Pretty Wedding at Dr. Wiseman's Home

One of the prettiest weddings of the season was that which took place yesterday afternoon at the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. L. Wiseman, when their daughter, Miss Ruth, was united in marriage to Capt. Shuey.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with flowers, there being a profusion of pink and white sweet peas, lilies of the valley, pink roses and bridal wreath.

The bride was attired in a wedding gown of broaded pussy-willow taffeta accented trimmings, and a headpiece of pearls with a veil arrangement.

The groom was wearing a tuxedo suit, and carried a shower bouquet of brides' roses and lilies of the valley.

Capacity Crowd Attend Graduation

Every seat was taken, standing room was at a premium and many were turned away for lack of room at the graduation exercises of the local high school at the Family theatre last Friday evening.

The salutatory by Miss Mildred Solotka and the salutatory by Miss Louise Wehrle were wonderfully well given and it was easy to understand why they were at the head of the class.

The class was fortunate in having J. Adam Bede as the principal speaker of the evening. His address was of the usual Bede excellence, good common sense interspersed with humor.

Twenty-one graduates received diplomas. The following received their diplomas: Pauline Hermann, Hazel Johnson, Clara Kirk, Hilda Lundin, Alina Mack, Lillian Peterson, George Roberts, Mildred Solotka, Margaret Schell, Juliana Sheehy, Chas. Wilcox, Ernest Wilcox, Louise Wehrle and William Johnson.

"But," said Jake with devilish face, "I got you, too. You raised one knee, and raised the pine hand on it. If I give you up, there's something I'm going to have you do. You'll take my terms and do what I ask—or I'll drop you right there and now."

There was not the faintest doubt that he meant what he said. The glance into his eyes told the listener that.

"Nothing doing," said Billy quickly. "I don't take orders from a malefactor. Least of all at the point of a gun."

"You'll take my terms and do what I ask—or I'll drop you right there and now."

reply would the captive vouchsafe to any of Arkwright's queries. Billy took the Vicente by the arm led him outside, and raised his pine hand anxiously. "I gave my list one to Jake," Bertrand pronounced his case. "But what a triumph!" he said with a dazed air.

"It's not the sort I enjoy," replied Billy, "but I had to see it through."

"Thank," said Arkwright, "there's a gate in the field—come just up here. I think you'll find it interesting. It's his hinges and bring it up there. We must get the man out; he can't walk."

"I turned abruptly to Billy. "And now will you explain, Mr. Spencer?"

"Sure," said Billy. "I believe you know it was I who came across the thieves on the night of the holdup, and got me out of the hole."

"I happened to come across some tracks of a cycle tire on the field here," he said. "I made up my mind that they were mine, but they were not. I wish I'd tried them before. I'm used to following trails—and had a lot of experience in it."

"What did the two of them do then?"

"The one that was dead here, I think, was the one that was dead here. So lame that he had to be carried or dragged half of the way. It must have taken quite a while."

"I don't think," murmured Billy, "that I ever knew policemen arrive so—what's the word?"

Panke and the constable arrived, carrying a gate between them, which was taken into the cave. The prostrate Jake was lifted onto it, and borne out into the open.

"Wait! Sit him down," said Arkwright suddenly. "He's safe, anyhow. We've got to get the other one. He turned to Billy. "You've seen nothing of her—the woman?"

"I've seen her," said Billy. "I saw her in the cave. She was sitting on the ground, looking towards the distant group of men on the gate."

"That's the throat!" said Arkwright. "The throat—the throat—this changes the game—this has to be careful with the intake. On the second speed she goes over the roughest ground like a bird—on the level road she'll do eighty. If you could get her out clear of the bushes—but you'd never get away with it—"

"The woman turned to her, gasping. "Will you let me try?" she exclaimed.

"I'll then that a shock of revulsion came over Arkwright. She was the female rattle-snake who had nearly killed Billy, and caused all the trouble. "You're Arkwright's hands, were they broken man in the hands of the police—"

"A trifle among the bushes at the cave, she saw the two women turn quickly. De Jussac, stepping aside, halted and stared blankly at them both.

"Another chance for me?" cried Arkwright. "I thought so. This way, Panke!"

"My name's Arkwright," said the man, as soon as possible, and that two of us wait in the cave. The woman probably visits it only at night, and the rest time she comes with supplies, we shall get her."

"The weak point about that," replied Arkwright patronizingly, "is that it's not certain she only comes at night; this is a lonely place, and it won't surprise me if she is close by. She may have hidden away in the We'll search these pits thoroughly first. There are half a dozen of these caves, and well go through them all. My name's Arkwright, said Billy. best feat. But there was no expression in the woman's eyes; only an emotion so broken and pliant that somehow a lump came into Arkwright's throat. She had not the faintest doubt that this hunted woman was.

"You know who I am," the woman said thickly. "I can see it in your face." She came a step nearer. "Are you going to call out?"

Arkwright did not answer that question. "Is he much hurt?" she said quietly, looking towards the distant group of men on the gate.

"The man on the gate," said Arkwright. "He's safe, anyhow. We've got to get the other one. He turned to Billy. "You've seen nothing of her—the woman?"

"I can ride anything with an engine to it!" said Kate desperately. There was a gleam of hope in the hunted eyes of the woman. TODAY I AM REAL WELL

So Writing Woman After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Jamesston N. Y.—"I was nervous, easily excited and discouraged and had no ambition. Part of the time I was not able to sit up as I suffered with pains in my back and with weakness. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, both the liquid and tablet forms, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sensitive Wash for inflammation. Today I am real well and run a rooming house and do the work. I recommend your medicine to every woman who complains and you may use my letter to help any one else who is passing through the Change of Life now or later. The Vegetable Compound in the house, ready to take when I feel the need of it."—Mrs. ALICE D. DAVIS, 203 W. Second St., Jamesston, N. Y.

"Often some slight derangement may cause a general upset condition of the whole system, indicated by such symptoms as nervousness, headache, indigestion and general weakness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine for such troubles. In many cases it has removed the cause of the trouble."

WHY NOT A HAPPINESS POLICY?

New York Insurance Men Have Come Forward With New Home Comfort What Startling Idea.

The frequency of divorce—proving that a considerable percentage of marriages are failures—together with the accompanying problems of alimony and the need of support for the children, has very naturally brought forward, through enterprising insurance men, the recomposition of a new insurance policy established as a system.

The subject is said to have been serried and scientifically discussed by insurance experts in New York on the basis of comparable hazards. These men, having figured out the matter, the other concerned and disinterested. The fact that matrimony is the next big gamble to be scientifically safeguarded by insurance.

Two forms of policy have been suggested, the one tentatively frank, the other camouflaged and diplomatic. The first suggestion was that a straight insurance policy against divorce be issued. But this seems rather unwholesome to win favor with happy brides and grooms, who, of course, believe that the other camouflaged and diplomatic. Another recommendation was that the policies be written for a happy marriage rather than against unhappy matrimony.

New York Insurance Men Have Come Forward With New Home Comfort What Startling Idea.

The frequency of divorce—proving that a considerable percentage of marriages are failures—together with the accompanying problems of alimony and the need of support for the children, has very naturally brought forward, through enterprising insurance men, the recomposition of a new insurance policy established as a system.

The subject is said to have been serried and scientifically discussed by insurance experts in New York on the basis of comparable hazards. These men, having figured out the matter, the other concerned and disinterested. The fact that matrimony is the next big gamble to be scientifically safeguarded by insurance.

Two forms of policy have been suggested, the one tentatively frank, the other camouflaged and diplomatic. The first suggestion was that a straight insurance policy against divorce be issued. But this seems rather unwholesome to win favor with happy brides and grooms, who, of course, believe that the other camouflaged and diplomatic. Another recommendation was that the policies be written for a happy marriage rather than against unhappy matrimony.

The Bacchanalante Sermon was delivered by Rev. John Lowe at the Methodist Church on Sunday evening May 27. The church was decorated fittingly for the occasion. Special music was provided and a solo was given by Frank Göttery.

Rev. Lowe selected his text from Romans 8:12—"We are Debtors."
 "We the heirs of all the ages in the foremost files of time," sings Tennyson, the great poet emphasizing the great truth that we owe all that makes life worth living to those who have preceded us, those men and women, many of them now lying in forgotten graves made our present great opportunities possible and as the Savior said long ago "Other men labored and ye have entered into their labors."

The object of the address was to make us see and realize that we are debtors to our ancestors. We are also debtors for the great blessings of civil and religious liberty which is ours to possess. The reason from which we spring have been slowly working their way up from serfdom and penance toward the present condition of liberty.

Mr. Lowe congratulated the graduates because they had an anxiety that has through its struggle and conflict passed on such great opportunities and blessings to them. He also congratulated them because they were born in this land. He said that it was no small thing to be living in America, young and full of life and health—in America, the land of opportunity, in this the best century the world ever knew.

We are also debtors to our descendants. We must pass on to the future generation the blessings we have received—Health, liberty, morals and religion.
 Most of all we are debtors to God. No life can be a real success that fails to take God into account. The real business of life after all is to be a sincere follower of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

"With all thy getting get wisdom." Wisdom and Christ and Heaven are one." We owe more to Christ than to all the other men who ever walked this earth. In the conclusion of his address, Rev. Lowe advised us against common dangers. We must guard against lack of restraint. We must not mistake license for liberty. We should always be thorough. Guard against low aim. Aim High. As Emerson says, "Hitch your wag on to a Star."

Mildred Sobotka

Mildred Sobotka entered the Pine City High School in the fall of the year 1919, and is one of the few original members of the class of '23.

When she started to school as a first grader, a demure but talkative little maiden, she was always at the head of her class and so on through twelve long but fleeting years.

Mildred has always taken an active part in class affairs and in everything that has benefited her school, and now that "the four long years of high school" are successfully completed, we find her valedictorian of the class of 1923.

Monopoly? No!

MONOPOLY is abhorrent to the minds of the American people and will not be tolerated by them.

Monopoly means arbitrary control; it means curtailing opportunities for the individual and such curtailing strikes at the root of American institutions.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is American to the core. It has no desire to achieve a monopoly believing that, because of its carefully worked out plan of organization, its admitted efficiency in every department and its carefully trained, hard-working, loyal body of employees, it has no need for arbitrary control to meet any competitive condition which may arise.

The detailed service, the insistence upon quality, and the consistently fair price at which its products are sold insure the Company its fair share of the business in the Middle Western States where it is organized for service.

No organization can acquire a monopoly in the oil business. The source of supply of raw material is too scattered and its value is too great for any one company to get an effective control. Without such control monopoly is impossible.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is the largest single factor in the oil business of the Middle West. Yet, the principal source of its crude oil supply is in the hands of others.

Its competitors have twice as many service stations as it has, and about an equal number of bulk stations, while their combined refining capacity is more than five times that of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

To indicate the futility of attempting to monopolize the oil industry it is only necessary to quote the following paragraphs from the New York Journal of Commerce:

During 1921 there were organized 936 new oil companies, with a total capitalization of $1,255,675,000 and

During 1922 784 new oil companies were organized with a capitalization of $1,639,693,000.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is growing as the need for its products and service grows. It is ambitious, not to secure a monopoly of the oil business, but, to maintain a steady, healthy growth, by rendering the greatest service possible to thirty million people in the Middle West.

Kill 500 Horses a Week for Food in Berlin

Washington—Five hundred horses a week are being slaughtered for food in Berlin, according to reports to the Commerce department. Finds Gas Shut Off; Can't Keep Bargain

Chicago—Oscar Schultz, whose cheese store recently was closed by his creditors, walked into a police station and asked to be arrested for breach of contract. He explained he sold his $1,000 insurance policy to Arnold Hoff for $5, with the promise that he would go home and commit suicide by gas. After receiving the $5 in a saloon he wended his way homeward to turn on the gas. "I wish to be arrested for breaching a contract," he said. "I promised to commit suicide, but I ain't got my gas bill and the company won't let me off. My $5 is all spent—no pay, no gas, no gas, no die."

STOLEN PAPERS FOUND AT BALL

recovery of Diplomat's Wallet Just as Thrilling as Best of Nick Carter Tales.

Prague.—During the joyous days of the recent carnival in Prague there was performed, quite unknown to the revelers, a clever piece of detective work on the part of the local police which resulted in the restoring to a distracted diplomat of certain papers which to him were of the greatest importance.

The police worked quietly into the night life of the city, and such was their success that before the night was over the job had two new results and a young man was speaking out of Prague to the foreign office of his government, expressing heartfelt thanks to the local inspector of police who, in this narrative, can be referred to only as Mr. D.—

Valuable Papers Stolen.

Mr. D.— seated one afternoon in his office behind a pile of papers, was interrupted suddenly by a young diplomat representing one of the great powers of Europe, who declared his business to be most urgent. He related that a wallet containing documents of great value had been stolen. He had left it for a few moments on his writing table to go to another room in the legation, and when he returned it was gone. Furthermore, there were jewels in the wallet, his personal property, but their abstraction did not disturb the young foreigner half as much as the loss of the papers.

"I must leave Prague by the night train," he explained to the inspector, "and I will be raised for life if these documents cannot be recovered."

Mr. D.— drove to the legation and looked over the wallet substituted for that of the diplomat. It contained a Prague newspaper from which a clipping had been made. The inspector secured an intact copy of this paper, and was thus able to read the clipping cut out by the thief. Also Mr. D.— found traces of face powder between the leaves of the wallet.

The clipping announced that there was to be a masked ball that evening at a well-known hall in the city. With this as his main clue the inspector assured the diplomat that he would restore the papers, and, after assigning a detective to watch the palace, he hurried away to don a fancy costume. He was going to the ball.

Dressed as Officer.

The only costume he could find was his old full dress Austrian uniform, a souvenir of the days when Prague was a part of the Austrian empire. As he was leaving his house, the detective at the legation telephoned him the daughter of the janitor of the legation had just left her apartments in the costume of Carmen.

It did not take the inspector long to locate Carmen at the ball. She was seeking a man who eventually appeared in the uniform of a Hungarian magnate, and wearing the customary black mask. The pair withdrew discreetly into a quiet room, and the inspector waited at the only exit.

Soon they came out, the girl wearing an expensive necklace she had not had on before. The inspector approached Carmen and the Hungarian magnate and spoke a few quiet but well-chosen words. There was no protest and no scene. They preceded him to a taxi, and on the way to the railroad station the inspector stopped at police headquarters. Expert hands searched the pair, and the inspector quietly took possession of the diplomat's portfolio, the necklace, and other pieces of jewelry.

Mr. D.— drove on alone, and arrived at the railroad station after the gates for the night train had been closed. On the platform he found the young diplomat with watch in hand trying to persuade the train crew to delay departure for just a few moments.

Mr. D.— made good his promise. He handed the diplomat his portfolio and in it were intact the missing documents and the jewels.

Oldest Bell on Record Used in Italian Church

The oldest known bell still in use is in the parish church of St. Mary Loreto, at Villalago, in the Abruzzi mountains, and bears the inscription "Ave Maria" followed by "Anno Domini 600." Considering that bells were invented, according to church authorities, by Pope Eusebius, who died in 600, no older bell is recorded.

Fox Fur High in Leipzig. Leipzig.—The fur auction here, which has closed after three weeks, was attended by many American buyers. These paid high prices for raw fox furs, which were even higher than the usual figure for this class of pelts.

Gang Had Been There, Police Dancers Found

The police of Rochester, N. Y., wound up their annual dance with the band playing "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here." When the merry-makers retired to the cloak rooms, they found the gang had gone, and with it the cloak rack, overcoats and other wraps that the members could lay their hands on.

NOVELTY-KNIT JACQUETTE;

ABOUT AFTERNOON FROCKS

NOW is the time of year when country club environment in fashion to beauty and art in dress commingled with the loveliness of the summer background.

The knitted jacquette is giving an outstanding success in its ready response to a demand for a garment which shall remain as it has remained since the foundation of the Government...

Exquisite Jacquette Model

points of style distinction. Consider the exquisite jacquette model portrayed in this picture, for it is an exponent of the highest in knitted art.

Many interesting types are noted among the knitted jacquettes, a par- ture or they are out to suggest a cape. Ribbon girdles and sashes fastened at the front or sides and handsome beaded ornaments contribute important finishing touches.

Two Pretty Afternoon Frocks particularly attractive one developing such snails which come from the sides so as to form a draped effect when tied.

A novel introduction in dressy knitted jacquette models is the inter- stitiches of flimsy with brilliant color, so as to give the effect of being beaded.

Another unique effect is attained through assembling three colors in a pattern so as to present a blurred or mottled effect.

Crapes in variety of surfaces and both figured and plain, still com- mands more attention than any other fabric in the realm of afternoon frocks, but it has many rivals that Scarf Sleeves. Scarf sleeves are very effective in this material or in lace the same shade of the frock. The most extreme ones reach almost to the floor and occasionally one is permitted extra length so it may trail on the floor.

Satin Coats. Coats of satin, trimmed with mola- skin or ermine, show the new Mod- ern collars that are said to be particularly popular in London. Frequently, too, they are draped and caught up at the neckline with a buckle or ornament.

Rejuvenating Frocks. This is an admirable season for re-juvenating clothes, for bouclés and skirts are frequently of different colors and materials, and separate blouses and jackets of figured material are joined to plain fabrics for skirts.

Best Feed for Sows. The feed of the sow during the time she is suckling the young should be such as will stimulate the production of milk. Bran is an excellent feed for this purpose.

Manure Pits Are Most Desirable

To Retain Fertilizing Value to Greatest Extent It is Best to Exclude Air.

Manure pits or boxes are desirable for the temporary storage of manure especially in town and cities. These have been widely advocated, but the recently has been that nature often becomes infested before it is put into them, and this frequently breaks out before the boxes are covered with dirt.

In order to retain the fertilizing value of manure to the greatest extent it is advised to exclude the air from it as much as possible and to protect it from the leaching action of rains. It is not necessary, therefore, to cover a large part of the top of the box with a trap, but merely to have holes large enough to attract flies to the light, and to cover these holes with ordinary conical traps, with the legs cut off, so the bottom of the trap will fit closely to the box.

Make Bin of Concrete. Manure boxes should be used by all stock owners in towns and cities; they are also adapted to farms. The basins of the manure bin should be governed by individual needs, but for use on the farm it is desirable to make it large enough to hold all the manure produced during the busiest season of the year.

Two afternoon frocks of plain crepe de chine, pictured here, are conservative expressions of the mode that will prove themselves adaptable to almost any occasion. The plainer of the two, with bloused bodice, is effective in any of the season's darker colors and it makes a graceful background for a handsome pair of two-toned satin ribbons.

Maggot Trap Described. Attention is directed to a maggot trap as described in Farmers' Bulletin 581 of the Department of Agriculture. Where large quantities of manure are produced on a farm this method of storing the manure on a platform and trapping the maggots which breed out may be more convenient than the manure bin.

Install Farm Drainage System in Dry Season

If it does associate professors of drainage of the University of Minnesota, contends that a dry season is the best time to install farm drainage systems. "Farm drainage," he says, "is a preventive of drought because by opening up and keeping clear the soil pores it increases the storage room for moisture, gives more uniform distribution of soil moisture and improves the tilth of the soil."

Professor Row gives three reasons why a dry season is the best time to install drainage: First, the work can be done with greater ease and more cheaply at such times because the work can be done in dry weather because the soil is so hard that it is not tampered by heavy rains; second, the most important of all is the preparation in advance for the removal of excess moisture in the wet seasons sure to follow.

In summing up Professor Row says: "Farm drainage prevents drought and is a means of resisting its effects. Careful design and a complete plan are essential to good results in drainage which, if installed under these conditions, is an inexpensive and permanent insurance of crops against drought as well as against excessive rainfall."

Most Michigan Soils to Be Tested for Acidity

In accordance with the plans of the Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station, the cultural geology, most of the soils in the state will be tested for acidity during the next few years. Prof. C. H. Sprague, of the department, has developed a process of testing by which a few drops of a special solution on a small quantity of soil placed on a piece of waxed paper will reveal so effectively the acidity of the soil and its lime requirements.

To Prevent Flies From Annoying Farm Animals

To prevent flies annoying cattle spray the animals with a solution of laundry soap in warm water. Four gallons, emerald petroleum one gallon, powdered naphthalin four ounces. Shave soap into water and stir until dissolved. Stir naphthalin into red petroleum kerosene. Mix the two solutions thoroughly and apply as a spray before milking time.

Best Feed for Sows

The feed of the sow during the time she is suckling the young should be such as will stimulate the production of milk. Bran is an excellent feed for this purpose.

White-Top Rosettes

If an examination of a meadow reveals the presence of a large number of white-top rosettes, it will pay to break the land and plant corn or soy beans.

Control Cankermom

Spring cankerworm can be controlled by simply spraying with lead arsenate if used in the usual way. Apply when the first larvae are out.

Call White Diarrhea Most Serious Disease

Ailment of Baby Chickens Cannot Be Cured.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

According to the United States Department of Agriculture, the disease of baby chicks known as bacillary white diarrhea cannot be cured by any known medicinal treatment. It can be stamped out of a flock by other means.

Incubators and brooders which have been infested should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected with a 5 per cent solution of carbolic acid before they are again used. If a number of hens is found to carry the disease, it will not again be disposed of so that it will not again be used for breeding purposes, and released with birds from a healthy flock.

Several state agricultural experiment stations conducting an agglutination test for bacillary white diarrhea. Because of the expense this method of eradication is warranted only in case of very valuable stock.

Poultry With Dairying Is Profitable Practice Where farm dairying is practiced and butter supplied to the local market, the raising of poultry combined with the dairy industry and the two go hand in hand in obtaining profit from the farm.

Where farm dairying is practiced and butter supplied to the local market, the raising of poultry combined with the dairy industry and the two go hand in hand in obtaining profit from the farm. The combined raising of poultry and dairy each month in most cases keeps the farmer supplied with spare change and affords ready money for the running expenses of the house. The poultry business requires a large amount of capital and labor. Land that would otherwise be idle can be very largely be utilized in caring for it. Butter milk or skim milk fed to hens, will pay good profit. There are wastes about the dairy stable that cannot be utilized as effectively in any way as through poultry.

Much of the food for dairying is admirably adapted to feeding poultry. No additional help is required. The stock raised in poultry can be withdrawn in a few days by the sale of the poultry; and the waste products of the dairy are converted into profit and the combined dairying and dairying is the most naturally attractive that can be thought of. The time of year when the returns come in from poultry is when dairymen are generally anxious to have the deficiencies of the dairy made good and there is never a time in the year when poultry cannot be found a fair market—Western Farmer.

Angora Goats Efficient for Killing Out Brush

Angora goats are the most efficient means for clearing out-over land that can be found. They not only keep land undergrowth but kill out briar patches and other large brush. Goats can be fenced with 30-inch wire with 32-inch stanchions. They can be fenced their horns caught in 9-inch setting. I have fenced them with rails built so they cannot jump on the lower rails and was not bothered with them getting out, writes G. H. Foster of Indiana, in Farmers' Guide. Any good sheep fence will turn goats if they have salt, water, weeds, briars and brush in their field.

Spring and summer is the best time for them in the brush. The more goats the quicker the field will be cleared. Twenty-five or thirty will be enough for ten acres and will do a fine job in one season. Goats need very little feed in winter, if you have sheep pens. They should be sheared, though their wool brings 2 or 3 cents less than sheep wool per pound.

Many of Food and Feed Necessities Profitable

A plan that is suitable to many farmers who succeed in raising necessities many of the food and feed necessities of production, and then grow a crop such a plan will enable the farm owner to meet his obligations for both present and future, better than any verifying method. Trophy Case Senior Memorial

A trophy case is being left as a memorial by the class of 1923. The class feels that a trophy case is greatly needed by the school.

The trophies are a greater addition to the school...

The trophies are a greater addition to the school than any other case where they may be viewed. Visitors will be more likely to notice the display and hence the case will prove a good advertisement for the school.

We are of the opinion that there is no better way to bring out school and class spirit...

The appearance of a memorial trophy case is a means of getting every student to work hard for still better results in the future. This competition will naturally develop ambition and give a keener sense of obligation to the school.

The class has worked hard to pay for this memorial. The members of 1923 hope it will be a worthy monument to their love for the school.

Jane Novak Coming

Few, if any novels, have ever been converted to the screen with greater fidelity than "Thelma," Marie Correll's classic romance of the Norwegian life...

As the first play, Jane Novak appears at the Grand Theatre on Sunday and Monday as the heroine of this engrossing story. It will remain for two days.

In the first play, Jane Novak with her delicate blonde beauty and spiritual loveliness, is perhaps the perfect embodiment of Marie Correll's heroine. Jane Novak makes Thelma live upon the screen. Her fine traits are thrown into clear-cut relief. As the central figure on a exquisite romance with a British nobleman, she lends a note of poignant appeal to this striking love story.

Shakespeare's Wisdom. The web of our life is a mingled yarn, good and ill together; our virtues would be proud if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair if they were not cherished by our virtues.

Stop and Take Stock. It is a good plan now and then to take stock of ourselves to make sure we are as reasonable as we expect other folks to be.
