now secured the approval and co-operation of the federal and lessons now being prepared by the bureau of education.

New Georgia Senator in Watson's Seat

Walter F. George, the new senator from Georgia, is in his seat and is serving in the committees on civil service, immigration and post offices and post roads. He takes the place made vacant by the death of Senator Thomas E. Watson. The circumstance of his taking his seat will long be remembered, for the reason that he played his part in the seating of Georgia's "grand old lady," Mrs. W. H. Felton, as senator by appointment of Governor Hardwick.

Convinced that her husband, eighty-seven, will go down to history as the first woman to take seat in the United States senate. To be sure, her actual service was only a few hours, but she was actually sworn in. Moreover, she made a speech as senator, being recognized by Senator Cullum, president pro tem of the senate, as "the junior senator from Georgia." Senator George made this possible by withholding his credentials, which certified to his election November 7.

Divorce Wars on the "Parasites"

Judge Timothy D. Hurley of the Superior court of Cook county, Ill., has created a sensation in Chicago divorce circles by his decision that the fault in the affections of misunderstood husbands or abused wives are to be the target of sweeping injunctions or restraining orders in all cases where evidence of home undermining is properly presented to him.

Convinced by the testimony of hundreds of victims of the "other man" or "other woman" that powerful influence exerted by an outside agency might have broken the triangle before it was formed and saved another home and family to society, Judge Hurley widened the scope of his war on "wavy divorces" to include a drive on the "domestic parasite."

Information that her husband had succumbed to a siren, if included in a petition for separate maintenance by the wife, will result, Judge Hurley asserts, in the issuance of a forthwith injunction for the "other woman" to explain her conduct.

Deposed Boy Emperor of China Weds

The news from China changes with every 24 hours. But one thing is apparently quite certain: Puan Tung, the deposed boy emperor, is now a married man and is celebrating his honeymoon. Anyway, the wedding of the seventeen-year-old former emperor was celebrated the other day with all the pomp and ceremony of imperial days.

Hsuan Tung has continued to reside in the ancient palace of the forbidden city since he abdicated for the establishment of the Chinese republic. He was educated under an English tutor and is described as a bright youth, despite the rigid seclusion to which he has been subjected. He receives a yearly allowance from the republic, with the right to maintain a royal establishment in keeping with the glory of the old Chinese emperors. Since 1911 he has been practically a prisoner.

The Princess Kuo Chin-Si, bride of the former emperor, is a daughter of Prince Kuo Chin-Si, one of the Manchou court dignitaries.

Quits Mayor's Job to Become Senator

Mayor James Couzens of Detroit has quit his job to become United States senator from Michigan in the place of Senator Truman H. Newberry, resigned. Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck appointed him to fill the unexpired term.

ORDEAL FOR UGANDA BRIDE. Custom Ordains That Mrs. Newlywed Must Weep for Eight Days Without Cessation.

The Bahama tribesmen of Uganda Central Africa—literally in the very heart of Africa—are the wildest and most uncivilized people of the world. They have unusually peculiar customs. Perhaps the most interesting of these is the manner in which a bride is supposed to conduct herself after her marriage.

To begin with, a bride is literally dragged away from her home by her husband. He fastens a rope around her legs and hold fast to her. Then the bridegroom pulls as hard as he can. If he cannot succeed in overpowering the strength of his bride's family they weaken their hold on the fether and make it appear that the husband has won his tug-of-war.

Then the victorious bridegroom takes his bride to the home of his mother. The most passionate weeping is done by the bride. She cries for eight days without stopping.

The New Venice. Any modernization of Venice would be a profanity, yet we cannot wonder that this city with its glorious maritime tradition, long a center of a world port once more. How to accomplish this without marring the beauty of the remarkable aquatic city was a problem. This danger has been happily averted by a wise governmental policy. Trade is to be diverted away from the city itself to a great new harbor, and industrial centers now being built upon the mainland at Murano and Mestre. These points are connected with the sea by a new ship canal dredged across the lagoons in continuation of the Giudecca canal—Scientific American.

Australia Hot in December

About Christmas time the hottest day occurs in Brisbane, Australia. That with the weather making 7, 11 and 4 o'clock each day, the houses built on stilts from six to nine feet high, and the hot country, are a few of the things which most impress the new American arrivals in Australia. The houses are of brick and frame, and there are no heating plants, although July and August are
