

NURSE FINDS A PERFECT REMEDY

"From my long experience as a nurse I do not hesitate to say that I consider Tablac Nature's most perfect remedy," recently declared Mrs. I. A. Borden, 425 Pontius Ave., Seattle, Wash. Mrs. Borden is a graduate of the National Temperance Hospital, Chicago, and her wide experience in caring for the sick lends particular emphasis to her statement.

"I have used Tablac exclusively for seven years in the treatment of my charity patients," continued Mrs. Borden, "and my experience has been that, for keeping the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels functioning properly and for treating up the system in general, Tablac has no equal. Recently I had a woman patient who could not even keep water on her stomach for fifteen minutes. Six bottles of Tablac freed her up so she could eat absolutely any thing. Another patient, a man, seemed unable to digest any food at all. Three bottles of Tablac put him in such fine shape he went back to work. These two cases are typical. My confidence in Tablac is unlimited."

"Tablac is sold by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

How's Your Blood? Do You Need a Tonic?

Helena, Mont.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal as a blood tonic or as a liver and stomach medicine. I was in very bad physical condition, due to having liver trouble and indigestion. My food did not digest properly, would ferment, and gas would form, giving me great distress. I also suffered with severe bilious headaches and my blood was in an impoverished state. By the use of the Golden Medical Discovery I was relieved of all these conditions which had caused me so much trouble and distress. My liver became active, my food digested well, my blood was good and I felt like a new man."

The Secret Adversary by Agatha Christie

"He said they were very important—that they might be all the difference to the Allies. But if it's all so long ago, and the war's over, what does it matter now?"

"I guess history repeats itself, Jane. First there was a great hue and cry over those papers, then it all died down, and now the whole thing's started all over again for rather different reasons. Then you can hand them over to us right away?"

"No—I hid them. I got uneasy. People seemed to be watching me. It scared me—badly. She put her hand to her forehead. "It's almost the last thing I remember before waking up in the hospital."

"Go on!" said Sir James, in his quiet penetrating tones. "What do you remember?"

"It was at Holyhead. I came that way—I don't remember why. "The doctor's matter. Go on."

"No—I hid them. I got uneasy. People seemed to be watching me. It scared me—badly. She put her hand to her forehead. "It's almost the last thing I remember before waking up in the hospital."

"Go on!" said Sir James, in his quiet penetrating tones. "What do you remember?"

withdrew it. A moment later he ittered a cry.

Across the sheet in neat brown printing ran the words: "With the Compliments of Mr. Brown."

CHAPTER XIII Tommy Makes a Discovery.

For a moment or two they stood staring at each other stupidly, dazed with shock. Somehow, inexplicably, Mr. Brown had forestalled them. Tommy accepted defeat quietly. Not so Julius.

"How in taradiddle did he get ahead of us? That's what beats me!" he ended up.

"I don't see that it matters any way," said Tommy wearily. "He may have found out some time ago, and removed the papers, then—No, by Jove, that won't wash! They'd never been published at once."

"Sure thing they would! No, someone's got ahead of us today by an hour or so. But how they did it gets my goat. It's no good arguing about how it was done. The papers are there. We've failed. There's only one thing for me to do."

"What's that?"

"Get back to London as soon as possible. Mr. Carter must be warned. It's only a matter of hours now before the blow falls. The papers are there. Half an hour after arrival, haggard and pale, Tommy stood before his chief.

"I've come to report, sir. I've failed—failed badly."

"Mr. Carter eyed him sharply. "You mean that the treaty—" that she ought to have had, and I was only a poor devil without a penny to bless himself with. But it wouldn't have been because I didn't care!"

"The young men were on the point of coming to blows, but suddenly with an almost magical abruptness, Julius anger abated."

"All right, son," he said quietly. "I'm going. I don't blame you any for what you've been saying. It's mighty lucky you did say it. I've been the most almighty blithering darned idiot that it's possible to imagine. Get on down."

"Tommy had made an impatient gesture—"I'm going right away now—going to London and North Western railway depot, if you want to know."

"I don't care a d—n where you're going," growled Tommy.

As the door closed behind Julius, he returned to his suitcase.

Where was he going? He hadn't the faintest idea. Beyond a fixed determination to get even with Mr. Brown he had no plans. He reread Sir James' letter, and shook his head. Tuppence must be avenged. Still, it was kind of the old fellow.

"Better answer it, I suppose. He went across to the writing table. With the usual perusal of bedroom stationery, there were innumerable envelopes and no paper. He rang. No one came. Tommy fumed at the delay.

"What's that?"

The Third Alarm

Few motion picture producers have ever gone to such limits as Emory Johnson, in his efforts to make his attempts new from the cinema. "The Third Alarm," technically flawless. The production is on view at the Family Theatre on Sunday and Monday.

For weeks Mr. Johnson lived the life of a fireman in Los Angeles. He slept in the fire house, drove with the men they "rolled" to a blaze, fought with them in the thick of the fire and smoke and learned from first to last the code of the fire-fighter. And the knowledge he gained in this fashion he transferred to the screen in a technically perfect depiction of the lives and perils of the modern fireman.

"It was hard work at times," declared Mr. Johnson in discussing his life as a fireman. "The fireman's lot is no bed of roses. But it is exciting, thrilling, charged with romance."

"One of the first things about the fireman's life with which I was struck was the singularity of their slang. Just as the actor, the ball player or the boxer has his own copyrighted slang so the fireman has a speech all his own. When you hear it for the first time it is very confusing."

"For example, to 'roll' means to go to a fire. When the bell clangs and the engines start for the scene of the blaze the fireman shouts: 'We roll!' When they reach the scene of the fire the commander gives the situation the once over and then commands to 'Stretch in,' which means unroll the hose and stretch it to the point from which the fire may be attacked with effect. But to understand it you must see this great drama. Sunday matinee 2:30 o'clock, prices 10 and 20 cents. Nights 15 and 30 cents.

ARROWS MADE TO "WHISTLE"

Ingenious Device Employed by the Chinese in Their Contest of Military Examinations

In the Chinese collection at the American Museum of Natural History is to be found some unusually fine specimens of whistling arrows. These were sometimes known as "drum arrows" and were employed in China in military examinations. The arrows are made of wood, about three feet in length, have three rows of feather extending on about a foot from the end, and are loaded with either bone or wood in which are apertures, so arranged that as the arrow passes through the air the wind enters these holes and produces a sharp or deep sound, according to the size of the holes.

The drum bow used with these arrows was shot on flat at a target consisting of six concentric feather rings alternating red and white with a red center. The candidate had to shoot his arrow so that it would pierce the target. It was considered it merely touched the target.

Self Wounding Fur to Eskimo. Selling first for compensation to the Eskimo sounds like a paradox, but that is exactly what took place at the opening day of the sale of the Canadian Fur Auction Sales, Limited. The explanation was more simple than it looked. F. H. Pigres, general manager and also president of the sale, said that the Eskimos of Alaska have plenty of beautiful seal, fox and similar furs.

But each Eskimo with any pretensions as a keen desirer above all things to have a wolverine headress for himself and his favored squaw. So the Alaska dealers load up with the choicest skins they can get from the Eskimo and bring them to auction sales in Montreal, where they have them for wolverine skins which they take back to Alaska for the adornment of the Eskimo beards and belts.

The Eskimos are satisfied and the various bartering processes are not done without profit.—Exchange.

VOTES COSTLY TO PROVINCE

For 47 ballots in Moose Factory, Ontario had to pay $400.

It costs the province of Ontario approximately $80 for each vote polled at Moose Factory in the recent election. The ballot boxes had to be taken in and out by airplane. Officials made their visits by the same method, while constituents went in and out on horses. The total cost was about $1400.

Of the forty-seven ballots cast only one was for the Conservative Party. The rest had either voted before, but despite this, and although most of the other voters were Indians, there were no spoiled ballots.

The airplane with the boxes made the round trip in five hours' actual flying time while the motor trucks took five weeks by the river route.

WOULD WED FRENCH GIRLS

Two Young Arkansas Ask Post Office Department How to Do It

The Post Office department received correspondence of increased frequency in Arkansas, where an oil boom recently developed.

Two young men in a small town of the state want to get married and they write as follows:

"We understand there are plenty of French women in France who want homes and husbands. Can you give us any information in regard to the matter how we can get in touch with them? Each one of us wants a wife, about twenty years old."

Good homes and kind treatment are assured.

Set Fire to Home and Try to Escape

FAT MEN HAVE ADVANTAGE

Under Certain Conditions They Are Able to Endure More Than Their Slimmer Contemporaries.

In the diligent research made into questions of temperature, and the effect of heat on the physical condition by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, in cooperation with the United States bureau of mines and the Carnegie Institute of Technology, it was discovered that fat men endure high temperatures and excessive humidity better than thin men, and, further, that the drinking of ice water when overheated does not necessarily have evil effects.

"It has frequently been stated," says the report, "that workers exposed to high temperatures developed severe cramps after drinking ice water. A few of the subjects of these experiments volunteered to drink ice water after about an hour's exposure to high temperatures, and two of them, in one experiment, drank a quart of ice water in less than fifteen minutes without ill effects. Cramps did not develop in any of the subjects at any time."

On entering and leaving the specially heated chamber, the report shows loss of weight varied with the individual, the heavier and stouter men losing more than the light and thin ones. Notwithstanding this, the lighter men, as a rule, could not endure the temperature conditions as long, and complained more of the exhaustion which followed.
